Town, State Plan To Sign Housing Pact On Monday

By NANCY PICK

All systems are go for Winchester's latest housing plan.

The agreement may unlock big bucks for the town, slated for downtown renovations, road repairs, and more low-to-moderate income housing.

Winchester officials are just days away from signing the agreement, following approval by the Selectmen, the Planning Board and the Winchester Housing Authority early this week.

On Monday, head housing honchos for the state and local board chairmen are expected to sign the plan in Boston.

The housing pact may spice up the spring Town Meeting docket, Selectman Wade Welch suggested in a Tuesday interview.

In one possible scenario, Winchester might seize a Water st. house considered an eyesore by many and convert it to subsidized housing, said Welch. By the law of eminent domain, town government has the right to appropriate private property for public use.

Selectmen may also request town money to purchase subsidized housing, if state funds alone would not suffice, said Welch. Ordinarily, the state provides $60,000 to purchase a unit of subsidized housing, a price below the market rate for most Winchester condominiums or duplexes.

Meanwhile, the town would start to develop site criteria, to determine land where new fair housing could potentially be built, Welch said.

Also, the Fair Housing Committee plans to reorganize, filling at least one vacancy and possibly expanding their ranks, according to committee member Alice Warren.

The future of the Ad Hoc Committee on Housing appears equally unclear, said Welch. Two selectmen, two members of the Planning Board and the entire Housing Authority compose that committee, created to help iron out a housing proposal.

If the latest pact is signed, several stalled projects should get off the ground.

Due to town's prior inaction in finalizing a housing pact, the state has frozen a $740,000 grant for Winchester renovations. Once the housing agreement is made official, said State Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh, that money should be released. He said he plans to confirm its release with the state Executive Office of Transportation and Construction.

Low-to-moderate income housing should be on the way as well. Under the agreement, the Winchester Housing Authority would convert three existing town-owned homes to subsidized housing within 30 days of the pact's signing.

The conversion will require the town to transfer jurisdiction from Selectmen to the Housing Authority which would then be charged with finding tenants eligible for subsidized housing.

Acting Town Manager John Ciarcia said one eligible family may soon move into one of the three town-owned houses, located on Reservoir st., Highland ave. and Alben st.

The new housing agreement also requires the town to develop seven units of low-to-moderate income housing in various sites throughout town. Unlike the previous drafts, the latest agreement does not set a time limit on the town's action regarding scattered site housing.

Instead, it gives town government a lot of leeway for public input. The plan says the Selectmen, the Housing Authority and the Planning Board will "agree to take appropriate steps within their jurisdiction and authority, but subject to Town Meeting action or approval when required, to enhance completion of a plan of action . . ." for the seven units of subsidized housing.

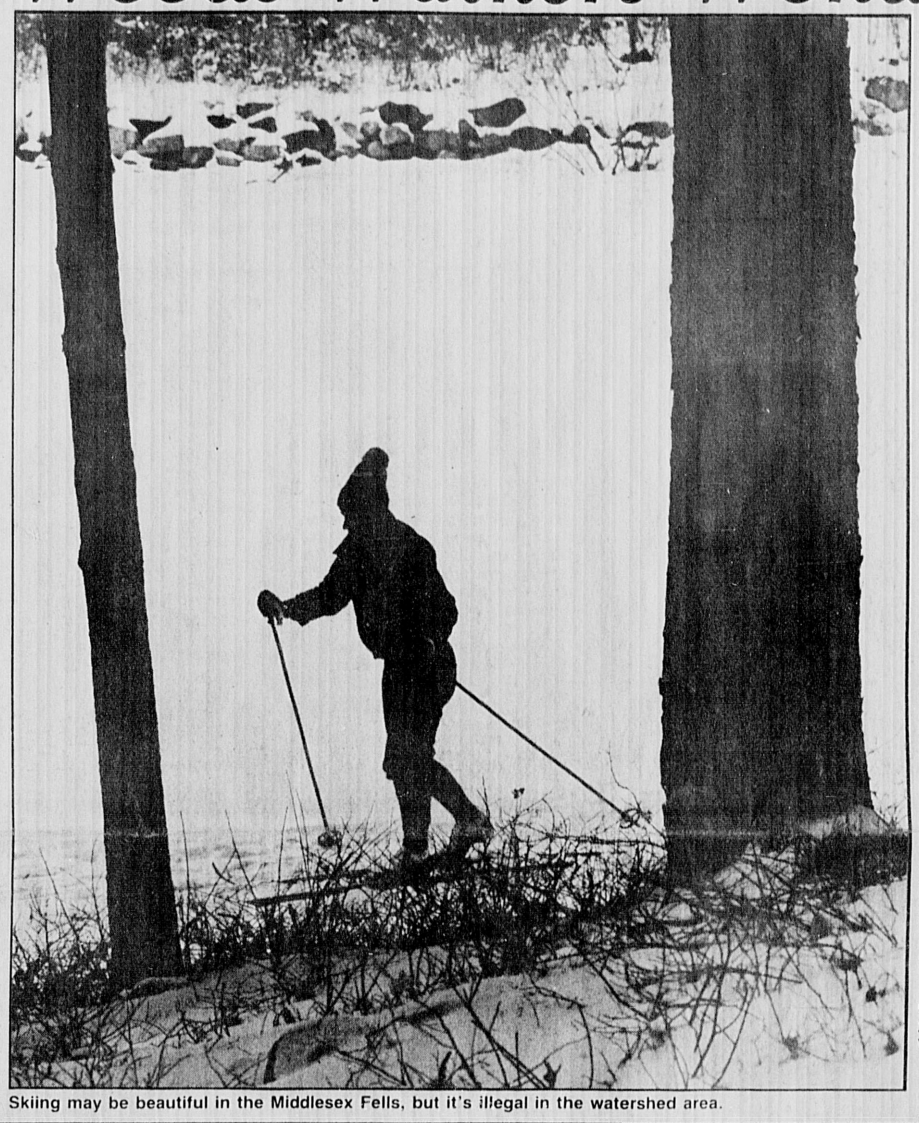

The town already requested funds for either three or four units of "scattered site" housing in a Nov. 15, 1984, application to the state.

Using state money, the town would purchase either three Parkview Condominium apartments on Swanton st. or two duplexes in a proposed development off Cross st.

And, if the state grant comes through, the town will be able to replenish its road construction funds, which fell by $37,000, to pay for ar-

Why Can't We Stroll In Peace?

The town pulled in about $4,000 in fines last year, according to police, from nature lovers who officials say got out of line.

They wandered too close — or even over — the boundary that prohibits public access to the watershed area in the Middlesex Fells.

And whenever unsuspecting violators pass over that line, police say they face fines that begin at $50.

Now, nature and recreation groups want the town to open up the 812 acres that encompass the town's water supply. They say residents have a right to enjoy the natural beauty that has been a local highlight for innumerable years.

At least one town official, however, isn't willing to take the chance that careless visitors might taint the town's water supply.

"I know these people want it to be open for enjoyment — it's a beautiful area," concedes Water Dept. head James Courchaine.

"But when it comes right down to it, I'm the person who'll be responsible when the watershed is ruined. They can say they're willing to patrol the area, but in a court of law, I'm the one who will be held accountable if something happens," said Courchaine.

When an Arlington man wandered into the Winchester watershed area of the Middlesex Fells Reservoir, he was slapped with a hefty fine.

Several weeks later, a six-person jury found him not guilty of trespassing and the charges were dropped.

He was one of many who were arrested by local police during the past year for trespassing into the watershed area. Now, he's rooting for Flounced skirts tease up around the thighs, flaunting derrieres in a Parisian cancan.

Extravaganza.

Cascading canary yellow headdresses, flashing gold hair, sparkling fuchsia ascots, rhinestone-studded flesh-colored gowns.

Fantasy.

That was the atmosphere of the Winton Club cabaret last week, and director Christopher Brown, a Las Vegas veteran, masterminded it all.

"People love to be somebody else," he said, relishing the thought. "This is the whole idea of Halloween and a costume party, a time when you can do something you always wanted to do."

Brown boasted that for one week, any Winton Club woman "can be that glamorous person that's trapped inside her."

On Thursday, cast member Robin Getson of Main st. was practicing the splits backstage during intermission. Dressed in a low-cut red leotard with black lace across the bodice, she made a convincing Las Vegas showgirl.

Yet, Getson, 23, is a salesperson by profession. Evidently at ease with her legs extended crazily on the floor, she claimed that Brown "makes you feel like you're on Broadway. You fantasize for a month that you're somebody else."

Getson is young, but the cast featured performers of all ages. One dancer, Jan Cooper, just chalked up her 31st Winton Club cabaret.

"Whether you're 60 or 20 you have a good time," Getson commented. "There's no generation gap."

Across the hall Anthony Downing of Hingham calmly awaits the second act, dressed in tight black leather pants belted by chains and handcuffs. Though he says he designs surgical instruments for a living, he nevertheless keeps a stage name — Rex Wilde — in reserve for his "lip synch" performances in Boston area clubs.

In the Winton Club show, he played a "dude" in a diner number that flaunted such diverse acts as French waitresses, break dancers, marching executives, and the adaptation of the Michael Jackson hit "Beat It" into a

Armed Robber Steals $400 From Local Gas Station

A teenage gas station employee escaped unharmed after a gunman stole about $400 from the Old Colony station and tried to lock the attendant in a back room, police reported.

No suspects were arrested.

The employee, 17-year-old Matthew E. Layden, was closing the Cambridge st. service station for the night when a paunchy man in his late 20s walked to the door and asked for directions, authorities said.

When Layden opened the door, the man flashed the butt end of a gun and said, "Look, I don't want any hassle, just give me the money," the youth told police.

The gunman pocketed bundles of small bills and rolls of change, reported Layden. He said the gunman then shut him in a back room and took off with the keys to the gas station, according to officers.

Layden told police he waited about 15 minutes for the burglar to leave and then escaped from the room, which did not lock from the inside.

The Old Colony employee said he then called police, who asked neighboring police departments to be on the lookout for a 6-foot man with a medium build in his late 20s, wearing a red and black hunting jacket and white pants.

The gunman had a moustache and beard, with short dark hair in front and long curls in the back. He was also wearing black leather gloves, Layden reported.

• About $2,500 worth of car repair tools were stolen from a Cambridge st. auto repair shop sometime after 7:30 Wednesday evening, police reported.

George Nadeau, the owner of Nadeau's Garage, told police an intruder had cut through a padlock and then deactivated the burglar alarm by tossing it out the window, authorities said.

Police said size 10 footprints and pawprints from a medium-sized dog ringed the building.

• Police found an abandoned car in the Star Market parking lot on Cambridge st. at 4 a.m. Officers said someone had tampered with the ignition of the 1979 Chevrolet sedan.

A computer check revealed the car had been stolen out of Burlington on Jan. 26 and belonged to a Burlington woman.

• A rat about eight inches long was found "rolling around in the driveway" of a Skillings rd. home, police reported. Officers said the rat, which had apparently been poisoned, was promptly put out of its misery by a squad car.

Thursday, Jan. 31

• John F. Tomeo, 37, of Somerville was arrested at 1:30 a.m. on charges of driving under the influence of an intoxicant and leaving the scene of an accident after property damage.

Police said they found a 1977 Cadillac with a smashed windshield and a flat rear tire nearby on South Gateway.

Inside the car, police found a 16-ounce bottle of beer, according to reports.

Tomeo was arrested on South Gateway and taken to the Lynch School police station, where, authorities said, he refused a breathalyzer test.

Wednesday, Jan. 30

•A jet blower heater of unknown value was stolen from the construction area of the new police station, adjacent to the fire station.

• Sterling silver spoons and butter knives were reported stolen from a Johnson rd. home at 5 p.m. The owner valued the silverware at $5,000, police said.

The goods were taken from a bedroom closet where they were hidden under a blanket, the resident told police, while he was away on vacation.

The homeowner said his burglar alarm was broken at the time of the incident.

Police Urge Safety Belts For Children

The week of Feb. 8-15 will be National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week and the Winchester police are asking parents to make a special effort to buckle-up their children.

Automobile accidents are the leading cause of death and injury to children, according to experts. The Child Passenger Safety Law, requiring all children under the age of 5 to be fastened in a properly adjusted car seat or seat belt, went into effect in January of 1982.

According to the National Child Passenger Safety Assn., in 1983 approximately 7,125 children under 19 were killed in automobile accidents. At least 811,700 were injured, nationwide. The Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles reports that in 1983 there were 95 deaths of children under 19 as a result of car crashes.

"Safety seat and seat belt use remains low in Winchester. During the week of Feb. 8-15, our officers will be making a special effort to enforce the child passenger safety law, and to educate the public about the benefits of buckling up," reports Chief John P. McHugh.

For further information about safety belts and child safety seats, contact Safety Officer Kevin Mawn. Mawn can be reached at 721-2025.

The evening's program will be focused on today's women — both those who are housekeepers and those who work outside their homes. Program Director Rosemarie Adamkowski has arranged to have Santo Aurelio give a talk on the subject of "Women And Their Strides". Aurelio is presently working toward his master's degree in History at Harvard University, and is doing much research on the role women are playing in today's active world.

Aurelio will speak after the business meeting at 8:30 p.m. The publis is invited to attend; refreshments will be served.

ABC Sponsors Spring Concert

Wind Ensemble Will Perform

An exciting spring concert is being sponsored by the Winchester Committee for ABC featuring the internationally known Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble on Friday, March 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the High School auditorium.

Following the concert, a reception will be held at the Jenks Senior Center to which ticket-holders are invited.

The concert is a benefit for Winchester's A Better Chance program. Nine young men currently participate in the Winchester program, part of a nationwide effort to provide promising minority students access to quality education at the high school level.

ABC committee chairmen working on plans for the spring concert include Ann Moore, publicity; Kathleen Bodie and Betty Britt, progam; Sandra Rodgers, chairman; and Joyce Cummings and June Kessel, refreshments.

Drug Abuse Programs Expand

A grant to expand drug-abuse prevention programs for area youth has been received by the Mt. Auburn Hospital Alcohol Education and Training Center (AETC), an arm of the hospital's Center for Alcohol Problems. The $37,500 grant, to be used from January through June 1985, was awarded by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, Division of Drug Rehabilitation.

According to Jan Hoyt, AETC director, the funds will be used to expand existing peer leadership programs at high schools in Arlington and Watertown and to develop a similar program at Cambridge Rindge and Latin High School.

The AETC serves 20 communities from its office at 520 Main st., Waltham. The grant specifically designated that the AETC work with school districts in Acton/Boxboro, Arlington, Cambridge, Watertown, Wilmington, and Woburn. However, said Hoyt, similar programs may be established if there is interest from school districts in other towns in the AETC service area including Bedford, Belmont, Burlington, Carlisle, Concord, Lexington, Lincoln, Littleton, Maynard, Somerville, Stow, Waltham, and Winchester.

School Officials To Begin Search For V-O Principal

By ERIC BLOM

School officials are moving forward cautiously in their efforts to find a new principal for the Lincoln School, following the Jan. 14 death of former principal Paula Caffrey.

The job will not be posted until the beginning of February vacation (Feb. 15) to give the community time for a "healing process," according to Supt. of Schools Charles Mitsakos.

"It is important because of the way the vacancy occurred to have some stability" in the school, he said.

For now, Lincoln teacher Robert Lynch will continue as interim principal at the school.

After the position has been posted, applicants will have until April 1 to apply for the job.

A screening committee, to be chosen by Feb. 8, will then begin to consider which educators are most worthy of the superintendent's attention. The committee will be composed of four Lincoln parents, an elementary school principal, two Lincoln teachers, and an adminstrative director.

These men and women are to be chosen from a group of volunteers on the basis of their diverse backgrounds, representing a cross-section of the Lincoln School community, Mitsakos said.

The group will suggest several qualified applicants to the superintendent's office, based on the job qualifications and criteria the committee will determine. These semifinalists will undergo more interviews and scrutiny before Mitsakos makes a final recommendation to the school board.

Under Massachusetts law, the School Committee may accept or reject the recommendation, but members cannot choose a candidate of their own.

The recommendation is expected to be rendered by the end of May.

High-Level Summer Projects Now Open To WHS Students

Francis X. Finigan, Director of Science of the Winchester Public Schools, has announced that he has received word from Washington of research and study programs in science and mathematics for high ability secondary school students available during the summer of 1985.

Finigan pointed out that these programs had formerly been funded by the National Science Foundation as Student Science Training Projects.

The projects conducted at various colleges throughout the country range from environmental field studies in Alaska to the study of stellar evolution and black holes. By giving science-oriented high school students an experience with college level instruction and investigative laboratory work, the programs seek to stimulate their scholarly development and to encourage their interest in the sciences.

The primary means of accomplishing this is by introducing students to the instructional staff, research personnel, and general resources of colleges, universities and research institutions.

Programs are for students of two different age levels and from varying educational backgrounds. Activities have been designed which are appropriate for senior high students both from schools offering excellent opportunities in science education and from schools where the educational opportunities are limited.

Similar but less sophisticated activities are supported for students at the junior high level (grades 7-9).

Admission to these summer projects will be determined by the sponsoring institutions. In general, selection will be based upon scholastic ability, science motivation and the completion of specified courses in science and mathematics.

Finigan urges all qualified Winchester students to contact him at the science office in the high school for further information.

Town Gets New $40,000 Ambulance On The Road

By NANCY PICK

Last Friday, Winchester firefighters had to move fast.

With a new $40,000 ambulance at the station, the men had to transfer life-saving equipment from the old vehicle to the new one. For 15 minutes, they faced a critical situation: the old ambulance had been stripped of essential gear, but the new one was not yet ready to handle a crisis.

It was snowing and the streets were slick. Only minutes before the critical transfer, the old ambulance, answering a call, had rushed out to the scene of a car accident.

But the firefighters decided to go ahead with the equipment switch. They crossed their fingers that no calls would come in, and they worked fast.

One man disconnected a tall green oxygen tank from the old ambulance and hooked it up in the new one. Others pulled ropes, splints, and radio equipment from the eight-year-old vehicle and stowed them in the shiny new machine.

Backboards, bandages and braces were transferred. Firefighters inspected the folding legs of the stretcher and moved it from one vehicle to the other, securing the pillow, towels and blanket strapped around it.

Had there been an emergency, said Fire Chief Robert W. McElhinney, the station would have had two choices: either to send both ambulances out together, or else call on the help of the Woburn station.

But they made it. By 4:10 p.m., less than 15 minutes after they began the transfer, fire Lt. John Nash said the new ambulance was ready to roll.

The tension eased as firefighters realized the critical period was past. During the time the ambulances were inoperational, no emergencies had been called in.

According to Nash, the old ambulance, at eight years old was two years past its life expectancy. "It hasn't been unsafe, but the mechanic spent a lot of time on it every day," said Nash. That ambulance was traded in as part of the purchase deal for the new one.

The $40,000 needed for the new machine was allocated at Town Meeting last spring.

Since 1977, the Fire Dept. has taken charge of the town's ambulance service, which had been the responsibility of the Police Dept.

Ultimately, the firefighters may in turn relinquish that responsibility to a private firm. The town is conducting a study to determine whether a private ambulance firm could deliver cheaper service.

Even if the town did make the switch, the $40,000 of Winchester money wouldn't go down the drain, Chief McElhinney said. He said the town could probably sell the new ambulance to a private company.

The new ambulance, still waiting for its lettering and gold leaf, has several advantages over the old one, Nash explained. For instance, he said, it has an improved electrical system, to avoid a problem that plagued the old machine.

"We had a lot of trouble keeping the batteries charged on the other one," said the lieutenant.

The shiny new vehicle also has an entirely new hospital communications system, Nash pointed out, replacing one that was 15 years old.

In general, though, what separates the new machine from the old is speed. It performs all its functions better and faster than the old ambulance did, said Nash.

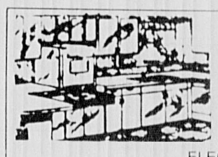

"It's got all the modern equipment we'll need for the next four or five years," affirmed McElhinney.

According to Nash, however, it's not the equipment that counts, it's the rescuers themselves who save lives. "It's like a carpenter's tool box," he said, looking over the ambulance's medical supplies. "Without the carpenter it doesn't do very much."

Local Cub Scout Pack Runs Mini-Car Derby

Homemade Racers Are Super-Snazzy

On Jan. 28, Cub Pack 525 held their annual Pinewood Derby. These little cars, 7 inches long and weighing no more than 5 ounces generated as much excitement as any 'Indy 500' field.

First came the weigh-in, which was carefully supervised by Phyllis Gleason and her postal scale.

All the cars checked in at legal racing weight, and the race was on. Cub Master Paul Gleason announced the contenders in each three car heats and carefully tallied the point totals.

Each den raced for first, second, and third place medals, with the winner in each den going on to the pack championship.

Charlie Chute of Den four, a student at Bartlett School, made it a clean sweep and went home with the first place trophy.

Tim Lynch of Ambrose School walked away with the craftsmanship trophy awarded to his star studded, metal flake sports coupe. (His secret finish was glitter nail polish).

The variety and creativity of the cars and sportsmanship of the boys made this year's Pinewood Derby a truly memorable one.

Cub pack 525 serves Vinson-Owen, Ambrose, and Bartlett schools and holds a monthly pack meeting in the Winchester High cafeteria. The boys meet in their dens during the other three weeks of each month.

Chris Olmquist wins his heat in the Pinewood Derby.

Coop Nursery School Plans Open House

The Winchester Cooperative Nursery School will hold its annual Open House on Tuesday, Feb. 12, at 8 p.m. in the Unitarian Church, 478 Main st.

Registration for the 1985-86 school year will begin at the open house and continue through March 7.

Since 1968, the non-sectarian school has developed a range of preschool programs in which parents and children share cooperative learning experiences. Parents assist the teacher on a rotating basis and are responsible for administering and maintaining the school. This, combined with the availability of scholarships, helps curb tuition costs.

During the 1985-86 school year, the school will offer a range of programs: two-morning (Tuesday-Thursday) and three-morning (Monday-Wednesday-Friday) classes for 3- and four-year-olds taught by Jean Mortensen, director of the school; a five morning pre-kindergarten class (with full and limited parent help options) taught by Maureen McWilliams; and a four afternoon pre-kindergarten class taught by Judy Andriesse.

Children also may participate in an afternoon "extended day' program from 11:45 until 2:45 three days a week. No parent help is necessary, and a child may attend for one to three days on a semester enrollment basis.

The open house provides an opportunity for interested parents to see the facilities, meet and talk with teachers and parents of children currently enrolled. For additional information, call the school at 729-2003, Sheila Marian (Highland ave.) or Cheryl Walker (Lincoln st.). The snow date is Feb. 13.

Student Financial Aid Workshop Will Be Saturday

Cong. Ed Markey and his Boston staff are putting the final touches on Markey's fifth annual student Financial Aid Workshop, to be held Saturday, Feb. 9, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Malden High School.

In the past four years, hundreds of students from the 7th District and their parents have attended the annual financial aid workshop. They have received information of financial aid opportunities from federal and state education officials, as well as from representatives of area banks, colleges and universities.

This year, Markey hopes to capitalize on the four years of experience in these workshops and produce the most compelete forum possible.

Those who attend this year's workshop will be able to hear presentations from financial aid experts. They will also be able to meet individually with financial aid officers, college and university officials, representatives of banks and officials from vocational schools to ask any questions they may have in those areas.

In addition, representatives of the U.S. service academies and experts on ROTC and other armed forces educational programs will be in attendance.

For information on the Feb. 9 workshop at Malden High School, contact Markey's Boston office at 233-2781.

Sen. Kraus Requests Feedback On Education

Sen. Richard A. Kraus, newly appointed Senate vice chair of the Joint Legislative Committee on Education, is seeking advice as to what citizens feel should best be done to improve public education in the commonwealth.

Kraus says he has the strong sense that the educational package as passed by the Massachusetts House of Representatives is not likely to pass the Senate. If modifications are to be made, he wants to make certain that they are the very best that can be.

Anyone who has suggestions who has not written Sen. Kraus concerning these issues in the past, is invited to send at least an outline of the suggestions for immediate review. The address is the State House, Room 511, Boston, 02133.

On Monday, Feb. 11, at 8 p.m. in the Lecture Hall of the Winchester School Administration Center, 154 Horn Pond Brook rd. in Winchester Sen. Kraus will hold a public meeting to report on the advice he has received and to discuss the areas of conflict as well as the important areas which may remain unaddressed. At that time he will seek public response on those points.

Rep. Nicholas Paleologos of Woburn, newly appointed House Chairman of the Joint Committee on Education, has been invited to attend. He, too, will be interested in input and in the exchange of ideas that evening.

Rep. Saltmarsh Comments On Committee Roles

"Republicans may be the minority party in the Massachusetts House, but in terms of coninuity we provide a major impact," said Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh who will remain the ranking member of the Committee on Transportation for the 1985-1986 legislative session.

As a member of the committee since his first year in the House, Saltmarsh feels that the committee members with whom he has had the pleasure of working for the past 10 years have done a tremendous job overseeing the Commonwealth's multi-faceted transportation system.

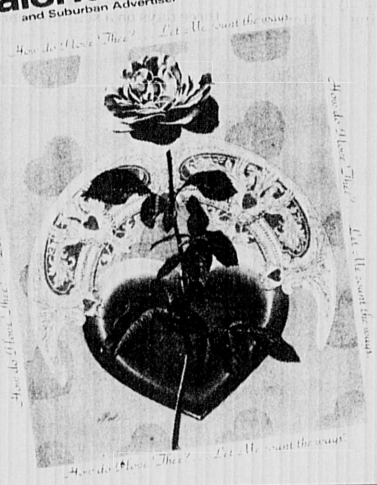

"Over the years you develop a certain expertise which is invaluable when faced with the myriad of problems inherent in any public transportation system. It helps on the local level as well," he said. "For example, if I had been less familiar with the process and the principals involved, the abandonment of the Woburn Loop and subsequent purchase of hte land by the town would probably still be in limbo."

Saltmarsh said he is looking forward to the 1985 session and expects the committee to present the biannual Transportation Bond Issue which historically funds many local projects, such as the additional Chapter 90 grants for read resurfacing the last two years.

Saltmarsh will continue to serve on the Rules Committee. He said he feels that the new Rules which he supported, and which will govern the 85-86 session in the House, will provide more input by rank and file members and result in a more productive and efficient House.

"I think everyone is relieved that the Speaker's fight is over, new rules have been implemented, and we can now concentrate on more important issues — like reducing the tax burden of our constituents," concluded Saltmarsh.

An Outstanding Effort

Sachems Lose A Squeaker

The Sachem hockey team is learning a tough lesson these days: despite a promising start to the season, they still have a few kinks to work out.

The tough news was underlined by Saturday's 2-1 loss to Stoneham, a team Winchester had thrashed by an 8-4 margin earlier in the year. In that contest, Stoneham goalie David Sorabell· was shocked for three goals in less than two minutes of play.

Saturday night, he allowed one goal, the average scoring for Winchester in the team's last three outings.

The different outcomes of the two contests against Stoneham mirrors the entire season for the Sachems. The first half of the year produced a 5-4 (6-4 overall) record, but the local icemen have yet to win a game in the second half, producing a 0-3-2 record.

Their last victory was eight games ago, a 5-3 defeat of Burlington, and their overall record stands at 6-7-2.

"Frustration is starting to set in," said coach Mike Whyte. "We haven't won a game in a while, and its beginning to have an effect on us. We're playing all right, but we're just not finishing off. We have to get a little tougher around the goal [offensively]."

Stoneham scored the first goal in Saturday night's game at 11:27 in the second period. A Spartan freshman picked up a loose pass at the blue line and drilled a slap shot passed Sachem goalie James Chute.

A shot by James Campo that would have tied the score hit the crossbar.

Stoneham soon took advantage of the situation and upped their lead to 2-0. Randy DeMarco scored this goal on a breakaway with 5:31 left in the third period.

Scott Binding of Winchester scored on a power play, after taking a pass from Robert Collins, but they would get no closer than the 2-1 final score.

Dark Week It Was

Lexington Roars Back To Defeat Girls 48-36

With a 48-36 lead and only 2:30 left in last Friday's game against Lexington, Winchester High School's girls' basketball team seemed assured of a victory.

However, after the dust from those two and a half minutes cleared, Winchester found they had to accept a 52-51 defeat.

"We won a couple of games that way," said Winchester coach Joseph DiSarcina, "so I guess we were due for a bad game in the pressure moments. Hopefully, we got it out of our system. We didn't make the foul shots down the end."

Winchester's troubles began when Jessica Skolnikoff ([18 points) and Robin Gross (16 points) of Lexington scored 11 unanswered points to whittle the score down to 48-47.

The Minutemaids took the lead 49-48 on two free throws by Krista Concannon (8 points) with 40 seconds left in the game.

Barbara Delaney (24 points) of Winchester sunk a free throw to tie the score and was fouled at the other end while retrieving a rebound. Unfortunately, she bounced the ball and the officials called her for a technical foul.

Because of this, the two free throws she made were not enough to guarantee the Sachemettes victory.

Skolnikoff hit the technical foul shot, and Lexington retained the ball with 18 seconds left. The score stood at 51-50.

Ellen Clavin stole the inbounds pass, but failed to make a layup. Concannon was then fouled and made both free throws.

With eight seconds left, Delaney made a final attempt at victory, sinking a driving, twisting layup. However, she was called for traveling, and the points were erased.

Sachem Boys Lose To Top Lexington Quintet

Some days are so frustrating that it seems the harder you work, the further behind you become.

This was the case last Friday when the Winchester High School basketball team lost to Lexington by 30 points, despite the fact that the game was more of a contest than their Dec. 21 loss by 18 points.

"In that first game, they [Lexington] blew us out early in our own gym," Smith said, after Friday's 80-50 defeat. "This game wasn't that kind of a blowout. Lexington inched it up gradually."

"I was pleased," he added, "because we played the first quarter right with them. We played hard. They're just better than us."

Lexington holds an 11-1 record in divisional play, 11-2 overall, while Winchester is 8-4 in the league [9-5 overall].

In spite of the Minutemen's superior standing, the Sachems scored first on a jumper by Alan Adler and held onto the lead until late in the first quarter when Trevor Middleton (20 points) put Lexington ahead 13-12.

This was a much more promising start for Winchester than in the pre-Christmas contest when Lexington exploded for a 22-2 lead, rendering the rest of the game meaningless.

However, the Sachems were unable to capitalize on this promising start because of offensive difficulties and their inability to contain Middleton and Sean Cummings (20 points).

"Lexington is such a good team," Smith said, "that we can't do a lot of things against them. You can't play any tricks. They have an aggressive man-to-man, a great zone, and you can't press them."

A team strong in all these areas is very difficult to coach against. Superior skills make practice-honed execution impossible.

The score at the half favored Lexington 40-24.

Despite the situation, Winchester made a charge in the beginning of the second half. David DellaGrotte (11 points) started the run with a bucket from the corner.

After a basket by James Arthur of Lexington, Peter Mulvaney, who had a season high 14 points, scored from underneath the hoop and DellaGrotte made a layup. The score stood at 42-30, and Lexington coach Robert Farias was forced to call a timeout.

The ploy apparently stopped the Sachems' momentum. The Minutemen scored seven quick points, taking a 49-30 lead with 3:52 left in the quarter.

"Overall, I'm happy with the kids," Smith said. "We're not going to let this loss hurt us. We'll be ready for the final three weeks."

Achievers Are The Happiest

By STEVE NORTON

It is one of the unique ironies of this strange life that those among us who work the hardest — who bear unbearable amounts of pain, who subject themselves to the strictest discipline, who sacrifice certain pleasurable things in order to achieve a goal — are the happiest.

The dull ache at the back of Weylman's calf had turned into a throbbing pain, throwing off her concentration as she circled the track. The pain, like hundreds of needles jabbing her muscle, reminded her of how tired she really was.

In any other sport, for any other athlete, quitting would be the appropriate thing to do. Weylman, however, will not relinquish her effort.

For deep inside this young woman burns a flame of intense competitive desire, a flame that symbolizes a passionate internal struggle to discover how well-tempered is the gentle fiber of her flesh, and how strong the tinsel thread of her will.

The race, like all the ones before, is not run well, because to run well means to run cautiously, and Weylman always lays it on the line right from the very start.

She runs in front of the wind of fear, and then the darkness, in the form of pain and fatigue, sets in. The agony reaches deeper and deeper, to the point where the pain becomes nonexistent: the other track runners and the surroundings become more and more vague.

The worst temptation is to quit, to be released from this commitment.

No one will know, because quitting does not mean stopping. It means giving just a little less of yourself, slowing the pace to where breathing is without pain and the feeling comes back to the legs. For Weylman, quitting — giving less of herself — is the last thing on her mind.

The effort put out by this young

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

TO THE RUNNER'S EYE:

We just began running at night and would appreciate any suggestions or comments on this.

B. Iverson
Reading

Dear B. Iverson

Most of us have no alternative, especially in the winter, than to train at night. Often, I have found night running the perfect way to end a day. It is important that all nocturnal runners use some caution: 1) Always wear a reflective vest with light colored clothes. 2) Be weary of pot-holes, rocks, and other obstacles. 3) Never run in dark or dimly lit areas. 4) If possible let someone know your route and approximate time you will return.

Finally, good luck in running at night. By utilizing these few but important precautions, you have discovered a new sleeping aid to cure insomnia---RUNNING.

Dear Mr. Norton:

"What are 'intervals" and how can they help me run faster?

Otis V. Chandler
Winchester

Dear Mr. Chandler:

Intervals are short distances run fast and frequently during a workout. An interval workout may consist of eight to ten fast 440's (one lap around the track) with a recovery walk or jog after each interval.

Aside from helping build speed, interval running develops an aerobic capacity. Interval running is a major part of my program at Winchester High School. I use a short and long interval session twice a week with easy runs in between.

For example, the Winchester Track team (boys and girls) will, on Tuesday, do three to four fast miles with a half mile rest in between each mile. On Thursday, we use a short interval session of 10 to 12 600 yards done fast around the track with a 300-yard rest.

When the track meet comes on Saturday, the athletes have developed the ability, through conditioning, to handle the stress of oxygen debt, fatigue and lactic acid. Finally intervals build character.

In closing I would like to leave you a few thoughts on running given to me by a Winchester runner:

Your day is filled with worry, you do to get things done, and everythings a hurry your work, it holds no fun! But then you grab your sneakers and head out for the road. Your walkman and its speakers, they play the "secret code". The code that opens portholes and lets your troubles drop. The code that helps you sort goals and makes the tension stop. With every step, you begin to flow and stir and riding with your grunts and groans illusions of grandeur!! Your heart goes pitter-patter as you dream up all this jive but problems just don't matter when you're the fastest man alive. The problems far too much discussed by those without the drive are quickly left back in the dust by the fastest man alive!!!

woman has nothing to do with winning and losing. Winning and losing is associated with team sports. For Weylman is not in a game, she is in a contest.

"Contest" is a word whose Latin root means to "testify" or to "witness". The other young women in this track meet are witnesses to what she is doing. So, therefore, anything less than all she can give is not enough. In a track meet, the athlete is under oath, testifying as to who he or she is.

For Weylman, what is necessary becomes possible, however absurd the endeavor may be.

This struggle that demands so much of her can best be described in the words of Dr. George Sheehan: "... and I know I am made for more. And by becoming more, I am challenged to choose suffering, to endure pain, to bear hardships.... At first, the gentle swell carries me... but gradually the effort demands more and more.

"I have reached the end of my physiology," Sheehan said. "The end of what is possible. And now it is beyond what I can stand. The temptation is to say 'enough,' this much is enough.

But I will not give in," Sheehan continued. "I am fighting the limitations God gave me. Fighting the pain, the unfairness, and all the evil in me and the world. And I will not give in, I will conquer this; and I will conquer it alone!"

These are the days of Weylman's youth, when she runs and competes without weariness. These are golden, buoyant days: she is running because she loves it. Her life is fuller because of this competition, and her memories will be far richer.

Weylman has found what Sir Roger Bannister (the first four-minute-miler) discovered, and told about in his book, "The First Four Minutes"

"In this supreme moment, I leapt in sheer joy," Bannister wrote." I was startled and frightened by the tremendous excitement that so few steps could create...The earth seemed almost to move with me. I was running now, and fresh rhythm entered my body. No longer conscious of my movement, I discovered a new unity with nature. I had found a new source of power and beauty, a source I never dreamed existed."

This athelete, as with all track athletes at Winchester High School, has scaled successfully the Mt. Everest of her life, and has planted a flag on top that simply states, "I did my best!"

And what more can we expect as coaches, parents, and teachers?

(Steve Norton is varsity track coach at Winchester High School.)

A Student's Tribute To Former V-O Principal

Dr. Clare M. Corcoran, principal of the Vinson-Owen School, retired from the principalship as of Friday, Feb. 1. As a special tribute to her, Jonathan Simeone, a fourth grade student at the school who is visually impaired, wrote the following poem. It was copied in calligraphy and presented to her.)

When I was just a little tyke
Dear Dr. Corcoran, you entered my life
Stand up and read and don't you be shy
These were your words as I tried not to cry
I then learned my math and you were so proud
I was just happy to be one of the crowd.

The progress I've made you can readily see
Is due to the patience that you had with me
You taught me well what it means to share
I also know how much you care.

Down to your office with fear in my soul
The "Black Book" you held kept me in control
Flutie's a cutie and B.C. is best
This answer gets you an "A" on your test
These have been years of laughter and tears
Times I will cherish the rest of my years.

You'll always be special to a little blonde lad
Who's mostly happy but sometimes sad
When he thinks of goodbye to his friend tried and true
Dear Dr. Corcoran I'll never forget you.

The Painful Truth

By TERRY MAROTTA

It's funny how they are in hospitals these days; they don't let you be sick anymore.

I had a baby a few months ago, and I was back on the street in 48 hours. In my mother's day, they let you hang around for a good two weeks with a baby, collecting floral arrangements and tying ribbons in your hair and listening to people say, "just rest now, dear."

It's not like that now, boy. These days it's in and out. One minute your baby is treading water inside you and the next he's standing on the corner waiting for the T like everyone else.

The same goes for certain surgical procedures. I went into the hospital for an operation last week. If my cat had had the same one, the vet would have kept her overnight. We humans aren't that lucky. I had my operation, with heavy-duty 'night-'night anesthesia and tubes down the throat, with incisions and some fancy embroidery, all in a bright and shiny little department called Day Surgery. In By 10 Out By 2.

You take a number in Day Surgery, just like at the bakery. And then you wait your turn. Twinkly turbaned nurses circulate, swinging IV bottles like altar boys swing their incense. They pat your arm and ask you chatty little questions about your health history. This part is actually kind of fun.

It's when you wake up afterward that the trouble starts.

'I was in the recovery room, lying like a tuna under yards of cotton blanket. Other tunas lay to the left and the right of me...'

I found myself struggling to climb out of the black hole of anesthesia, while a gang of strangers slapped my wrists and squeezed my fingers.

I was in the recovery room, lying like a tuna under yards of cotton blanket.

Other tunas lay to the left and the right of me.

We moaned.

"Wake up!, wake up!" our nurses told us, pummeling our insensate bodies. "It's fun out here!" their voices seemed to say. We didn't want to wake up. We had staples in our skin, didn't they know that? Gummed reinforcements, Scotch tape — that was all that held us shut. I wanted to stay forever beneath the surface of consciousness. I was happy to sleep with the fishes.

But up they got me. They shoveled me into a wheelchair and propelled me, dreaming, to a different room. They dumped me in a Barcalounger, the way a gardener dumps the compost from his wheelbarrow, and went away.

When I finally focused, I saw that mine was not the only Barcalounger; it was merely one of six. Six of us victims sat in them, all lined up like kids at a party ready to watch the clown act.

They gave us graham crackers and something to drink. They tried to engage us in conversation.

I, personally, was a less than congenial participant, I slumped and fainted in my chair.

They fluffed me up and offered me Coke. I declined it, using hand signals.

A bit later, they came back and stood me up. The graham crackers came too.

They put me back down; I resumed my faint.

A shot was administered to fortify me and lend courage to my stomach. A large nurse wearing what seemed to be a pirate's scarf smiled broadly, gold teeth glinting, and told me to buck up. I smiled back and slid to the floor.

In the end, the nurses despaired of curing me before pickup time. They got out the shovels again and pulled me to my feet. Practiced hands propping me by the armpits walked me to the lockers and buttoned me into my clothes. My spouse arrived with the claim check.

His face wore that expression, both sheepish and reluctant, that people have at the dry cleaner's when a shameful piece of clothing comes forth with a note pinned to the plastic reading, "Sorry, We Did Our Best." He swallowed hard and acknowledged me as his.

I rode home in the car with eyes squeezed shut against the blur and jostle of Boston traffic. We arrived at last and climbed out. I threw up in the bushes, startling the paperboy.

And now, a week later, I'm just recovered enough to tell the story.

There were never any floral arrangements. Nobody said to just rest, dear. It isn't like it used to be.

My neighbor's cat arrived home a few minutes ago. She had some minor surgery the day before yesterday. She looks well; she looks rested. The paperboy is glad to see her. She yawns a hello to him and turning, ties a ribbon in her hair.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Abstract Painter Defends His Art

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

As an artist and abstract painter, I couldn't help but notice Mary Jacobs' comments on modern art on The Winchester Stars page of Jan. 24.

She states that she hates modern art, be it Picasso, cubism and abstract art, because it isn't pleasant. She's also irritated at museum people because they talk about modern art too much.

I find these comments and a subsequent one to be amateurish, lacking knowledge and sensitivity. It seems as though Mary is attacking what others may do in order to promote her own particular style.

Art, abstract or realism at its best, is a sincere attempt to express one's life in a creative way. A celebration of the ability to perceive, to feel and to accept.

I defend her right to hate an art movement, but at the same time an artist with her reputation should have a greater understanding of the creative process and spirit.

An artist at heart, which is the way Mary Jacobs is headlined on page one, I find to be a rather distorted view of reality.

Sincerely,
Steven Shade

Borggaard Backs Tenant's Effort To Keep Cat

Editor of the Star:

Some good people have expressed the opinion that I appear too frequently in the "Letters" columns of our local papers. Having in mind the probability that they may be right, I feel nevertheless that I must write at least this one more letter.

I strongly endorse and support Marion Hatch's eloquent, heartfelt plea that she be allowed to retain the companionship of her long-time pet and sole companion, "Maggie" her ancient and attenuated cat.

It seems that our local Housing Authority denies its elderly-and often long-tenants the privilege of having pets--an exception being made for canaries and goldfish.

Well, people are different. Some, no doubt, grow fond of canaries. Others may develop a liking for goldfish. Good luck to them, I say! But how about the far greater number who grow fond of cats? Cats have been members of human households since prehistoric times. They are warm, intelligent, affectionate, charismatic little creatures and have made ideal houshold pets and companions ever since man has lived in houses.

They do not bark at night, they do not attack strangers who might come to the door, they do not harbor rabies, they do not litter or destroy. For the most part, they are as harmless and innocuous as either canaries, or goldfish.

If Ms. Hatch is forced to deprive her old cat of its home in order to preserve a home for herself, this, unfortunately, will be tantamount to a death sentence for the cat. (People readily adopt little kittens, but they rarely adopt homeless cats, especially old cats.)

Furthermore, I support Marion's plea not only to save the life of her cat, but for the sake of Marion's own mental health and physical well being as well. She admits that she is alone in the world except for the cat, to which, accordingly, she has become deeply attached.

Why, then, make her suffer the trauma of knowing the inevitable fate of her beloved cat, plus the increasingly poignant knowledge that after it is gone, she will be lonelier by far, than ever!

Old age is far from being the happiest, most carefree time of life. For some it can be a time of great pain and loneliness. Please let us not make it any more painful, lonely, and foreboding than it has to be.

I ask, is this minor regulation sacred? -in the nature of Holy Writ? -or can it be modified and overlooked a little bit? -especially in view of the growing realization that the mental health and physical well being of many older people is often greatly benefited and enhanced by their close association with personal pets.

I say, let's bend the regulation a little bit in this case, and let Marion keep her pet. And if this be a sin, let him who is without sin, heave the first brickbat!

Giving Ourselves A Gold Star

Seven awards were given to The Winchester Star at the recent annual meeting of the New England Press Assn.

In competition with weekly papers across New England The Star received first place in illustration for a drawing which Century Newspapers artist Barbara Guiney did last spring to illustrate the anxiety of students waiting for college acceptances.

Other awards were: second place to Liz Willen for best editorial and honorable mention to Dave Leeco in the same category; second place for makeup and typography; and third place awards for special section, education reporting and sports section.

Star sister papers were also cited. The Arlington Advocate received three awards and The Belmont Citizen got two. Publisher C. Peter Jorgensen addressed the awards banquet as New England director on the board of the National Newspaper Assn.

Reader Also Questions Program

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I think it is a shame that the point of the Johnian's letter has been lost somewhere in the effort to defend Islam. I, too, take issue with the fact that Jesus was all but omitted from the Christmas program, and in His place was put prophet Mohammed.

During this Christmas I saw a sign that read, "Jesus is the reason for the season," If Mr. Asmal and his family want to celebrate and worship Mohammed, that is their choice, but the Christmas Season is the celebration of the birth of Jesus Christ, the Saviour of all humanity. It is a tragedy that He was reduced to little more than just a "nice guy"!

I do not congratulate the planning board of Winchester's Lincoln School at all. This is just another example of the apathy that allowed removal of prayer from our nation's public schools and the legalization of abortion; neither of which happened overnight.

Our Kids Need More From Us, Reader Says

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The article in last week's Star regarding drugs and alcohol abuse entitled: How are Parents, Schools Effective? by Eric Blom moved me very deeply, not only as a parent and concerned citizen of this town, but as a human being.

We have well-trained psychologists, excellent drug and alcohol education programs, peer counseling, parental workshops, and other resources involving some very committed people; and yet the problem is increasing. When such a high percentage of a recent senior class admits to drinking and using drugs, we had better believe we have a problem!

It's very normal to want to think it happens in other families to other peoples kids; but if we look at the youth of Winchester as belonging to all of us whether or not they reside in our homes, it will be our problem, and we will become genuinely concerned enough to do something.

Mention was made in the article of parents needing support from the town's clergy. I'd like to take that one step further and ask that each of us show the clergy that we are willing to do our part to help also.

My personal suggestion is that our places of worship be open for a period of several hours on a designated Saturday so that anyone, young or old who so chooses, can go in and pray — pray for our town and its leadership, our schools, churches, homes and especially our dear young people.

It will cost us nothing but a few minutes or longer of our time; and I believe it can and will make a difference. Let's try it. Our youth are certainly worth it.

Sincerely,
Ruth C. Mitchell

Bringing Back Good Old Memories

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Ray Hayward's letter, which appeared recently in The Winchester Star, brought back many rich memories.

As a graduate of Winchester High School in the Class of 1934, I was privileged to know both Ray Hayward and Wendell Mansfield, and both of these men had a profound influence on my development as a teenager.

I shall always be grateful that my life was touched by both of these outstanding personalities, and that I have had a life-long friendship with both of them.

My memories of Winchester in the 1920's and 1930's have never dimmed, and I reflect back to those days with a great deal of affection and pride.

Winchester has always been something special to me, not only because of the beauty of the town, important as that is, but because of the many wonderful people like Wendell and Ray, just to mention two of them.

Sincerely yours,
George T. Davidson, Jr.

BEACON HILL

This week's report records local representatives' votes on more roll calls on proposed rules changes in the House. The Senate has already completed action on both Senate rules and joint House-Senate rules. The House has completed action on House rules only and is expected to take up proposed joint rules shortly.

VETO SESSION (H 1000) — House 112-35 rejected an amendment allowing 25 percent, instead of 40 percent of the House members to force the House back into session to vote on a gubernatorial veto.

Amendment supporters said the 25 percent requirement is sufficient to require action on a bill the House has already passed.

Opponents said 25 percent is too low and gives a small minority too much power.

A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

STEERING COMMITTEE (H 1000) — House 115-30 rejected a lengthy amendment including provisions for a 15 member majority party Steering and Policy Committee which, along with any majority member, could nominate candidates for committee chairs to be elected by the majority party.

Amendment supporters argued this would reduce the power of the Speaker and make the system more open.

Opponents said nominations by the Speaker and written ballot ratification by majority party members is a better system and said the amendment would create a confusing and unfair popularity contest. A "Yea" vote is for the amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Gatto Announces Board Candidacy

(The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to the elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages).

M. Catherine Gatto, 5 Winthrop st., has announced her candidacy for one of the two seats on the Winchester School Committee.

"I believe in the American public school system. The theory of equal opportunity through equal access to learning is one foundation of our democratic process. Winchester has a rich tradition of educational excellence, and the maintenance of this tradition is still possible for our town.'

"The constraints of demographics and budget must not eliminate the possibility of excellence. Decreasing school population and Proposition 2½ are realities, but they must be faced with a perspective of offering the best education possible for our children."

"I made the conscious choice eight years ago to send my children to public schools. As parents, we too often expect the schools to be responsible for the intellectual, emotional, social, moral, and physical growth for our young people, but I realized immediately that my children would not achieve this growth without continued parental input.

"This realization and my natural inclination to serve led to my personal commitment to Winchester schools and to the conclusion that the schools alone cannot do the job of education. We must develop a coalition of teachers, parents, administrators, and elected officials to achieve the optimal educational benefits for our children."

For six years, Gatto has put these ideas into action. She has worked extensively at the individual school level and expanded her leadership to the system as a whole. Currently, Gatto serves as president of the Community School Assn. (CSA). Under her leadership CSA has initiated a three-part program of community relations to promote communication:

- Between schools — The parents' groups of the various schools have met to share ideas and concerns.
- Between the schools and the community — Gatto helped in the creation of the Education Page in The Winchester Star which highlights school news and answers questions for the community.
- Between home and school — the concept of a weekly newsletter was expanded to every school. These bulletins were important vehicles for disseminating information to the community and creating a positive feeling about the school system.

Gatto stated her goal for the Community School Association, "We believe the purpose of CSA is to create a forum among administrators, teachers, and parents at a community-wide level, to exchange concerns, create dialogues, and brainstorm solutions."

In addition to the CSA presidency, Gatto has provided extensive service to the Lincoln School Parents Association. She served as president in 1980-81, directed publicity, organized fund-raising, and is currently a member of the Lincoln School Study Committee.

Gatto has also been a member of the following townwide committee:

- Winchester Interagency Council
- Committee to review and revise social studies curriculum
- Search Committee for McCall Junior High principal
- Superintendent's School Housing Committee
- Committee to improve the transition process from elementary to junior high school

She has also participated in a vast array of child-related activities. She has served as a Girl Scout and Cub Scout leader, Sunday school teacher, room mother, library volunteer, as well as a soccer and softball coach.

Gatto is a graduate of Needham High School, and Chamberlain School of Retailing. She was a member of the 1967 Executive Training Program at

Cathy Gatto

Filene's and went on to work as a market researcher and buyer. After a successful business career, she worked as the financial manager of the Bates College Theatre and then as a resident director/counselor of a large co-educational dormitory at Tufts University with primary responsibility for fiscal accountability, academic and personal counselling.

Gatto will have a child at each level in the Winchester School system, high school, junior high, and elementary. As she said, "I have worked extensively at every level of the school system and have attended School Committee meetings consistently for six years. Children have always come first with me, and I am prepared, If elected, to make the kind of hard choices which will benefit students, yet consider the interests of teachers, parents, and taxpayers. Throughout the weeks before the March 26 election, I will be meeting many people and exchanging ideas on the key issues which face our schools."

Gatto concluded, "School Committee is the next step in my full-time commitment to Winchester education. My candidacy establishes a coalition uniting the town by bridging the gaps of geography, age, wealth, and gender. I urge all Winchester residents who share my concern for the quality of our children's education to join with me."

Looney Announces For School Committee

(The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to the elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

John F. Looney Jr. has announced his candidacy for the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational School Committee.

Looney has been active in town affairs for many years. He is a Town Meeting Member from Precinct 4 and has served the Town Meeting for almost 15 years. He has also been a member of the Finance Committee, and was sub-committee chairman of elementary, secondary and special education budgets.

Looney said he is aware of the nuances of town educational budgeting in the wake of Proposition 2½. Presently, Looney serves the town as a regular member of the Zoning Board of Appeal.

In announcing his candidacy, Looney cited his 27 years of experience in many areas of public education. Currently, his is a professor in the College of Arts and Sciences, Department of Geography and Earth Science at the University of Massachusetts, Boston. He was a professor at Boston State College and a teacher/administrator in the Medford Public Schools. He has degrees from Salem State College, Boston State College and Boston University. He has completed post-graduate and post-doctoral work at Harvard and MIT, Boston College and University of California, Berkeley.

It is imperative that Winchester continues to carefully monitor the service and fiscal assessments that are placed upon it by membership in the Regional School District, Looney said. In 1983-1984, there were 52 Winchester residents that were enrolled in the vocational school. Thirteen students graduated in June from 11 different departments. The choices and options were quite diverse. Some special education students have also taken advantage of the programmatic offerings of the vocational school.

Along with his duties at the University of Massachusetts, Boston, Looney has been involved in the Institute for Learning and Teaching. In that capacity, he has been working with Vocational Educational Faculty in the formation of a statewide competency based curriculum.

Looney also participated in a programmatic course on instructional design at the School of Public Health at Harvard University, where he was a course section instructor.

He plans to continue to work in curriculum design policy as a means of strengthening the institution. Looney was the former chairman of the Chapter 766 Advisory Committee for the town of Winchester and served 2 terms in that capacity.

He is a three-term member of the State Pesticide Board, which is the lead agency in the Department of Agriculture for monitoring pesticide use and application in the commonwealth.

Looney has also been active in other town affairs. He is a past chairman of the Winchester Red Cross, was treasurer of St. Mary's Mr. and Mrs. Club, and is a CCD instructor. He was also a Boy Scout Troop Committee member and has coached baseball, soccer and basketball teams.

Looney has lived in Winchester for 20 years with his wife, Maureen, and four children. Kathleen is a senior at Tufts University, John is a freshman at University of Massachusetts, Boston, Maura is a sophomore at Winchester High, and Patti is a fifth grader at the Lincoln School.

He would appreciate your vote in the Town Election on March 26 for the Northeast Metropolitan Regional Vocational School Committee from Winchester.

Win. Small Business Offered Assistance

Small business firms in the Winchester area can look to Massachusetts Department of Commerce for assistance in the development and expansion of their business. The Small Business Assistance Division of the Commerce Department provides technical assistance and offers programs to support small business development in this area. The division also serves as an advocate within state government for small business concerns.

"Small business is the bedrock of our economy," says Ronald M. Ansin, Commissioner of the Department of Commerce. "More than 90 percent of Massachusetts employers are firms with fewer than 50 employees. This amounts to approximately 750,000 jobs in more than 103,000 small business establishments."

Linda M. Noonan, Assistant Secretary for Small Business, says: "SBAD will provide information and assistance to start a new business in Massachusetts; develop a business plan; do business with the state and identify sources for financing, management or other specialized assistance."

The state Small Business Purchasing Program, administered by SBAD, sets aside 5 percent of state purchases for small business. These contracts are awarded competitively for both goods and services.

This program encourages small business participation in state purchasing, and promotes competition in the procurement process of state agencies. More than 1,800 Massachusetts firms have been certified to participate in this program.

SBAD also provides information on specific programs that offer new fields of potential profit to small business, such as exporting, and the federal Small Business Innovation Research program which awards research and development funds to small, technology-based businesses for projects with potential commercial application.

Another service to the small business community is a network of Small Business Development Centers providing practical, hands-on advice from finance to management. The coordination of resources from the federal and state governments, the academic community and private sector makes this a valuable service to potential and established small business owners. More than 7,000 firms have received free counseling from the centers.

For information call or write: Massachusetts Department of Commerce, Small Business Assistance Division, 100 Cambridge st., Boston 02202 (617)727-4005.

Director Karen Barton has chosen the following cast: Nora and Torvald Helmer will be played by Sydelle Pittas and Michael Jacobs. Bach will be joined by a real-life child, Chris Pittas and Clair Jacobs, who will play the Helmer children, Ivar and Emmy.

Dr. Rank, the family friend, will be played by Lee Barton, and Karen Detore will portray Kristine Linde.

Dirck Strycker apears as Krogstad; the parts of Helena, the porter and Anna-Maria are taken by Diane Wessels, Eric Rowe and Ann Baehr, respectively.

"A Doll's House" will be presented cabaret-style on Feb. 22 and 23 and March 1 and 2. For tickets, call the players' answering service at 721-1831.

Claudia F. Stellwagon, an account executive at the Burlington office of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, will present a financial planning seminar at the Winchester Newcomers' Club meeting on Feb. 8.

Topics that will be emphasized include reducing taxes through investments, planning for a child's education and preparing for retirement.

The meeting will be held at the home of Sharon and Martin Mastenbrook at 7:45 p.m.

'Mary Poppins' To Play In March

Rehearsals are under way on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons for the Cooperative Theatre for Children's 7th annual production, "Mary Poppins," the story of the famous magical London nanny and her charges, Jane and Michael Banks. More than 120 Winchester children auditioned for "Mary Poppins" and, in early Dec. 65 lucky, talented youngsters were chosen for the cast.

In the past two months, the students have been receiving training in singing, dancing and theater under the direction of well-known Winchester resident Catherine Alexander, the Co-Operative Theatre's founder.

"Mary Poppins" will be presented at the First Congregational Church the weekends of March 15 and 22. As always with Co-Operative Theatre productions, there is great anticipation for the show, and an enthusiastic, talented cast will present a delightful time for children's theater.

Library Will Show Spring Wildflower Slides

Winchester Trails and the Winchester Public Library are sponsoring a showing of Sally Wund's slides of "Spring Wildflowers" and "Trees in Bloom" on Thursday, Feb. 14, from 10 a.m. to 12 in the meeting room of the Winchester Public Library. Betty Vanderbilt and Maggie Howard will comment on the slides. Afterwards refreshments will be served.

These slides are part of the Sally Wund Natural History Series, compiled by Winchester Trails from Wund's collection and donated to the Winchester Public Library. The slides, with written commentaries and a projector, may be borrowed from the library.

Carousels are available on "Winchester Four Seasons," "Trees in Bloom," "Spring Wildflowers", "Trees" and "Habitat Institute for the Environment." With striking pictures of familiar and unfamiliar plants, these slide shows would make an appealing program for many organizations.

Sally Wund was born in New York City. She graduated from Vassar and Smith Colleges and became an architect. But most of her friends in Winchester, where she lived for 42 years, remember her for her interest in nature. She was a member of the Winchester Conservation Commission and Winchester Trails, an avid pursuer of mushrooms, and an outstanding photographer of nature.

Wund stalked the plants, waiting for the right light and the perfect stage of growth to capture the beauty of flowers, trees and mushrooms.

The Valentine Day's program is an opportunity for residents of Winchester to share fleeting moments of natural beauty they might otherwise miss.

Curtain & Cue Musical Gathers Steam

Both Directors Are WHS Grads

By RANDY HESSE

"How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying." It's the title of WHS's Curtain and Cue spring musical, but it could just as easily have been the story of the drama society's new director, Brian Milauskas.

Since his directing debut a year ago, Milauskas has produced a string of shows which have enjoyed a level of success unparalleled in the history of Curtain and Cue.

His accomplishments are all the more remarkable in light of the fact that he is still a junior in college. In addition to his directing duties, Milauskas is attending Tufts University where he majors in English and psychology.

"Everyone asks me how I manage going to school and directing for the high school," says Milauskas. "My answer is, I do. If you have to do something, it gets done. If you want to do it, it gets done even faster. I consider myself lucky to have found a vocation in my avocation."

This year, Milauskas has chosen fellow WHS graduate Pilar Pitas as his choreographer. Pitas is a freshman at Bard College, majoring in drama and women's studies. Although she has had much dance experience, this will be her first attempt at choreographing a full-scale musical.

"I hope to be able to draw from my past experiences in summer stock and college theater, applying what I've learned from teachers and more experienced colleagues to my work at the High School," says Pitas.

Pitas works closely with the cast, teaching various dance routines, and has developed a unique rapport with the actors.

"I think because of our closeness in our age they aren't afraid to give suggestions or criticize," she explains. "I encourage them to speak out, because it keeps me on my toes; I want our relationship to be different from the more rigid teacher-student one they deal with in high school."

Milauskas and Pitas have worked together on many WHS shows in the past, including last year's production of "Pippin," where Pitas played a lead role under Milauskas' direction.

Both agree that their familiarity contributes greatly to their working relationship. Says Pitas, "It is wonderful to be able to work with Brian again, this time in a professional setting instead of actor-to-actor, or actor to director. Besides being an extremely competent director, he is an energetic and creative human being. I find myself learning from him every day."

"Pilar and I have been friends for several years," adds Milauskas. "We have a terrific working relationship on this show, with just enough tension to bring out the best in us."

Together, WHS's "Dramatic Duo" have set high standards for themselves and for the cast of "HOW TO SUCCEED..."

As Milauskas puts it, "Pilar and I are both dreamers. I think that is what is going to differentiate "HOW TO SUCCEED..." from other high school shows — our refusal to accept anything less than perfect from ourselves — an attitude which hopefully we have developed within our cast."

Both director and choreographer agree, "If you're not going to try to do your best, you shouldn't bother trying at all."

When asked what this year's show would be like, Milauskas replied, "All I can say is, come see it. It seems to change everyday. Just when Pilar and I think we've come up with the 'best' idea yet, something better seems to come along!"

If you are interested in seeing what Milauskas and Pitas have up their sleeves, "HOW TO SUCCEED.." will be performed on March 7, 8 and 9 at the WHS auditorium. Tickets are available now at Book Ends on Winchester Place or through Curtain and Cue at the high school.

The Winchester Star

STAR EXTRA

Director Chris Brown: Man Behind The Merriment

By NANCY PICK

Christopher Brown, director of this year's Winton Club cabaret, never made it as a star. But he came close.

He danced on the rooftops as a chimney sweep in the movie "Mary Poppins." He played alongside Gene Kelly in "Singing in the Rain."

In Paris, he performed at the Lido and the Folies Bergeres, the city's renown cabarets.

He held Marlene Dietrich in his arms and Jane Mansfield too as their dance partners.

Later, he hit Las Vegas, where he played in show after show, well into his 40s. Then, suddenly, dancing down a staircase with his hat poised in his hand, Brown realized he didn't want to be on stage.

He wanted to run the show.

Now, he and costumer Demetrius Vonglis own Extravaganza, a company that travels around the country staging splashy shows for benefits, such as the Winton Club.

Still slender, limber, charismatic in his early 60s, Brown is in high demand. He has a gift for inspiring performers, regardless of their expertise.

His cast members call him the Gentle Giant, he says. "I like seeing things in individuals that they don't know they have," Brown claims.

Any tinge of the Hollywood prima donna is gone now. "I used to have temper tantrums like you wouldn't believe," he says.

"I had years where I didn't understand people and didn't understand myself. When I was a performer there were many times when I was an egotistical little kid," Brown confesses.

His story is a classic one, that of a country boy growing up in the Depression, fatally attracted to Hollywood.

"Here I was a poor Texas kid," he recalled, who "moved to California during the dust bowl period.

"I had my training on the G.I. bill of rights, and I didn't start dancing until I was 19 years old," Brown recalls.

Then, as an American success, he indulged himself. "Every year I bought a new car," he says, and splurged on a red Thunderbird the first year they came out, just so he could rev it on Hollywood blvd.

"The Depression made a lot of people want better from their lives," he explains. "It was valuable for me. It was valuable for my life."

His experience taught him tolerance.

"I wanted to be a star and I didn't make it," he says. "At the age of 25 I realized that I was a good chorus boy and a good dancer and I realized that that was where my worth was," he explains.

Now, Brown works tirelessly to find a niche for every cast member in his productions.

"I do expect the best that each person can give," Brown says, and he means it. "If they do their best that's good enough for me."

restaurant special entitled "Eat It."

Throughout the night, the scenes whirled by with kaleidoscope quickness.

"I try to do machine-gun pacing," Brown avowed. "I feel that a show has to be paced so fast that at the end the audience has to be breathless."

The theatergoers, Brown believes, "should go home tingling, like the sparkling sequins."

Brown, who directed his first Winton Club cabaret in 1974, said the shows get racier every year.

"This year we do have some wonderful exciting things that I don't think I would have been able to do five years ago," he said.

Certainly, many of the costumes were provocative. Six female jailbirds in a number called "Cellblock Tango" wore outfits that looked suspiciously like Frederick's of Hollywood specials.

And yet Brown swore that every number was in good taste and that even the most extravagant costume provided adequate concealment.

And Brown seems to be wildly popular with the cast, for his kindness as well as his drive.

"I've never met anyone that is more understanding yet more demanding," said Phyllis Cree of Church st.

Brown said his philosophy is to "push people as far as they can possibly go. I like to provoke them into feeling they are better than they really are."

And he didn't have much time to get the show into shape.

Less than a month separated audition night from opening night. "Three weeks is not long to get the Jello to set," said Brown.

In order to meet the deadline, cabaret chairmen planned the entire show a year in advance, said the director. Plus, all the blockbuster costumes, designed by Californian Demetrius Vonglis, came in three sizes to fit almost anyone, with slight alterations.

Getting the cabaret off the ground was a prodigious undertaking. This year's co-chairmen, Janice Coakley and Sue Powers, worked long hours to perfect "Hat's Off." (Consistent with the theme, all the big numbers featured fanciful hats and headdresses.)

One hundred and one Winchester residents (and 38 out-of-towners) had roles in the show, not to mention the Winton Club husbands who made up the stage crew.

The sophisticated sets were designed by Ann Bannister of Winchester, who, with her assistants, dreamed up a Moulin Rouge windmill, a winter wonderland with a silhouetted chairlift that rose across the set, and other stupendous scenes.

"I really love to work with the Winton Club," Brown exclaimed. "They are talented, glamourous and an exciting group that really does something for their community, their hospital, and everything they do goes back to the community."

Professed the director, "It's not just rich ladies who are playing around."

The show was the extravaganza it promised to be, just short of fireworks.

"We were supposed to have real Las Vegas-type fireworks, but we just couldn't do it soundwise," said Brown mournfully. Yet the way he figures it, "If the audience doesn't know it was supposed to be there, they don't miss it."

'I try to do machine-gun pacing. I feel that a show has to be paced so fast that at the end the audience has to be breathless.'

Pitching In For Education's Sake

Winchesterite Takes Teaching Seriously

By ERIC W. BLOM

Beatrice Sylvester was a very naughty girl when she attended elementary school in Winchester.

"I used to put thumbtacks on other kids' seats," she admits.

As a teenager, she startled the teacher when she spoke of her life's aspiration — to become a teacher. "She told me I wouldn't make the grade, that I should become a secretary," recalls Sylvester.

Sylvester, who generally sticks by her own decisions, didn't take the advice. After 33 years of teaching in Hingham schools, she thinks she made the right choice.

Equally as strong-willed as a teacher, she never once asked her peers how best to instruct students. Instead, she relied on intuition and experience as her guide.

Throughout Hingham, she became known for the determination and especially the discipline she brought to her class. The little girl who placed tacks under her classmates had grown into a woman who was determined not to have that happen in her second-grade room.

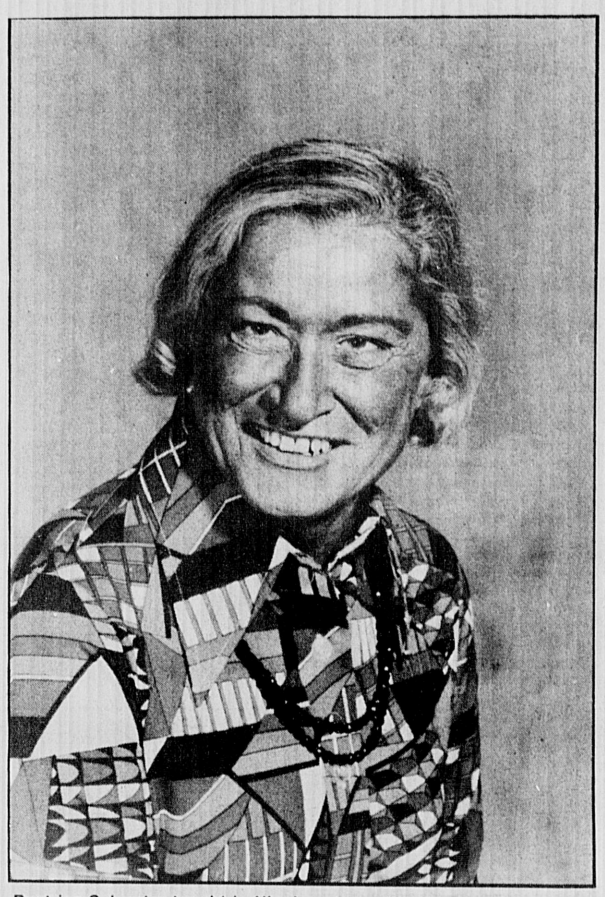

"I (was) a very firm teacher," she says, crossing her arms across her navy dress. "If kids fooled around, they would lose their recess. After one week they don't do it anymore.

"Naturally, I was the one to suffer," she explains. "Other teachers would send them down to the office, and they would fool around there."

Instead, Sylvester would stand beside the student to make sure he or she was working. The discipline was essential to a good learning environment, she believed.

"The first couple of weeks," says the Winchester native, "parents would complain. But after that, they called to say they were sorry.

"The first couple of weeks of school, you try to look stern," she adds. "Then you smile and laugh so that the kids will love it. We had a lot of fun."

Beatrice Sylvester taught in Hingham Schools.

'I was a very firm teacher. If kids fooled around, they would lose their recess.'
—Ex-teacher Beatrice Sylvester

At times, Sylvester tapped her own mischievousness to lighten the load of dull classroom drills.

"I played a lot of games with the kids," she says, smiling at the memory. "I'd put an eraser on my head, and they'd chase me around the room."

One time, she was jump roping in class when the superintendent walked in. He left without saying a word.

"I figure that it is my classroom," she said matter-of-factly, "and I can do what I want."

Dealing with the children day after day was a tiring job, but one with many rewards for a caring person such as Sylvester.

"If they saw you were tired, they would act more and more like devils," Sylvester says. "You have to love kids to do what teachers do."

One of the rewards she received from her work was the affection of the children.

"You would have kids who come up to you, put their arms around you, and say 'I love you.'"

She received many invitations to dinner and birthday parties.

"But," she says, planting one finger firmly in the air, "I would never go. If you go to one you've got to go to them all."

Some children would bring her gifts such as candy and flowers. One parent owned a doughnut shop and gave the class gift certificates each week. Another was a butcher and brought her a ham slicing machine [which she returned], a gift for helping his difficult son.

In return, Sylvester brought presents to the students at Christmas and when they accomplished some academic achievement. Each day, she brought them snacks.

"It would sometimes aggravate other teachers," Sylvester confides. "The kids would come to them and say they wanted Miss Sylvester because she gives them presents."

Some students were harder to work with than others. A boy in Sylvester's class just before her retirement this summer was particularly difficult.

"He scratched my arms and pulled my hair," she says, adding that he refused to do any work or even talk in class. "I held my hand over his hand to see if he was writing. . . . When he finished [the year], he was reading."

However, it was not difficult children, but the difficulty in driving to Hingham, that convinced Sylvester to retire last summer. Getting up at 5 each morning to fight traffic and the

Local Women Hit The Books To Help Students

By NANCY PICK

Imagine an elementary school without story books, without "Mary Poppins" or "Winnie the Pooh" for companionship, without the "Wizard of Oz" around for literary inspiration.

That was the plight of many Boston elementary schools.

Martha Redding helped coordinate Boston's school librarians.

Then, in the early 1970s a group called School Volunteers for Boston started a library project.

The city provided the books, but Winchester provided the womanpower.

"I was standing in my kitchen," says Martha "Mike" Redding of Hawthorne rd., "and the phone rang. It was the director of School Volunteers for Boston."

Redding was asked to help start a library in a South Boston school. She was dying to do it, she said. But she had to tell the director no. "I have five children," she explained.

Much to her surprise, it was her children who ultimately convinced her to make the move.

"Go, Mom, go," they said. "You should, you like libraries," they told her.

So Redding changed her mind and signed up as a Boston School Volunteer.

She joined a group of "a whole lot of neat ladies" who got the library of the Hoar School in South Boston off the ground, says Redding.

"We had a ball painting and decorating and really trying to make the library look terrific," says Redding. Then they catalogued the collection and concentrated on getting students to use it.

After five years Redding moved on to become a coordinator for the School Volunteers for Boston, the organization that oversaw her library work.

Yet certain memories stuck with her. "There was a little girl named Karen who was in the fifth grade who really liked to read a lot," recalls Redding. "One day she came in to return 'Little Women.'"

She liked the book, she told Redding, and "started to give me her analysis of the four sisters in the book. It was the most sophisticated analysis you ever heard," says Redding.

Among the 10-year-old's points, Redding recounts, "she really related to Jo because she was a tomboy and Karen was a tomboy and liked to play street hockey with the boys."

"I don't think I'll ever forget that," she adds.

Marjorie Moore of Dennett rd. also enjoys the contact with kids.

"I get my fix of young faces once a week," she says.

She began as a library volunteer in 1974 at the Bigelow School in South Boston, now closed.

"It seemed like Winchester had no problem getting library aides," says Moore, while there was a dire need for them in Boston. And, she says, "I feel like we owe a tremendous amount to metropolitan Boston, when you think of all we take from it."

Patricia Ritchcock of Wildwood st., who volunteered for several years, says the city is "the place people ought to be fighting for education." In the 1970s she helped set up two libraries, one in South Boston and one in the North End. Volunteering in the city, she says, "caught my imagination."

And it takes imagination to convince city students that reading can be enjoyable. Moore describes how "When we first went into the Bigelow School it was hard to get the children to take books out." To entice them, she says, they stocked sports books and "an awful lot of paperback joke books."

As students grew accustomed to the library, they would come in to pursue their interests. One student got a new dog and checked out a book on canine training, Moore recounts. It came back with signs that the effort had been less than successful, she says with a smile.

Slowly but surely, the library began to stock books of a more serious nature. "The fiction stories that I thought would never circulate now circulate," says Moore, such as the the Ramona books, "The Black Stallion," "Pinnochio," the "Little House on the Prairie" series, "The Wizard of Oz." Songbooks are popular, says Moore, and so are cookbooks.

Marjorie Moore gets her 'Fix of Young Faces' through the program.

And now, when volunteers set the library up in September after summer vacation, the kids pop their heads in the door asking, "When is it going to be open?"

Since the Biglow School closed, Moore has volunteered at the Paul Dever school in Dorchester, where, with predominantly bilingual students, Moore can put her Harvard linguistics studies to work.

Although her Spanish was rusty at first, she says, she reads aloud to five classes of bilingual students in espanol.

Winter Woes: From Slippery Roads To Flu Bugs

Police Chief Provides Pointers For Safe Driving In Winter Snowstorms

With lots of winter weather ahead, Winchester's Chief of Police John P. McHugh has been prompted to review professional driver techniques used to combat bad weather motoring woes.

The chief's recommendations have been based upon research findings of the National Safety Council's Committee on Winter Driving Hazards and endorsed by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Commonly posed questions at this time of year include:

Is there a significant difference in stopping distances in relation to size and weight of cars?

In comparing rear-drive vehicles, skid testers have found that a subcompact car is likely to require a shorter distance in a panic stop on ice than a compact car. A compact car, in turn, is likely to require a shorter distance than a standard car. Stopping distances for the lighter cars can be as much as 25 percent shorter.

However, a secondary problem crops up. Again referring to rear-drive vehicles, when trying to get started from a stop on icy roads, the smaller, lighter cars have a notable difficulty getting back into motion. This is true at warmer ice temperatures or when ice has become highly polished such as at intersections. Chances are increased of being rear-ended by vehicles that can get started quicker — either because of weight or traction aids used.

Are there other problems drivers of smaller, lighter cars should rethink?

Skid testers cite these factors:

When a lighter car collides with a heavier car or truck, it stops very abruptly. All things being equal, occupants of the lighter vehicle face a higher probability of injury or death.

Sign posts and lamps designed to break away in crashes may not perform as designed when struck by lower, lighter cars.

Car and truck parts, such as bumpers, may be too high or too low to do any good in crashes between the different sized vehicles.

Because the eye height for drivers in smaller cars is lower, the motorist's sight distance is reduced at hillcrests, intersections and by roadside obstructions. Splash from larger vehicles is also more of a problem.

Drivers of lower, lighter vehicles must be extra alert, and extra skillful, in crash producing situations. Stretched out following distances are a good preventative technique.

What is the key to judging how far to stay behind a car ahead?

Experts recommend the two second rule.

After the vehicle ahead has passed an object (such as a sign) alongside the road, count the time it takes your car to reach that same object. Count "one thousand and one, one thousand and two." If you reach the object before you've finished counting "one thousand and two," you are following too closely. Two seconds is valid though only on good (dry) surfaces.

Winter driving specialists warn, however, that following distance changes with the weather. The time and distance it takes to do everything is exaggerated when the road is icy — up to ten times normal. In snow and ice, allow a four, five (or even more) second internal for an adequate safety cushion.

Are traction aids helpful?

Extensive tests using standard-size, rear-drive cars have shown that snow tires improve traction by 28 percent on glare ice, 51 percent on loosely packed snow. Studded tires (in states where their use is permitted) reduce braking distance on ice by 19 percent and provide about three times the pulling ability of regular tires. Reinforced tire chains reduce braking distances by 50 percent on glare ice and provide from four to seven times as much traction as a regular tire on snow and ice.

The message is clear according to Chief McHugh.

"Regardless of the help provided by traction aids, in no instance is the way you can maneuver or stop your car close to that of conventional highway tires on either a dry or even wet road surface. You must slow down and stay well back of traffic ahead on winter slick roads.

"And always buckle up! Use the safety restraints in your car — for yourself and your passengers. If you have children, equip your vehicle with the proper type of restraints recommended for your child's age, height and weight."

Hospital Favors Prevention

In spring and fall, allergies are high on the list of maladies, while summer brings sun poisoning, insect bites and swimming mishaps. Winter, too, has its list of medical problems, some of which members of the staff of Winchester Hospital feel could be avoided with that famous "ounce of prevention."

"We are extremely busy at this time of year, and we see a sharp rise in cases of flu, pneumonia and colds," said Joseph Papplardo, administrative director of respiratory therapy at Winchester Hospital. "Of highest risk are the chronic respiratory disease patients."

Pappalardo adises these patients to stay indoors if possible, and if they must go out in extreme weather to wrap a scarf around the mouth and nose. "The cold air is very hard on the lungs. The nose warms the air coming in, and it is humidified at 100%." He also advises high-risk patients to stay out of crowds where respiratory diseases are transmitted.

Elizabeth Kenney director of Winchester Hospital's social services department, is in constant touch with elderly people, and she emphasized, "Older people should not fear the winter weather. If they are in good health, and they take precautions to bundle up well, it is very invigorating for them to enjoy a sunny winter day."

Wearing a hat is most important during bitter weather as it keeps the body heat in, most of which is lost through the top of the head.

"Children should always wear hats and mittens, even if they think their little classmates might laugh at them," advises Sue Powers, the hospital's community health education coordinator. Very little children tumble about in the snow, and parents should bring them in for a dry change of mittens and boots even though the children resist having their play interrupted. This could prevent frostbite.

Frostbite is a common problem for people of all ages. Loose-fitting, warm boots are the best way to avoid frostbite of the toes, but they should be removed when a person is inside because when the feet are encased in waterproof boots which do not "breathe," a perfect breeding ground is established for athelete's foot.

Nosebleeds are also common during the winter because the low humidity causes irritation of the lining of the nose. Using a humidifier can lessen this problem.

High on the list of serious winter problems, according to Stephen Raley, M.D., a Winchester Hospital emergency room physician, are the injuries caused by ice and cold. "We see a lot of sprained ankles and broken bones from slips and falls on the ice, from skiing and hockey and from car accidents."

"The most dangerous threats of winter come from carbon monoxide poisoning such as can occur by running the engine of a car while it is idle for a prolonged period to keep the heater on. And heaters, such as kerosene, if not properly ventilated, consume al the oxygen in a room. This causes death by suffocation," Dr. Raney warned.

Winchester Hospital Will Train Teenage Volunteers

Teenage girls and boys in the eighth grade and up who are interested in doing volunteer work at Winchester Hospital are invited to call the Volunteer Department, 729-9000, Ext. 3092, to register for the March 1985 Orientation program.

Appointments for an interview with the Director of Volunteer Services may be made during the February school vacation, Tuesday, Feb. 19 through Friday, Feb. 22, or after school the following week.

Enrollment is limited and applicants will be accepted in the order that appointments are made.

The two required orientation sessions will be held on Friday, March 8 and March 22, from 3:15 to 5 p.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room located in the basement of the new wing of Winchester Hospital, at 41 Highland ave. Snow date will be March 15.

Conducted by Marie B. Johnson, Director of Volunteer Services, the course will cover hospital ethics, rules and regulations, and responsibilities of junior volunteers.

Junior volunteers who complete the course will receive their training during the spring and will start their volunteer work at the end of June. Those who are unavailable during the summer will be trained in the spring and placed in the fall.

There are volunteer opportunities in the central service department, on the coffee cart, coffee shop, in the laboratory office, on messenger service, on the nursing units and at the registration desk.

Yoga Class To Meet Monday

A demonstration of Polarity Therapy will be offered by Phoenix Gibson, Ph.D., guest of the Yoga and Creativity group at the Jenks Senior center, on Monday, Feb. 11, at 9:45 a.m. In case of a storm the date will be March 4. As the group will be limited to 20 men and women, participants should sign up now at the center either in person or by telephone. Newcomers are asked to bring a towel or mat for floor work and to wear comfortable clothing.

Formerly a visiting research psychologist and consultant to Stanford Research Institute and MIT Research Centers, Dr. Gibson now offers a wide range of individualized sevices including nutritional counseling, not only for those with health problems, but also for healthy persons desiring an increased vitality and sense of well being. His goal is for each person to attain higher levels of joy, vitality and serenity.

The blend of modern understanding of electrical fields in the body and the ancient theory of Oriental healing techniques has led to Polarity Therapy. This pleasant, effective, yet no-invasive technique balances energies in the body which, when left unchecked, lead to illness. Many degenerative diseases, tight muscles, sore places in the body and addictive behaviors are indicators of stress and thus of energy imbalance.

Members of the Yoga and Creativity group led by Paulett Taggart are Audrey DeMaio, May Hambly, Polly Keppler, Margaret Leader, Violet Myrvagnis, Annette Riley, Arthur Rich, Catherine Snell, Victor Pavles, Margaret Agababian, Agnes Grace, Marjorie Burton and Barbara Weber.

OBITUARIES

Carolyn Abbott Mawdsley, Was Active With Seniors

Carolyn Abbott Mawdsley, 70, of Winchester, died Feb. 3 at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston after a brief illness. She was the widow of Judge Walton R. Mawdsley and was active in local musical and seniors' groups.

She was born in Montclair, N.J., and moved to Winchester as an infant. She attended local schools, graduated from Winchester High and attended Skidmore College and the New England Conservatory of Music to pursue her lifelong love of music.

For many years, she was an active member of the First Congregational Church Choir, serving simultaneously on the Music Committee currently and several times during past years. One of the introits she composed is used frequently in the Church Service of Worship.

After retiring as a secretary at MIT Lincoln Laboratory, she became editor of the Winchester Seniors' Association monthly newsletter, serving for eight years in that capacity. Her work added a sophistication to the six-page paper that reaches 5,000 seniors and includes pictures included for eye appeal and general interest making the newsletter a very useful instrument for communication with all seniors.

She was instrumental in organizing the popular WSA Book Club, delivered Meals on Wheels to the housebound on a regular basis, and was a volunteer driver for the Jenks Senior Center Transportation Committee.

Among her survivors are her son, David W. of Danbury, Conn.; four brothers, Walter W. Abbott of Lincoln, T. Grafton Abbott of Glastonbury, Conn., George A. Abbott of Ashville, N.C., and William W. Abbott of Fort Walton Beach, Fla.; two grandchildren, Anne and Christopher Mawdsley, both of Danbury; and several nieces and nephews. Also included among her survivors is her dear friend, Margaret Hodgson of Winchester, with whom she made her home for many years.

Burial will be private, followed by a memorial service in the First Congregational Church Sanctuary on Saturday, Feb. 9, at 2 p.m. with the Rev. Walter B. Davis officiating.

Contributions may be made in her memory to the First Congregational Church Music Fund or to the Jenks Senior Center Memorial Fund.

Arrangements were by Norris Funeral Home.

Mary R. McLean Was Active Locally

Mary Reed McLean, 73, of Seneca rd. died Jan. 30 at Winchester Hospital after a long illness. She was the wife of the late Dr. John D. McLean.

She was born in Somerville and was a graduate of Winchester schools as well as Pine Manor College, class of 1932.

Mrs. McLean was devoted to her family and was involved in community life, serving as an active member of the EnKa Society, a den mother in the Cub Scouts and Brownie Scouts, and as a member of the Winchester Unitarian Church. She also participated in Red Cross and various charity events.

For several years she worked as receptionist at the Medical Arts Building on Church St. She hosted in her neighborhood a traditional Christmas caroling night.

Not so well known was the fact that Mrs. McLean, daughter of the late Nathan Parker Reed and Ella May Burgess of Sheffield West, was a direct descendant of Capt. John Parker, the American Revolution hero whose statue is the Minute Man on Lexington Common.

She was a member of the Mayflower Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Winchester and Bedford Historical Societies.

Her hobbies included knitting and reading. She was a member of the Lexington Arts and Crafts Guild, where she did doll house miniatures.

(former Editor-in-Chief of the Winchester Star from 1962-1968); and two daughters, Carol M. Forester of Colts Neck, N.J., and Deborah Reed McLean of Seneca rd.; and nine grandchildren.

She is also survived by one sister, Eleanor Reed Clark of Falmouth Foreside, Maine; and three brothers, Paul Sampson Reed of Fitchburg, William Oliver Reed of Wellesley, and Charles Henry Reed of Wellesley.

Funeral services were held on Feb. 2 at the Winchester Unitarian Church. Burial was at Woodlawn Cemetery in Everett. Norris Funeral Home handled arrangements.

Memorial donations may be made to the EnKa Society or the American Cancer Society.

Counselor Will Speak At School

Dr. Sandra Fox from the Family Support Center of the Judge Baker Guidance Center will return to Winchester on Wednesday, Feb. 13, at 8 p.m. at Muraco School. Dr. Fox's program provides counseling and emotional support to help children and families cope with grief and loss.

Recently the families in the Lincoln School Community found that they needed to deal with the unexpected and unfortunate death of their principal. The facts surrounding Paula Caffrey's death were first leaked as rumor, later confirmed, and either partial or full information was given to some children. The school took decisive action.

Dr. Fox was invited by the Parents Association. Her assistance to the adults who wished to develop their own responses to the children was the perfect medicine. Her information, suggestions, and descriptions of developmental stages in children's understanding of death were soothing and reassuring.

Donna Brandt Landry of the Lincoln Parents Assn. said "Dr. Fox, in her honest and knowledgeable manner, gave the school personnel and parents the security that the situation was handled well and done correctly and in the very best interests of the families involved and in the memory of Paula."

Beth Tremberth, Aided Win. Medicine

By Richard Clark, M.D.

Having been a resident of Winchester for 65 years and having been involved with Winchester medicine from 1933 to 1971, I have been requested by several friends and family members of Beth Tremberth to record a few of my recollections of her association with Winchester medicine over a period of close to 40 years.

She was born Elizabeth Blair in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1895, then became Mrs. Pfaff and later, Mrs. Frank Tremberth. She came to Boston with her family in 1902, moving thereafter to West Medford and subsequently to Winchester where she lived at 41 Myrtle terr.

In the early 1930s, several medical specialists had moved from Boston to Winchester with practices in both localities representing diverse medical fields. In June 1934 we decided that it would make sense if possible, to combine forces in a lossely knit medical unit in one location.

Space was found available at 40 Church st., the prior home and office of Dr. E. A. Emery. Dr. Wilfred McKenzie, a Children's Hospital pediatrician, had an established practice in the Winchester area and had had contact with Beth Trembreth as an intermittent aide.

One evening he and I interviewed Mrs. Tremberth as a possible live-in helper who could take night phone calls from a central switch board and help us out as and when needed.

It should be remembered that this was at the depth of the Great Depression, when one was ready to do anything available and Beth proved to be more than such a person.

Drs. McKenzie and Clark joined forces with Dr. Sanford Moses who already had an office at 40 Church st. where he practiced obstetrics. He was a Harvard and Boston Lying-In Hospital graduate.

Dr. Clark was a Harvard and Massachusetts General Hospital staff member in the field of internal medicine. At this same time Dr. George Marks, a Harvard and M.G.H. surgeon, moved to town and became an associate. Likewise, Dr. Alexander Aitkin, an orthopedist from the Boston City Hospital and later professor of Orthopedics at Tufts, came aboard for part-time work.

In the next year, Dr. William Speers, a pioneer in orthodontia and Dr. Charles Johnson, as associate of the Tobeys at the Eye and Ear, joined up.

Miss Grace Rogers, later Mrs. Charles Murphy of Pond st., had worked regularly as a nurse for Dr. McKenzie and along with Beth attempted to organize the shared and overlapping demands of this assortment of doctors migrating between Boston and Winchester. Needless to say, extra help soon became necessary as well as the obvious need for increased space.

A porch was made into a dental and ear, nose and throat office. It is of some interest that this was the first modified group practice in this part of the country, one in Melrose and in Dedham coming along shortly thereafter.

At 15 Dix st., beside the First Congregational Church, the Calumet Club, a three-story wooden structure, housed one of the finest bowling alleys of Greater Boston, a game room, and a ball-assembly hall which was a social center of the town.

I remember as a youngster going there with my father to watch the bowling. With the Depression, the club became defunct and was purchased by a neighbor across the street, Dan Kelley, the local undertaker, of Kelley and Hawes fame.

After this had stood vacant for several years, the above group negotiated with Mr. Kelley for its purchase. Under the supervision of Jerome Bailey Foster and Alfred Elliott, it was demolished to the foundation in 1939 and offices were developed, at first on the ground floor only, and an apartment overlooking Wedge Pond was built for Beth Tremberth, where she could monitor incoming calls at off hours and essentially serve as custodian of the building.

As if this were not enough, she came on as my full time secretary and worked in this capacity until June 1955.

During World War II, with half of our group scattered around the world, Beth held the fort and sent pediatricians out to rescue the elderly and what all, and when no doctor could be found, gave sound advice herself.

After the war, matters again came to rights with Drs. Pollard and Blanchard joining in dentistry. Dr. Gus Kaufmann in Internal Medicine joined Dr. Clark who was turning more exclusively to cardiology. Also Dr. Wilson is orthodontia became associated with Dr. Speers. Dr. Lewis in nose and throat, later followed by Dr. Johnson joined the group, as did Dr. Bill Hickey, a surgeon.

In 1955, Beth Tremberth decided that she had done triple duty long enough and, to my great regret, retired from my office work but continued in her apartment, taking afterhour and weekend calls, and continued with this until suddenly developing a ruptured abdominal aneurysm in 1975, for which she was immediately operated on in the Winchester Hospital and made a remarkable recovery.

After spending some months with her sister, Mrs. Hamilton Grifford, she moved into the University Apartments in Woburn and could have been seen hiking around Horn Pond almost any day. In 1984, she moved into the Deaconess House in Concord near to the Giffords but continued a very full and active life up to the time of her final illness in the Concord Hospital, where she died this Jan. 22, in her 90th year.

A memorial service was held on Jan. 25 at the New England Deaconess Chapel in Concord with her brother-in-law, The Rev. Hamilton Gifford, and Rev. David Purdy of Winchester officiating.

All of the original medical group have now retired or gone on their way but many of those carrying on will be doing so with the vivid and happy memory of Elizabeth Tremberth. Those who knew her will never forget her energy, enthusiasm and kindness.

those groups that are working to get public access for the area.

According to Police Lt. Andrew Crawford, police who are hired by the Water Dept. to patrol, which occurs from May through October, are paid $112 for an eight-hour day's work.

In 1984, $8,703 was taken in by the town for community restitution (mostly minor offenses excluding traffic incidents). "A little over half of that" stems from Fells-related incidents, said Crawford.

"We allege trespassing most of the time," added Crawford. "We don't pick up everyone — only the flagrant violators. You know the people — those who've been told before to keep out of the watershed."

Last week, the Appalachian Mountain Club and the Metropolitan District Commission joined forces with local residents to urge Selectmen to consider reopening the area for the first time since it was closed 40 years ago.

The land — 812 acres that host the town's water supply — is off limits to hikers, bikers and others who wander through the woods there.

"I enthusiastically support the use of the reservoir property," said Michael Connolly, former local fire chief. "I go to the Fells all the time and I see absolutely nothing wrong with letting people enjoy the reservoir area, too."

The watershed area is part of the 2,069-acre Middlesex Fells Reservoir, which encompasses parts of Winchester, Stoneham and Medford.

The Fells and Blue Hills Reservation were the first acquisitions in 1893 for the new metropolitan park system. The areas were to be permanent open spaces for recreation use by people in the metropolitan area, according to Chapman's "History of Winchester." At one time the reservoirs were stocked with black bass and some fishing was allowed, but the state Board of Health ended the fishing.

Controlled and owned by the town, the watershed area has been off-limits to the public in an effort to prevent pollution of the local water supply.

Arthur Van Wart, director of the Reservations and Interpretive Services Unit of the MDC parks division, says the key to preventing abuse is education. While he says he understands Courchaine's concerns, he said he is sure education measures could do the trick.

"It's the natural reaction of officials to be gun shy about opening up a watershed. I'd expect them to be. But I've worked for many years on natural resources, and I've seen education programs work," said Van Wart.

He suggested such educational tools as brochures and carefully worded signs that could be posted at key entrances to the watershed. Positive wording on signs and in brochures are the key to successful anti-abuse campaigns, he added.

"Because these parks — such as the Blue Hills Reservation area — are in such urban settings they are natural attractions for people. With positive programs, you can keep people from abusing them," said Van Wart.

He said the groups must work together to allow people to enjoy the area while simultaneously protecting the watershed.

"Signs are great, but it's how you represent yourself in the signs that matters. You can't just tell people they cannot do something; you have to explain why, too," said Van Wart.

He said his department asked the state legislature to dole out $294,146 to hire 26 fulltime staff members to patrol the area, but that the request was killed for budget reasons.

Likewise, the legislature has trimmed his budget allocation to $250,000 for parks projects — down from the more than $1 million requested. The $262,000 that he says he needs for boats and land vehicles for the Fells project also is out of the picture.

Without the money and town cooperation, he said, the proposed opening of the watershed area is likely to be a long-term project. Negotiations will take some time, he said, and without staffing funds it'll be a long while before the MDC group can take any sort of action.

That's where local residents can help out, he said. "When we met with Selectmen, they seemed interested in forming some kind of study group about this. That's a start in the right direction," said Van Wart.

Resident Malcolm H. Masters, who has been active in the Appalachian Mountain Club for many years, is frequent visitor of the Fells area. He says he has maintained the trails in the Fells for several years, but that since his health is not good he needs help.

"The trails that are used the most — like the skyline one that edges the reservoir — are in pretty good shape. But some others are becoming overgrown. It's a lot of physical work to keep them clear, and that's where I think a combined effort would be benficial to everyone," said Masters.

chitect's designs for Winchester Center renovations.

Despite the kudos he received at Monday's Selectmen's meeting, Welch said the housing agreement should be kept in perspective.

"It's a start," he commented, "it wouldn't call it the Magna Carta."

Welch pointed out that the agreement expires June 30, when a Winchester progress report on housing must be submitted to the state.

At that time, he said, if the state's housing officials aren't satisfied with Winchester's progress, they could again judge the town "unreasonably restrictive" of housing growth.

If that happens, Welch said, the state will likely choke off all discretionary grants to the town.

And that, said Rep. Saltmarsh, could jeopardize several projects at a time when money is already tight.

"Like it or not," said Saltmarsh, "the town is becoming more and more dependent financially on the state."

Often, the books are English children's classics translated into Spanish, says Moore, although she's pressing for the library to expand its European and Latin American collection.

As Redding says, "The library is really a place where you can do your own thing. You can do puppets, you can read aloud, you can do projects."

For instance, when Sally Kincaid of Prospect st. volunteered at the Michelangelo middle school in the North End, she had some of the Chinese children teach origami, the art of Oriental paper folding, to the other students.

And library work is just a single facet of School Volunteers for Boston, says Redding, ever eager for new recruits.

Proposition 2½ made the need for volunteers ever greater, Moore explains. "When the money is cut back for extras, they have to count on volunteers," says Moore.

The agency's volunteers are men and women of all races, all backgrounds and all ages. They're needed for such initiatives as the Pen Pal Program, which encourages students to improve their writing skills through letters, and the Intergenerational Program, which gets senior citizens and children together to learn from one another.

From pilots to professors, Winchester has many veterans of the Career Education and Enrichment Program who talk to students about their professions.

And the School Volunteers also needs basic skills tutors, English as a second language tutors, classroom tutors, artists and people knowledgeablge about computers.

Plus, volunteers may take advantage of a free introductory course in library science offered by the Boston Public Library at the University of Massachusetts/Boston.

From that six-credit course, a lot of the women who first volunteered went on to get graduate degrees in library science, says Redding.

Hitchcock says she used the course and her library experience as "a stepping stone toward a paid job." She now works as a library media specialist at Belmont High School. And Redding says other volunteers have used their volunteer experience to refresh old skills before returning to the professional workplace.

Anyone interested in testing the waters may call School Volunteers for Boston at 451-6145.

weather became more than she wanted to handle.

She lives in the family home with five unmarried sisters. Her brother's family lives next door, and she has never seriously considered living outside Winchester, despite the commute.

She has also never considered teaching in the town.

"Being brought up in this town and knowing a lot of people here," she explains, "I didn't want to cater to anyone."

However, living outside Hingham did not stop students and parents from thanking her for her work. She has received numerous letters from grateful former students.

A note from one of her first students — a boy whose parents were divorced before it was commonplace — was especially gratifying, she said.

As a child, she recalls, "he needed a lot of attention." In a sense, she became a surrogate mother to the boy.

"I'd ask him all kinds of questions," she says, "and he'd love it. It gave him someone to talk to."

Like most of Sylvester's students, he is now a well-adjusted, successful adult.

And that, she says, is her greatest reward.

"Every child left that room "knowing a little bit more than before," she says proudly.

Winchester Hospital Gets A New 'Meditation Room'

The Meditation Room, highlighted by a beautiful stained-glass window, a gift of the Parkhurst family in memory of Katharine Ryder Parkhurst, was recently dedicated at Winchester Hospital.

Funded by Church Women United of Winchester's "Gift of Faith" campaign, the room was constructed as a result of the generosity and work of many dedicated people.

Sr. Catharine Martin of St. Mary's parish, a member of the Meditation Room Committee, gave the invocation at the dedication. Mary Lou Eugley, chairman of the Meditation Room Committee, gave a brief history of the room's origin and presented Winchester Hospital president Jack Hunter with a check. The Rev. Walter Davis of the First Congregational Church of Winchester gave the benediction.

Church Women United's "Gift of Faith" campaign has raised over $16,000 from more than 100 donors, on its way to its $17,000 goal. Donations are still being accepted.

After completion of the "Gift of Faith" campaign, Church Women United will establish a permanent fund to provide a continuous supply of fresh flowers for the Meditation Room. All donations will be commemorated in the "Book of Remembrance", which is on display in the room.

Stephen Parkhurst, Margaret Parkhurst Sykes and Richard Parkhurst attended the recent dedication of Winchester Hospital's new meditation room. The Parkhurst family donated the stained glass window in honor of Katharine Ryder Parkhurst, who served Winchester Hospital for more than 50 years. The window was designed to reflect her love of flowers.

Two Storybook Romances

Angie and Lewis Warshafsky

By Colleen O'Brien

"We started going out in April of 1981 and got married in August of the same year," recalled a laughing Angie Warshafsky when talking about her marriage to husband Lewis. "It was a whirlwind courtship."

The Warshafsky's of Arlington have a three-and-a-half-year marriage that began with a tale that could leave the likes of Janet Dailey wondering why they didn't think of that.

They originally met when Angie, in the guise of unofficial Welcome Wagon in the building, greeted Lewis, the new neighbor directly above her, with cookies. That was in 1980.

"I always kept an eye on her," says Lewis flashing a grin at his wife. "I was attracted to her from the beginning. It's just something you can't explain, what attracts one person to another."

For a year they met casually as they went about their lives, as neighbors do. Things changed rather abruptly one early morning in April.

"I woke up when I heard this terrible bang at 6 a.m. one morning, then silence," Angie recalls. "I got worried, I had his (Lewis') number from when I welcomed him to the building, so I called him. I asked him if he had heard the noise. He said yes but it had come from downstairs. I said no I thought it was from upstairs."

After hanging up the phone from her early morning call Angie decided that she couldn't go back to sleep. She got up and went to the kitchen and made coffee. On her way back to the bedroom to drink it she spotted the culprit responsible for the morning's disturbance. A picture, in a heavy frame, in her living room had fallen off the wall.

Armed with her new knowledge Angie again called Lewis' apartment. "Can you believe that," Lewis says with a laugh. "She called me twice that early." But Angie remembers that after explaining what had caused the earlier noise Lewis said, "Don't worry, dear, I'll hang it up for you." So began their whirlwind romance.

It may sound like a tale for a Janet Daily novel or a fairy story but it's definitely not just a tale for the young. When they were married in August 1981 both were in their late 60s and already grandparents.

Both Angie and Lewis had been widowed. Angie is the mother of two boys and grandmother of four boys and one girl. "She's the first girl born in our family in 38 years," Angie says.

Lewis is the father of three sons and has eight grandchildren, six boys and two girls.

With such a large family, before adding friends and other relatives, it's hardly

Hannah and Fred Abbe

By BETSY DEMTRAK

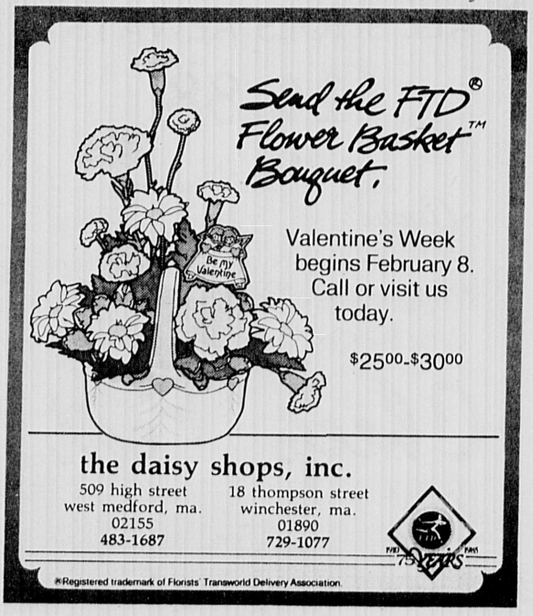

"I could hop a puddle easy," says Hannah Abbe, explaining one of the essential characteristics she attributes to her happy marriage with Fred Abbe.

In addition to knowing when to avoid a puddle or trouble, both agree that a sense of humor and an appreciation of each other's sense of humor are the keys to a successful marriage. And the Abbes' 65 years of matrimony attest to the wisdom of their advice.

The Abbes met in 1907 when she came to Mr. Abee's home as his sister Alice's guest during the girls' Wellesley College vacation. Hannah recalls their formal introduction with its conventional handshake and accompanying demure "It's nice to surprising that the wedding reception for the couple ended seating 100. What might not be expected is that they also decided to have an even larger church wedding with all the trimmings.

Angie had her only granddaughter as a flower girl and a daughter-in-law as her matron of honor. One of Lewis' sons was his best man. The two estimate that as many as 200 friends and wellwishers were at the church.

The couple went from their wedding on to what could be considered the perfect ending to this romance, a cruise aboard the Pacific Princess line to Alaska. For those not in the know, this is the line that boasts the"Love Boat."

Like all good romances though, the honeymoon is not the end but the beginning of the "living happily ever after" part.

Angie and Lewis insist they are no different with their marriage which is happy indeed. Their recipe for a happy marriage? "Love, understanding each other, to enjoy things together and respect," says Angie. "That's important. We've been very happy."

Lewis agrees saying "You give a little and take a little just like the song says."

Their happy marriage is also what helps keep them young according to both Angie and Lewis. Angie volunteers her time to eight organizations and Lewis, retired from his own business, works part time for BayBank in Harvard Square. They both like going to parties, dancing and traveling.

These activities are part of what they feel keeps them young, but the biggest part is what they have together. "It's the largest part of our recipe for staying young," Angie declares.

Hannah and Fred Abbe

meet you," after which she says she "stayed close to Alice."

"He was just a kid still," she says of Fred, who was four years her junior and not yet a contender for her heart. Though feminine, she was a regular tomboy. Often the pair would play catch with a baseball or run races.

In this fashion their friendship continued over the next seven years, witnessing her Wellesley graduation in 1910 and installation as a teacher at Winthrop High School, as well as his entry into Harvard the same year.

1914 marked Mr. Abbe's graduation, Phi Beta Kappa, cum laude, and the beginning of his career in finance, as an investment broker. He worked for two years before entering World War I as member of the Harvard Medical Unit, Base Hospital Five in Boulogne, France.

Though separated by an ocean, they maintained their friendship through letters. A smile on her lips, eyes twinkling, Mrs. Abbe says, "Of course I wanted a soldier to write, and I didn't want to write a stranger so I settled for him."

Their correspondence was aided by Mr. Abbe's friend, Dr. Bock, who was stationed in France with Mr. Abbe. Bock acted as a courier, allowing Mr. Abbe's letters to pass through uncensored, thus Hannah received complete letters and knew where he was and what was occuring.

Back home in Winthrop she read his letters to her class because they painted a realistic picture of the war and she wanted the students to be aware of its importance. Mrs. Abbe admits to editing parts of the letters, reading much but not all of them.

It was through their letters that their friendship subtly changed into love, as they faithfully wrote each other during their two-year separation.

One evening in early September 1919, Hannah answered the door and found Fred, finally returned. They sat together and he pulled off his boot, dumping out of it a diamond ring.

They were married a month later on Oct. 15 and moved to Cambridge. Mr. Abbe became a securities salesman, working in Boston. The Abbe's had two children: a daughter, Margaret, and a son Robert.

The family resided in Cambridge until 1935, Margaret's senior year in high school, when they moved to their present home in Winchester where Mr. and Mrs. Abbe have lived for 50 years.

Both have been active members of the community during their residence in Winchester, involved with First Congregational Church and interested in the Winchester Hospital. On Nov. 8 the new wing of the hospital was dedicated in their name.

Their family has grown to include five grandchildren: Carolyn, Holly, Roberta, Richard, and John; and one great-grandchild, Hannah Ellen, named after her two great-grandmothers.

Though she tops him in both height (Mrs. Abbe refers to herself as "a shy 6-foot lady" and Mr. Abbe stands 5 feet, 5 inches) and age (her 96 beats his 92), theirs has been a long and happy marriage.

Mrs. Abbe tells of Mr. Abbe's penchant for collecting and reciting jokes and limericks, saying he's always trying to be a comedian. At dinner parties he loved to stand at the head of the table and regale their guests with anecdotes. "I was perfectly willing to let him do it and he was just the kind to do so."

Suddenly Mr. Abbe stands up and begins to sing. "There you go Fred," she says, "trying to steal my limelight."

Love Is A Many Splendored Thing

by Cima Star

What do we mean by this word "L-O-V-E", this most elusive and paradoxical of emotions? Each of us knows what we mean when we say it, but does anyone else?

When John says "I love you" to Jane, does he mean the same as "I love you, Mom?"

Motherly love differs from brotherly love, and the Sisterly love of the Feminist Movement takes a semantical leap from a grandfather's love.

Love thy neighbor, we are taught, but can we really love a neighbor, or should we more accurately think of respect.

I love my best friend...I love my sweetheart...I love the sea...my cat...chocolate mousse. Some of us even love spinach. The word is the same; the feelings not even related.

In the romantic sense, love usually implies some exclusivity. We love all of our children, our parents, our siblings...or at least we try. But most of us would not last long in the romantic arena if we told the love of our life, or even our love of the moment, that we loved all of our loves the same.

Yet even when we say, "I love you only, I love you true," our meaning can be obscure.

The Greeks had an extensive vocabulary of love, with words for platonic love through homosexual love, love of country and ideals, to those for romantic love of the opposite sex.

Modern scholars have found that the six basic words for romantic love still apply. A few years ago, Canadian sociologist John Lee surveyed several thousand Canadians, Americans, and Britons. What he found was that the Greeks had it right; that there are six basic forms of love between the sexes, and that these have persisted all the way from ancient Athens to modern Boston or Peoria.

Eros is the love of beauty, the powerful physical attraction that draws lovers at first sight. Erotic lovers delight in sensual intimacy; they speak with rapture of their lovers' hair, skin, fragrance, muscles, eyes. They are fascinated by every aspect of their beloved, wanting to know everyting about them, longing almost to merge their identities. Yet erotic love is evanescent, not often standing the test of time.

Ludic love is playful. Ludic lovers play the field. They are intense, passionate, caring, but they follow the words of Roman poet Ovid, who advised lovers to enjoy love as a pleasant pastime without getting too deeply ensnared.

Storge (stor-gay) is "love without fever, tumult or folly, a peaceful and enchanting affection," according to Lee. Storge love sneaks up unobserved. Couples begin as friends, share ideas and activities, and gradually friendship deepens into love. If they separate as lovers, they remain good friends.

Mania, or theia mania, the madness from the gods, is the love of high drama and tragedy. Manic lovers are

Gold Jewelry For Sophistication And Glamour

Luxury is "in" again . . . glamour is back . . . less is more and never looked better, proving you don't have to be a millionaire to make a rich impression.

Spending your money wisely on quality clothing and accessories. Gold jewelry, for instance. An ultimate value in beauty and wearability.

What's more, important fashion statements are being made in gold, linked to the newest designs in clothing and expressed in a dramatic interplay of color, texture and shape.

The well-suited professional blends a sense of sophistication and propriety with sporting ease. This self-assured look of success combines haberdashery textures, sleek leathers, a dash of color, a touch of femininity.

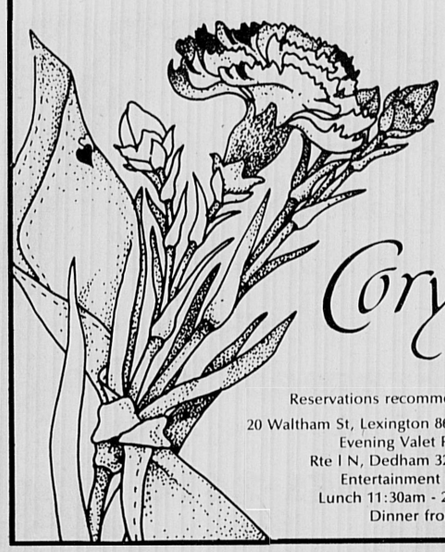

Elegant evenings and rich impressions hallmark the luxurious opulence of the season. Enticing attention is paid to body-conscious, bare-backed gowns making glamorous grand entrances and gala "exits."

Topping off the season's after-six drama are sumptuous gold accessories ranging from discreet to tantalizing — in lustrous or textured finishes, in all-gold or with pearl and precious stone embellishments.

No longer is gold jewelry just a wardrobe basic, a last minute impulse. It has become a vital component of the American women's total image — an image of quality, finesse and self-assured personal style... "richness" without having to be rich.

A Romantic Setting

Intimate, inviting dining rooms, succulently prepared entrées and ever gracious service make us the perfect place for an enchanting evening for two.

Love

consumed by thoughts of the beloved; alternating between peaks of ecstasy when they feel loved in return to depths of despair when they feel rejected. Mania causes insomnia, starvation, suicide; great works of art, agony and joy.

Pragma lovers are practical. They look for the right match, someone whose personality, background, education, religion, career, will complement their own. Once the choice is made, more intense feelings are allowed to develop.

Agape is the classical altruistic love; love that is patient, kind, and never demands reciprocity. Agape is selfless, asking for nothing in return. In his extensive survey, sociologist Lee never found a single case of true Agape love.

Love of whichever hue has its own validity. The problem lies in linguistics. As they say those three little words, each lover has a private meaning.

Eros means "I love to love you, baby," and wants to hear the same. But her Ludic boyfriend probably means, "If I'm not near the girl I love, I love the girl I'm near."

Pragma means, "You're right for me," while maybe dreaming of a joint law practice.

The Manic lover can overwhelm a partner of any other persuasion, for love to the Manic means "I'll die for you, I'll die without you!" and the Storgic simply believes, "I've grown accustomed to his smile."

In 1902, philosopher and writer Henry Finck said, "Love is such a tissue of paradoxes, and exists in such an endless variety of forms and shades that you may say almost anything about it that you please, and it is likely to be true."

Whatever we mean by love, it is a many splendored thing.

Gunstock Ski Area Hosts Ski Jumping Champions

Gunstock Ski Area hosted its 5th annual Winter Carnival on February 1-2-3 adding the presence of the Subaru U.S. National 70 meter Ski Jumping Championships. Also included at the carnival was a community skating party, a snow sculpture contest, mountainside fireworks, a torchlight parade, ski races, nordic tours, helicopter rides, broom hockey, a dance, obstacle race, and a mogul skiing event.

The Subaru Ski Jumping Championships highlighted the weekend and attracted the country's top ski flyers, including a bevy of ex-Olympians who, for the first itme at the Sarajevo games ended up in the winners circle with the European jumpers. The jumping action started at noon on both days.

The Snow Sculpture started Saturday with many entries. The Animal Kingdom was selected as this year's theme. One of the favorites was a lobster all done in red. Gunstock provided the snow and water while the entrants had to provide their own tools.

Included in the free events on the Winter Carnival was a Choral concert, fireworks, a torchlight parade, family skating party complete with bonfire, an obstacle race on skiis, broom hockey, the Austrian Sport Shop Mogul Skiing Championships, and others.

Gunstock Ski Area is located on Route 11A in Gilford, NH. , just two hours from Boston off 193, exit 20. With 20 slopes and trails to choose from, Gunstock has ski runs suitable for every level of ability. There is snowmaking now going on at Gunstock which covers 80% of the ski terrain insuring the best conditions possible.

Though skiing is generally perceived as a young sport in this country there exists but a handful of resorts that command the historical perspective of Gunstock, a 47-year-old ski industry pioneer that has managed to preserve the major elements and tradition of a classic New Hampshire resort. From its noticeable absence of contemporary slickness to a high level of skier services the Gilford resorts atmosphere is tempered both architecturally and philosophically by tradition. Family skiing has been its forte since day one in 1938 and continues to dominate the scene as third generation Gunstock skiiers take to the slopes.

A freeze in lift ticket rates for the past two seasons is designed to cater to the price sensitive family skiers. The addition of discounted early and late rates, prior to Christmas and after March 11th offer savings of up to $5 a ticket. A special low cost midweek senior citizen rate (60 years plus) of $5, two for the price of one ticket special and mid-week Supersavercards that offer a free day of skiing after 5 uses are but a few of the aggressive pricing options available.

Gunstock also hosts its annual Maple Sugar Festival to be held March 15, 16, 17.

A network of over 25 kilometers of cross-country trails weave across the face of Gunstock. Glide through woodlands and fields, listen to only the quiet and be transported to a state of being far removed from everyday life.

Alpha Omega Jewelers A Full-Service Store

Business has been gemlike these days at Alpha Omega Jewelers, The Galeria Mall, 57 JFK Street, due to hard-earned customer confidence, reported owner Raman Handa.

"When I started almost five years ago, I began with a minus in Harvard Square," he said. "Everyone seemed to think that in Boston the jewelers literally gave the merchandise away free, while traditionally in Harvard Square, because of high rents, everything had to be more expensive. They thought there could not possbily be a big-time operation here. But, he smiled, "we're proved that is not true. In four years, our sales have gone up 400%!"

Pointing to glittering showcase after showcase filled with thousands of wedding bands, necklaces, bracelets, charms and Omega, Seiko and Pulsar watches, he said, "people always ask me how I can sell so inexpensively. It's because we deal in high volume."

Buying quality diamonds in large quantities, he explained, enables him to secure important international and domestic connections involving large sums of money, ultimately generating low retail prices.

While most quality jewelers treat the sale of watches as an aside to their more lucrative gem and gold trade — a necessary inconvenience — at Alpha Omega Jewelers, he said — where watch sales account for 40% of the store's profits — selection and prices are kept more competitive than perhaps at any other jewelers in New England.

Here you'll notice the large selection of Seiko & Omega watches and clocks — over 600 different models — at some of the city's lowest discount prices. There's also a wide choice of custom made wedding bands in 14K, 18K & 22K gold. All orders can be executed within a week at no extra charge. A fine assortment of diamonds, sapphires and ruby engagement rings, gold chains, earrings, pearls and more is displayed.

Mr. Handa is president of the prestigious Lexington Jewelers Exchange, a member of the New England Appraisers Association, and a business associate within the Boston Jewelers Building.

All diamonds may be scrupulously examined on the premises through high powered microscopic equipment. The customer may select from more than 1000 diamond rings on hand or set the stone of her choice in a custom setting. From more than 500 wedding bands in stock, one may choose to vary the style or the color of the gold.

A full-service store boasting customer service, Alpha Omege Jewelers also services watch and jewelry repairs, performs ear piercings, makes appraisals and is licensed by Cambridge to buy gold.

Diamond Lore

The ancient Greeks believed that the diamond could cure insanity, dispell worry, and curb anger.

Even then, the diamond, symbol of modesty, purity and innocence, was said to further domestic bliss by keeping tempers tame in ancient households.

Today the diamond remains the transcendent symbol of love between husband and wife, says the Jewelry Industry Council and, though its significance is now symbolic, its magical beauty is still a unique prescription for love.

Quartz Watch Accurate To 60 Seconds A Year

Accuracy within 60 seconds a year makes the quartz watch the latest word in modern timekeeping. Quartz watches derive their famed accuracy from a tiny bar of quartz crystal that vibrates thousands of times per second (as compared to the five to 10 vibrations per second of the balance wheel of a mechanical watch). These vibrations are divided down to a much lower frequency which regulates the time display system, reveals the Jewelry Industry Council.

Quartz analog timepieces use the traditional watch face to show the time. Electromagnets or tiny synchronous motors control the wheels and gears which turn the hands on the dial.

Quartz digitals, also called solid-state or all electronic watches, have no moving parts. A digital electronic display replaces the conventional dial. There are two types of solid-state digitals: the L.E.D. and the L.C.D.

The L.E.D. displays time by means of light-emitting diodes, dots or bars which glow at the touch of a button. Since relatively large amounts of current are needed, it shows time only on command.

The L.C.D. (liquid crystal display) watch slows the time when a light-sensitive liquid is electrically stimulated. Continuous display is possible with the L.C.D. because very little power is consumed.

Some quartz watches will run up to five years on a single battery. It's hard to imagine a watch better suited to seeing man into the space age.

Critic's Corner

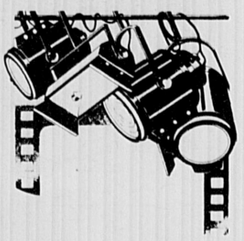

PENN AND HUTTON

THE FALCON AND THE SNOWMAN

Uneven docu-drama about two young men from affluent California families who sold government secrets to the Russians and were convicted of espionage. Director John Schlesinger relates the details of this true crime story with persistent energy. Yet, various unanswered questions arise as to the spies' motives which leave the film in a muddled state. Timothy Hutton and Sean Penn give realistic and dynamic performances as the two chums turned traitors. (R)

© 1985 CINEMAN SYNDICATE

BEVERLY HILLS COP

Eddie Murphy, as a brash, street-wise, Detroit detective, shakes up posh Beverly Hills in his quest to find the killer of a friend. Murphy engagingly turns on his cool charm, pulls off numerous impersonations and teaches the local by-the-book cops some effective police tactics. The bloody ending is heavy handed, but there are ample laughs and thrills for thorough enjoyment—Murphy style. Also with Lisa Eilbacher and Judge Reinhold. (R)

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with .58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over — from Maine to Rhode Island to New York — but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

We Promote Assistant Managers At The Earliest Possible Convenience.

Already New England's fastest growing convenience store chain with sales of $60 million, Christy's is continuing its dramatic expansion—opening many new stores per month in 1985. And that creates challenging opportunities for dynamic individuals to help drive our growth.

Days

As a Day Assistant Manager, you'll assume a key role with Christy's, handling all paperwork and bank deposits, ordering products and controlling inventory, and hiring and scheduling all part time help. You'll develop and utilize solid merchandising and marketing skills to increase your store's profitability. And you'll be just one promotion away from managing your own store.

Nights

Assistant Night Managers enjoy a night differential and play a slightly different role, including cashiering and stock work. You'll have a clear career path to Day Assistant Manager and on to Manager of your own store, and our fast growth guarantees that those advancement opportunities will be waiting for you.

Both positions offer excellent salaries and complete benefits including: dental, medical, life and disability insurance; paid vacations, holidays and sick days; guaranteed year-end bonus; and profit sharing.

The convenient route to a great career.

INFLATION IS INFLATION

During our generation, the inflation rate has bounced between 4% and 20%. That's a lot of bouncing and the bottom figure always seems to be higher than the last bottom. Let's not kid ourselves. Whether it's 4% or 20%, inflation is inflation and unless you do something to protect your hard-earned money from losing its value, you lose.

If you hide $1,000 in your mattress, while you sleep on it for ten years at a 5% inflation rate, the $1,000 will be worth only half of its buying power when you remove it from the mattress. On the other hand, if you purchase your home for $100,000 when you bought your mattress, the value of your home would have appreciated 50% to $150,000 while you incubated your cash wad in the mattress.

Even better news. Your house probably went up MORE than the inflation rate because home values always rise faster than the cost of living. Last year, values rose from 2 to 3 times more than inflation. You don't have to be a genius to make money owning your own home.

Town, State Sign Agreement For Low-To-Moderate Income Housing

By NANCY PICK

Winchester and the state signed a housing pact on Monday afternoon in Boston.

That pact carries both responsibilities and rewards.

It commits the town to providing at least 10 units of subsidized housing.

And it is expected to liberate $800,000 in state funds, frozen last fall when the state judged Winchester's housing "unreasonably restrictive."

Four people put their John Hancocks on the agreement: Amy S. Anthony, Secretary of the state's Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD); Selectmen Chairman Mark A. Lombardi; Winchester Housing Authority Chairman John J. Regan; and Planning Board Chairman Harry Lindmark Jr.

"The town was very delighted to be able to reach a close with EOCD, and we're ready to go forward," said Selectman Wade Welch, who attended the signing at the Saltonstall Building near the State House.

Welch said Secretary Anthony was "most gracious" at meeting.

Anthony had enforced Executive Order No. 215, which directs state agencies to withhold funds from towns with "unreasonably restrictive" housing.

EOCD tied up a $740,000 grant to refurbish Winchester Center.

A second chunk of money, $60,000 for sewer improvements, was also threatened by agency.

Welch said enforcing the executive order is "not only her privilege, it's her duty."

Police, Fire Station Construction Lags

Workers clean up debris at windblown Mount Vernon st. site. Portions of scaffolding and support beams blew over during Tuesday's storm. It's likely to delay the project further. (Staff Photo by Amy Sweeney)

By NANCY PICK

Scaffolding for the town's new police and fire station toppled like Tinker Toys in 50 mile-per-hour gales early Wednesday morning, setting the project back a week or more, according to job superintendent Peter Carbone.

He said the building, once slated for late June completion, may not be ready until September, due to a variety of setbacks.

Wednesday morning's gusts blasted down scaffolding just put up the day before, along with wooden supports, plastic construction canvas, and sections of cinder block.

"Without steel rods this wall would have come down," Carbone said, pointing to the west side of the new police station.

While workers hammmered apart bent scaffolding pipes and pulled in dangling boards, Carbone explained that the contractor would have to absorb the costs of the destruction.

"He has no choice," Carbone stated. "What came down has to go back up again," he said.

He said he believes the firm, Cumberland Construction Co. of Woonsocket, R.I., has insurance to cover the wind damage.

The police and fire station project involves both renovation of the old buildings and a spacious new addition. It will include state-of-the-art communications equipment, offices, a firing range, an exercise room, and prisoner cells with tempered plastic doors instead of bars to guard against suicides.

Officially, the completion date for the complex project had already been pushed back two weeks to mid-July, due to unforeseen work, according to Walter J. Tonaszuck, chairman of the town's Permanent Building Committee.

And even before the wind storm, Carbone estimated that construction was six weeks behind schedule.

He cited a late start, the complexity of the project, and last week's cruel winter weather for the lag.

Meanwhile, a site architect said the project had been understaffed and plagued by construction errors.

Unless the contractor can catch up this spring, police and firefighters will face a summer without their new station.

"I think it's a disgrace," said Selectmen Chairman Mark Lombardi in a Tuesday interview.

"It's one of the biggest flops Winchester has faced," he said. "We've got one of the mildest winters going and they say they're two months behind," the Selectman grumbled.

Acting Town Manager John H. Ciarcia reacted more cautiously to the project's delay. He said the situation is "too premature right now to assess.

"It's not unusual for any job to be behind," stated Ciarcia. Several months remain before the deadline, he pointed out, and the contractor still might make up for lost time.

Both the construction foreman and a project architect said construction got off to a slow start, but they cited different reasons.

"In my opinion, the contractor started late," said Jay Poswolsky from the Boston architectural firm Brett Donham & Tadlig Sweeney.

Building Spokesman Says Sept. Opening Possible

And yet, despite the bitter weather, architect Poswolsky said "in the last week or two things have really picked up.

"Almost every major trade was on the job," Poswolsky stated, as he perused the week's progress report.

Building Blunders

Firefighters and other town of-

"They did not start expeditiously and they did not staff the job expeditiously," he said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Carbone denied that the late start was the fault of the contractor. He declined to specify the reason for the delay.

As for staffing, the project superintendent said he had "from one to 10" workers on the job, depending on the building sequence and the weather.

And the weather posed a problem last week.

"We are at the mercy of the elements," Carbone said Friday, when the wind chill hit 30 below zero. "This particular week has pushed us back a week or better," he stated.

"Our basic problem is ouside (cinder) block work," said the foreman. "Our specifications call for the blocks to be heated for 48 hours after they're laid. The intense cold poses us a problem," he explained.

Carbone said construction of the second floor has been held up by the cruelty of Mother Nature.

High School Student Test Scores Are Tops

By ERIC BLOM

Winchester high school seniors have continued Winchester's tradition of scoring above the national average in an important exam — the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) — used to determine college admissions, according to a report released recently by the School Dept.

In the verbal section of the SAT exam, Winchester youths scored 54 points above the national average, the report states. They scored an average of 480 as opposed to 426 nationally on the test that has a range from 200 to 800.

Winchester's math score stood at 513 while the nation averaged 471, a 42-point margin in Winchester's favor. This is particularly significant since 91 percent of the town's seniors took the test (the national average is 33 percent), indicating that more Winchester students with only a marginal interest in attending college took the test than in other states.

The success Winchester has had in standardized testing is primarily a result of community values that motivate students and support the school system, according to David Ackerman, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

"The community has very high expectations for its children and its school system," he says. "Students come to us with high aspirations on their own part. A significant percentage of our children are self-motivated."

He acknowledges that some thought is given to standardized tests when the curriculum is designed, but it is not the focus of that process.

"We don't teach for tests," says Anthony DiBiase, director of guidance at Winchester High School. "That's bad education."

Nevertheless, the system offers an English course at the high school designed to review the basic skills that the SAT tests. Other students participate in the AMITY program, a night course specifically designed to help students prepare for the SAT. It explains test-taking techniques as well as giving review for basic skills.

For many students, the three-hour-long test and the worry surrounding it is a traumatic experience. This is because they overrate the test's importance, DiBiase says.

He notes that a student's grades are much more important for college admissions than SAT scores. Test results are lumped into a category which includes leadership and personality, all of which are less important than grades.

The colleges realize that thousands of hours in class are more important than six hours in the test room, taking SAT and achievement exams, DiBiase says.

He acknowledges, however, that most students are "scared" of the tests and terrified if they do poorly.

"They (the students) say they're not going to get into college," he relates, "and it's not true. In America, there is a college for everyone.

"I tell them to relax," he adds. "I even tell them to go out the night before the test."

Ironically, says DiBiase, one of the worst things a student with poor grades can do may be to score highly on the SAT.

"You can have kids with very high SAT's and lousy grades," DiBiase says, "and that spells a four letter word 'lazy.' They've got that basic intellectual aptitude, but they have missed out on the base of math" and other subjects in high school.

"That's really an eye-opener for admissions people," he adds.

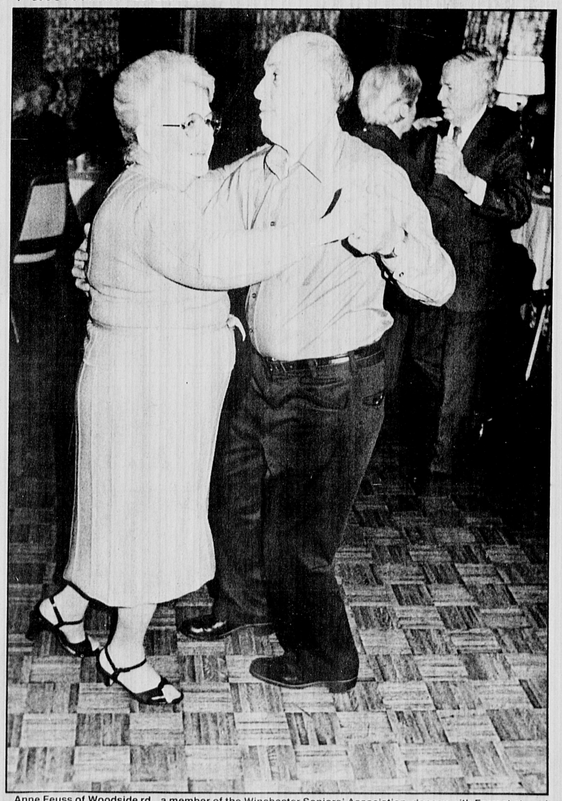

A better indicator of success in college is the achievement test, designed to test a student's knowledge of some subject he has studied in school, according to DiBiase.

In this area, Winchester produced mixed results. Some tests stood above the national average while others were below. Overall, the achievement tests were 24 points below the national average and five points above that of the state. Neither figure is statistically significant since the tests have a 30 point range of error, the report states.

The Jan. 22 document also shows that Winchester students in lower grades have superior ability in basic skills when compared to students in other towns. However, there is some concern about an increase in third

Scout's Honor

Winchester Boy Scouts Keep Glowing Tradition

By ERIC W. BLOM

Mike Saraco squished as he shifted from one tired foot to the other. He felt rain soak his knickers and saw rivers cascade from his Smokey-The-Bear hat.

Shivering, he tried again to light the brush he had collected.

At that moment, nearly 50 years ago, the Selectman's biggest concern was getting his flint and steel to spark. Finally, it did, and Saraco (now 62) started his fire despite the rain.

He feels that he could do it again today, just as he can quote the Boy Scout oath and laws from memory.

Another scout, Dr. Robert Smith, 72, said he "learned more about first aid in scouting than in medical school" at Harvard.

"I still use many of the bandages I learned to use in scouts," he says.

"I'm still one of the best knot tiers around," asserts Thomas Raphael, 62, a chemist for the Polaroid Co.

The Boy Scouts of America was founded 75 years ago this month, and these three Winchester men, like millions of others across the United States, have taken much from their scouting experience.

They join thousands of others in town who went through the scout program. Many families have a scouting tradition that dates back three or four generations, and the Boy Scouts have remained popular despite changing times.

Donald Van Roosen, 61, a chemical engineer, has been active in the organization since he was a scout in the 1930s. He says that while some aspects of scouting have changed, the basic theory of scouting remains the same as it was years ago.

"That's the paradox of some of these institutions." He compares the institution of scouting to the Catholic Church. Both, he said, have seen changes in practice while maintaining basic belief systems.

"I can remember going out and learning how to wave a signal flag from one hill to another," he recalls.

"It would be pretty archaic and obviously not appropriate to do that today."

Another requirement — that a boy know how to stop a runaway horse in order to qualify for a safety badge — has also gone by the wayside.

"Now they don't talk about runaway horses, they talk about runaway atoms," quips Robert Hempe, Council Executive for the Minuteman Council of Boy Scouts of America.

Areas such as computer science and electronics have joined traditional subjects such as first aid among the 123 possible merit badges.

Fire Guts Attic, Teens Shout Alarm

By NANCY PICK

A 9-month-old baby was safely evacuated from a burning home on Charles rd. Sunday afternoon when an attic fire caused an estimated $24,000 worth of damage.

Thanks in part to alert boys in the neighborhood, Susan Reynolds was able to get her three children, Reggie, 14, Philip, 11, and Leslie, 9 months old, safely out of the duplex.

"My nerves were the only casualty," said Reynolds in an interview Monday.

Reynolds credited Thomas Kenvin of Charles st. and two teenagers selling candy door-to-door with shouting out a warning before the family smelled smoke.

The teenagers, Sean Way, 15, of Jamaica Plain, and Donald Johnson, 17, of Mattapan, were in the neighborhood Sunday afternoon to raise money for a group called American Teens, said police officer Paul DeLuca. "I just wanted to see those kids got the credit where they deserved it," the policeman said.

To battle the one-alarm blaze, firefighters chopped a hole in the roof.

Rafters, floor joints and exterior siding were destroyed by the fire, officials said, and the entire house suffered some smoke and water damage.

After the fire, several waterlogged ceilings were taken down, said Reynolds, who rents the duplex from Arnold Mason of Boston.

Firefighters listed youths playing with matches as the probable cause of the blaze.

Reynold's son, Philip, and a friend had been up in the crawlspace shortly before the fire broke out, Reynolds said. The two youths climbed up there because they "smelled something," said Reynolds, and then came down.

She said they were on the second floor when the fire broke out.

"I certainly know they didn't do anything intentional," Reynolds stated.

Arsonist Destroys School Classroom

Arsonists fire-bombed Bartlett School at 1:20 Sunday morning, destroying one classroom and causing extensive smoke damage throughout the school.

Firefighters estimated the destruction at $10,000.

"It was a real tragedy," said Norine T. Casey, principal of the private elementary school on Samoset rd.

The fire was started by three Molotov cocktails thrown through a classroom window, firefighters said. One fire bomb, described as a German beer bottle filled with a flammable liquid, was found intact on the premises.

Firefighters tentatively identified the liquid as turpentine or paint thinner.

Casey said arsonists also struck Bartlett classrooms about six years ago, when the school was located at 83 Church st. That time, said Casey, the damage was less serious.

The principal said the arsonists, all minors, were caught and prosecuted.

Last Sunday morning, members of the Albiani family called the Fire Dept. when they saw "a fire ball," Casey said. The Albianis live near the school.

According to police, neighbors said they saw two youths running away from the school toward the top of Girard rd.

Police have declined to name any suspects.

Armenian District Group Elects Slate Of Officers

At its first meeting of 1985, the Armenian General Benevolent Union District Committee elected officers for the current term. Souren Tashjian will lead the District Committee as president. Completing his executive board are Peter Zakarian, vice president, Raffi Yeghiayan, secretary, Jocko Ananian, treasurer, and Winchester's Alice Mirak, publicity.

The key project which the District Committee members and chapter made final at the February meeting. The district includes several Winchester members besides Mirak.

presidents are actively addressing is the exterior refurbishing of the gracious Victorian grand house, now beginning its second quarter century as the AGBU New England Center.

The Winchester Star POLICE LOG

Tuesday, Feb. 12

• An Emerson rd. man reported a ladder leaning against his house at 1 p.m. "He did not realize his wife had hired a man to fix the chimney," officers reported.

• A Highland ave. man told police he was punched in the face by a stranger for no apparent reason at the Winchester train station. He went home after the incident, police reported.

Monday, Feb. 11

• An 85-year-old Somerville man crashed his Plymouth into a utility pole at 12:25 a.m., police reported.

Although the man complained of neck pain after the accident, authorities said he refused medical aid.

The elderly driver said he lost control of his car when an car passed him on Cambridge st., according to police reports. He then made a U-turn into the oncoming lane of traffic and hit the utility pole, damaging the front end of his car.

Officers said the pole was slightly askew after the accident.

Sunday, Feb. 10

• At 3:40 a.m. Robert G. Welchlin Jr., 19, of Cross st. was arrested in connection with reports of false fire alarms and on charges of driving while under the influence of alcohol and transporting alcohol as a minor, police reported.

Firefighters responded to five false alarms throughout town on Sunday, about two hours after arsonists set fire to the Bartlett School. (See related story.)

Authorities stopped a gray Camaro at the intersection of High st. and Taft dr. following reports that a car matching that description had been seen in the vicinity when an earlier alarm had sounded.

Police also confiscated 12 bottles of Lowenbrau beer from the car.

A 19-year-old Somerville youth who was a passenger in Welchlin's car was also arrested on charges of being a minor in possession of alcohol.

• Police stopped a white Jaguar XJ-C on Church st. after a radar detector clocked the car at 43 mph in a 30 mph zone.

The driver, a Medford woman, was cited on charges of speeding and driving with a suspended license, police reported.

Saturday, Feb. 9

• Police responded to reports of a disturbance at a Main st. home just past 3 a.m., where they found one man with facial bruises and two front teeth knocked out and a second with a bloody nose.

The fight apparently stemmed from a family argument, police reported.

• A 19-year-old Billerica man was arrested at 9 p.m. on charges of possessing alcohol under the age of 20, police reported, after authorities discovered an open case of beer in the man's blue Monte Carlo.

The man was also cited for driving an unregistered and uninsured car, for attaching license plates from a different car, and for driving with a defective headlight.

Friday, Feb. 8

• An intruder apparently used a crowbar to break into a Worthen rd. home between 1 and 2 p.m., police reported. Although dresser drawers had been ransacked and a jewelry box moved, the resident reported no missing property.

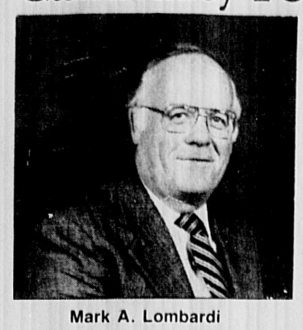

The intruder pried open a wooden porch door and broke a small window to unlock an inside door, police said, evidently cutting his hand in the process. A small patch of dried blood was found on the door frame, authorities said.

• Police escorted a 23-year-old Highland ave. man to his home at 3:45 in the afternoon in connection with reports of a drunken man on Mt. Vernon st.

• A Somerville man in a brown 1973 Ford was cited at 10 a.m. in connection with driving an uninsured and unregistered car, driving with license plates attached from a different car, and with not displaying his license plate properly, police reported.

Police confiscated his license plate for evidence.

Lombardi Announces Candidacy For Selectmen

Mark A. Lombardi

(The following announcement of candidacy was received from Mark A. Lombardi by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

In announcing my candidacy for re-election to the Winchester Board of Selectmen, I would like to thank you, my fellow citizens, for your support and encouragement over the past three years. I look forward to your continued efforts on my behalf in the March 26 town election.

During the three years that I have been honored to serve as your selectman, and the past year as chairman, there have been many physical changes in our community and I take pride in being part of this growth and revitalization.

I would like to continue to serve and to bring my experience to bear on the multiple challenges that we are facing such as housing, the Woburn Loop, a new Town Manager and the opening of the reservoir area for recreational purposes.

My qualifications and expertise include active participation in both civic and community organizations. I served a full term on the Finance Committee and have been a Town Meeting member for 15 years.

In addition, I am a past-commodore of the Winchester Boat Club; a past-director of the Winchester Rotary Club; a past president of Friends of the Winchester Band and Orchestra; and am a Marine veteran of World War II.

I have lived in Winchester for 35 years and my wife, the former Pauline Ferro, has lived here all her life. We have three children; Mark, Kevin and Mrs. Denise Randall; and three grandchildren.

Town Clerk Urges Voter Registration

It may not be the most glamorous of races, but the town election on March 26 is really where every individual vote has the most wallop.

One vote can — and has — made the difference in who will be Selectman, Assessor, School Committee member and so on.

Think it's not important? These boards set town policy, the tax rate, determine the education local children will receive, the zoning that will allow (or prohibit) certain things from going on in your back (or front) yard — in other words, they directly affect day-to-day life.

Need to register to vote? The Town Clerk's staff is making it easier and easier. Of course, they're open any weekday from 8:30 to 5 — but they're holding some special registration hours, too.

They'll come in on Feb. 19 — Tuesday night — from 7 to 8, and on Saturday, March 2, from noon to 8 p.m.

And for "Deadline Annies," on the last possible day you can register (and still vote in the March 26 elections, that is) — Wednesday, March 6 — Carolyn Ward and her crew will hang out until 10 at night to take registrations. They sure would like a few people to drop by and sign on the dotted line.

State Offers Tax Form Help For Blind Residents

The Massachusetts Commission for The Blind, a state agency, is sponsoring a tax assistance program for blind citizens of the commonwealth. Representatives from the Internal Revenue Service and the Massachusetts Tax Office will be at the commission's Boston Office on Thursday, Feb. 21, to provide information and help blind people fill out their tax forms.

As an additional service, the tax specialists will also answer phone questions. To make an appointment, or to ask questions, by phone, call the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind at 727-5550.

The Massachusetts Commission for the Blind provides vocational rehabilitation, independent living and social services to 22,000 legally blind persons.

Resident Wants Town To Keep Curbs Free

By NANCY PICK

Franklin Stevenson of Nelson st. gave Selectmen a piece of his mind at Monday night's board meeting.

He wants snow piles removed from the town's curbs and walkways, and he claims the town's Dept. of Public Works (DPW) has been shirking its duties.

Meanwhile, DPW officials say they're trying to save taxpayers' dollars by keeping snow removal to a minimum.

Selectman Michael Saraco stood up for the Public Works officials on Monday. "These last few years we've saved considerable money," he said.

He said Dominic Serratore, DPW director, "has issued a policy that he will not remove snow other than in normal working hours" unless there's an emergency.

Ironically, it seems the snow plows are the major culprits, because they create piles of snow between the street and the sidewalk.

Stevenson stated that such snow piles have blocked access to town buildings and stores, making it particularly difficult for the elderly and the disabled to get around Winchester.

One of Stevenson's neighbors suffers from serious arthritis, he said, and has a terrible time negotiating the heaps of snow in the town center.

In one case, "I had to beat down the snow so she could get over the snowpile," Stevenson recounted.

"The only place you can get to a store is where the crosswalks are," he added. "This is ridiculous."

Edward J. Murphy, operations manager for the town's Highway Dept., admitted that Winchester hasn't picked up any snow so far this winter.

Murphy said the town has plowed the streets and cleared the sidewalks with snow-blowers, but only removes curbside snow piles in an emergency.

Last week, seven inches of snow fell on Winchester, Murphy said, not enough to prompt such a pick-up.

Had a second storm been forecasted in the wake of the first, Murphy explained, the DPW might have decided differently.

Snow piles have blocked access to town buildings and stores, making it particularly difficult for the elderly and disabled to get around Winchester.

Instead, he said Tuesday, "We've got rain today which I think will get it (snow) all away."

This year's winter has been mild, Murphy pointed out.

To date, just 26 inches of snow have blanketed Winchester this season, as compared to 53 inches for a similar period in 1983 and a whopping 81 inches in 1978, when the famous blizzard hit.

And the small quantity of fluffy stuff may save the town a lot of money.

This winter, Winchester has spent $2,660 to hire extra-heavy snow plows, versus $6,390 last winter.

And the town has saved about $15,000 in overtime pay for DPW employees, as compared to a year ago.

Still, Acting Town Manager John H. Ciarcia warned against banking on surpluses from the town's ice and snow allocation before the winter is past.

"Right now it looks good," he said, "but don't start couting on it till you get through February at least."

If there's money left over, said Ciarcia, "a good percentage of that budget would revert to the general fund," which would in turn help to keep Winchester's tax rate down.

Free Tax Guides Made Available

Cong. Edward J. Markey has made available free Internal Revenue Service (IRS) tax guides for individuals and small businesses in the 7th Congressional District.

Markey urges anyone interested in obtaining a copy of either of the guides to stop by his Boston office at Room 2100A of the JFK Federal Building in Boston's Government Center or his Medford office at 464B Salem st. in Haines Square.

The tax guide for individuals being offered by Markey, "Your Federal Income Tax," was created by the IRS to aid taxpayers in the preparation of their federal returns. The publication explains tax laws and regulations pertaining to salaries, interest dividends, withholding, tax credits, income adjustments and exclusions. The guide provides examples of tax filings and offers a step-by-step explanation of the 1984 income tax reforms.

Markey emphasized three items of particular interest to individual taxpayers in the new 1984 tax laws:

- The tax rate for all brackets has been reduced for 1984;
- Contributions to your Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA) for 1984 can be made no later than April 15, 1985;
- Beginning in 1984, the tax credit for the elderly is modified.

"The Tax Guide for Small Business" contains information on federal tax laws that apply to businesses. The guide offers valuable insights into income, excise and employment taxes for individuals, partnerships and corporations.

Markey emphasized that the Tax Reform Act of 1984 contains amendments to important rules which affect small corporations and their shareholders.

"It is important to our government, and even much more important to individual taxpayers and businesses, that annual tax returns are filed completely and correctly. These tax guides will help ensure that this is accomplished.

"I invite anyone who would like a copy of these free tax guides to visit my district offices in Boston or Medford," Markey said.

Markey's Boston office is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; the Medford office is open on Thursdays from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m., Fridays from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Young Parents Career Course

Employment Resources Inc. is accepting applicants for a new program called "Beginnings: The Young Parents' Career Directions Project." The goal of the program is to assist young parents and expectant parents, ages 16 to 21, who have dropped out of high school and would like to obtain a GED, explore vocational options and participate in occupational skill training leading to employment.

The program is opened to both males and females regardless of marital status.

Applicants must be residents of Arlington, Belmont, Burlington, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Revere, Somerville, Stoneham, Wakefield, Watertown, Wilmington, Winchester, Winthrop or Woburn.

Program staff will work closely with participants, offering a high level of support and flexibility. They will help to coordinate the delivery of other services through the Department of Public Welfare, the Department of Social Services and other agencies as needed. Day care and transportation assistance as well as a weekly training allowance will also be provided.

After a few weeks of counseling sessions, classes in preparation for the General Equivalency Diploma (GED) will begin. Classes will be held three days per week, four hours per day. Home-based tutoring will be available for pregnant youth and new mothers as needed.

Vocational exploration activities will begin several weeks later in addition to GED prep.

Once a particular area of interest has been selected, "job shadowing" will complete the vocational exploration. This component will allow participants to "shadow" an employee working in a particular career field for a period of 100 hours.

ERI plans to serve 20 participants in its first group which is scheduled for February. Anyone who is interested in the program should call Beginnings' Coordinator, Carol Gerrit at 492-0591.

Parish Lenten Lecture Series

Immaculate Conception Parish of Winchester/Woburn is presenting "From Sinai To The Cross: A Lenten Scripture Series on Christ the Eucharist and You."

The program of five talks will focus on the biblical/liturgical significance of the Eucharist. The series will explore how the Eucharist is a sharing in the Glory of Christ — through examining God's plan for salvation, prepared for from the beginning of time, revealed in the Old Testament and fulfilled in the New Testament.

The sessions will be held on Tuesdays, Feb. 26, and continue March 5, 19, 26 and April 2 at the Immaculate Conception School, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The program will be conducted by the Rev. Leonard J. Tighe, a diocesan priest assigned to Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain. Tighe has been a teacher in adult education for many years, specializing in the prayer life, spiritual development, and scripture; Eastern/Western mystic theology; liturgical art; and Marian theology.

The Rev. John H. O'Donnell, Pastor of Immaculate Conception, welcomes back Tighe, who recently led a scripture series at the parish. "I invite all to attend Father Tighe's Lenten talks and join in learning about and reflecting on Jesus the Eucharist, the Bread of Life," he said.

The Immaculate Conception School is located on Sheridan circle, off Main st. (Route 38), on the Woburn/Winchester line. The fee for the five sessions is $10. Participants are asked to bring a Bible. Refreshments will be available.

The Lenten talks are the second in a continuing series of Scripture Studies at Immaculate Conception.

These programs have been dedicated to the memory of Reverend Kingsley E. Dalpadado, OMI, who was in residence at Immaculate for two years. Rev. Dalpadado was a Biblical scholar and author, whose life was dedicated to spreading the Word of God.

League To Discuss Prison crowding

The Winchester League of Women Voters will discuss prison overcrowding at its Feb. 26 and Feb. 28 meetings.

The public is invited to attend. For more information, call Marie Gosnell at 729-9046. The Feb. 26 meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m., while the Thursday meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m.

Cindy Von Freyman of Winchester receives a birthday present from Channel 2 auction manager Edye Baker at a recent donor brunch. The brunch was held to honor past contributors to the auction, which will mark its 20th birthday on May 31.

St. Mary's Course

Program offerings for Lent begin on Tuesday, Feb. 26, with the first session of a five-week course: "Breakaway - Steps To a More Reflective Life." The course, which will run for five consecutive Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9 p.m. will focus on contemporary spirituality and include group discussion, audiovisual and prayer experiences.

Two special lectures during Lent include "Women in Today's Church" on Wednesday, March 13, at 7:30 p.m. The speaker will be Sr. Mary Hennessey, of the Harvard Divinity School faculty. The other lecture, "Understanding Your Teenager" will be held on Thursday, March 21, at 7:30 p.m. The speaker is Rev. James DiGiacomo, an international expert and author on adolescence.

Public T.V. Benefit Auction

Renowned wine expert and auctioneer Patrick Grubb, M.W., will conduct a "Fine and Rare Wine Auction" on Sunday, March 31, at The Ritz Carlton Hotel in Boston under the auspices of the Channel 2 Auction.

The benefit will include an informal wine tasting and reception (5 to 7 p.m.) preceding the auction, which will get underway at 7 p.m. This event is an extension of the annual Channel 2 Auction, a major fund-raising project for WGBH-TV, Boston's nationally-acclaimed Public Broadcasting Service station.

Richard L. Elia of Winchester, co-chairman of wine events for the Channel 2 Auction, said: "This is our first effort of a 'live' wine auction, supplementing wine presentations during the on-air auction, and we are delighted with the response from so many generous donors. Guests attending this auction will find a splendid array of some rare and older vintages from 1929 up to 1970. And it is truly an honor to have Patrick Grubb with us to share his knowledge and expertise."

Among the wines that will be presented for bid are an 1897 bottle of Mumm's Champagne; Madeira Bual, Colheita 1915, and a Louis XIII rare cognac — and a rare vertical selection of Stag's Leap Cabernet Sauvignon ranging from 1972 to 1979.

The wine invitation committee includes Elia, and auction wine co-chairman Bradford Rowell; Anthony Athanas, Roger Berkowitz, Julia Child, Kathleen Cornelia, Nathaniel Dexter, Barbara Edelman, Frederick Ek, Harvey Finkel, Todd Helmus, Mrs. David Ives, Carol Kennedy, Carmen Martignetti, Henry Schielein, Randy Sheahan, Anthony Spinazzola, Chile Sullivan and Michael Tyle. Ticket donations are $75 per person and are tax deductible.

Guest auctioneer Grubb was until recently head of the wine department at Sotheby's of London. In 1958, he became the youngest Master of Wine to pass the examinations and in 1976 was elected a Chairman of the Institute of Masters of Wine.

A special catalogue for this evening of Fine and Rare Wine Auction will be prepared and edited by Todd Helmus, and will be available prior to March 31.

Support Group Offered

A support group for divorced and widowed persons will be offered at the First Congregational Church starting Tuesday, Feb. 26, at 7:30 p.m.

Sponsored by the Winchester Interfaith Council, the group will meet in the Palmer Room every other Tuesday for seven sessions.

This group will be led by the Rev. Joel Baehr, an ordained unitarian minister and a pastoral psychotherapist with 15 years of clinical and pastoral experience with such groups. There will be a charge for the program.

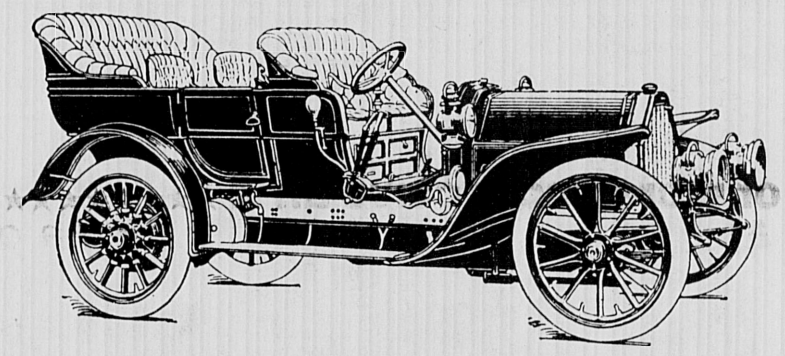

For more informaton, call Susan Cartmell of the First Congregational Church at 729-9180 or Joel Baehr at 721-2191.

School Committee Adopts Graduation Requirements, Makes Other Recommendations

In a brief 90-minute session on Tuesday, the School Committee adopted graduation requirements, reviewed the new budget and voted on grade point averaging — all issues that have long been the topic of lengthy discussions.

The issues were briefly debated before the sparse audience and were all unanimously approved.

"I don't want anyone to think we're just railroading this through," said a cautious Supt. Charles Mitsakos after the board's vote on graduation rules. "We have debated this many times before and are not at all taking this lightly," he added.

Among the graduation requirements are completion of English courses in grades 9 through 12, two years of math and science, four years of physical education, and achievement in the minimum competency tests in reading, writing and math.

Previously, the board has debated the proposed plan to require students to take a fine arts course. However, the policy was included in the approved requirements on Tuesday.

Overall, beginning with the class of 1989, students must have attained a total of 100 credits for work done in grades 9 through 12.

Regarding the grade point average issue, the board agreed to enforce a policy it considered in early January. The board voted to allow students' grades to be rated on a weighted and non-weighted basis, with students being given the option of which rating results would be submitted to college admissions officials.

Mitsakos reported that administrators have worked closely with state education officials on the matter, and that Winchester's system is closely aligned with a "field test" which the state educators are considering.

The grade point average is a measure by which students are ranked within their class according to academic achievement. It is one means by which the nation's colleges and universities select potential students.

The Winchester grade point average options system will take effect with the current freshman class, officials said.

In other action, the board agreed to forward the $10,518,831 school budget request and the $225,000 athletics request to Selectmen. The budget is 1.4 percent higher than last year's budget request.

The board reviewed the athletics portion of the budget, as well as the special needs requests and the catchall "systems services" budget.

The systems services budget is up $60,000 over last year, mainly because of telephone costs, according to board member Dr. Roger Baumann.

The athletics budget, according to member Stephen Powers, was mostly affected by the multiyear busing contract. Powers noted that the system is expecting an increase in participation in high school athletics, which he said he considers a good sign despite declining enrollment.

Local Woman Leaves For Ethiopia

Enkutatash Kebede, 36, is leaving today.

She's leaving because she has to leave. Her homeland is calling — and she simply can't tune out the cries of dying children and mothers in Ethiopia.

The Winchester resident returned here last month after a five-week journey among the sad and starving of the parched villages.

After seeing the devastating effects of drought and famine, Kebede vowed to return to her native land to help out her fellow Ethiopians.

Although she has lived in this country for 15 years, she is eager to cast off the luxuries of life in Winchester in order to start an orphanage there.

Along with the help of Dr. Eli H. Newberger of Boston's Children's Hospital, Kebede and Winchester resident Diane Willis, a Channel 7 reporter, are working to open an orphanage for Ethiopian children.

Kebede has lived in the U.S. since 1970, when she left home to attend and graduate from the University of Massachusetts. She earned a graduate degree from Harvard and has been working as a state social worker.

Kebede spent five weeks in Ethiopia, where along with such advocates as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy she witnessed the devastating starvation.

The sights spurred Kebede, Willis and Newberger to join forces with a United Nations group to open an orphanage. The project is being run through their joint effort called TESFA, which stands for "hope" in Ethiopian.

The group is accepting donations for the orphanage through TESFA, P.O. Box 483, Winchester.

Talent Sought For Congress Arts Competition

Cong. Edward J. Markey is seeking local entrants for the Fourth Annual Congressional Arts Competition, "Artistic Discovery," sponsored by the U.S. Congress which recognizes the creative spirit of American High School students.

The Congressional Arts Competition represents an ongoing interest of the Congress in promoting the importance of art and art programs as an integral part of every student's education.

The competition is open to any high school student in the 7th Congressional District. Artwork must be two-dimensional, no larger than 30-inches-by-30-inches, and unframed. The work may be in the form of paintings, drawings, collages or prints. Entries will be judged on quality and overall presentation of the work, as well as by the individual statement the piece makes.

Three honorable mentions, two second prizes and one first prize will be selected, with the winning entry to be displayed in the Capitol Rotunda in Washington, D. C. during the week of June 3. Finalists will be announced during the second week of April, with the finalists' compositions to be displayed in the Elizabeth Von Huysen Campus Center at Tufts University in Medford.

Local entries must be submitted to Markey's office at 464B Salem st. in Haines Square, Medford, no later than Apirl 1.

The 7th District Coordinator of the Arts Competition is Nancy Sheehan of Medford, an arts educator for the past 20 years. Sheehan is employed by Clark University in Worcester in its Education Department. She urges local art supervisors to promote the competition in their respective schools.

Markey is seeking the involvement of community businesses in the arts contest and asks that they take an active role as sponsors in the event for a minimal donation.

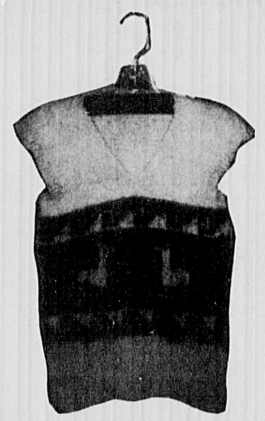

Tax deductible contributions in support of the Congressional Arts Competition can be sent to: Congressional Arts Competition, 464B Salem st., Medford, 02155.

For further information and specific contest details, contact Patricia Vinchesi or Monique Deragon at Markey's Boston office, 223-2781, or the high school arts supervisor.

COMMENT

There Is Nothing Like A Strong Sense Of Family

By TERRY MAROTTA

There's one thing that Presidents Reagan and Carter both agreed upon, and that is the importance of the family in our lives.

Each of them insisted on this importance in his own way, and each was right to do so, it seems to me.

Nothing is more crucial for the future of our planet than for us to build solid bubbles of love and support at home. Only I'd take it a step further than that even.

I'd say we have to redefine the word family, so that it includes those bound to us not just by blood but by time and space. Everyone alive today is in our family; it isn't just Sunday-school talk to say so. We're all members of the same class, you might say, all members of the class of '85.

There have always been the Utopians who tried to live out this ideal of the expanded family. America has produced more than her share of such idealists; it comes with the Dream, I think.

There was Bronson Alcott, for example, and his experiment at Fruitlands; and there was Brook Farm, too, to name just a couple of efforts at collective living right here in our area.

Oh, I guess they didn't last too long, any of them. Louisa May's daddy was something of a nut, from all I can gather: he was always putting his family on diets of bread-and-apples, to purify the spirit. I guess, and wean them from the sludge and barbarity of meat-eating. His old friend Emerson said he was always feeling his shoulders too, to see if the wings had started sprouting yet.

But still, you have to respect him for trying. He had an ideal in his mind when he set out, like the hippies in our recent 60s. They were experimenting with new modes too, trying to learn sharing and cooperation; they didn't foresee in the beginning how much they'd be quarreling about who ate up the peanut butter. Hey, we're all only human.

Anyway, I was thinking this morning about what I had in my own life by way of the extended family. The church we go to came most readily to mind.

We leave for church at 9 o'clock on a Sunday morning; we get home around noon, but it's not because we're sitting in hard wooden pews for three hours being harangued by Puritan elders.

For my little family, there's choir practice, both senior and junior; deacon duties; the service itself; and a coffee hour. We have a wonderful time when we go there each week. There's no place we'd rather be.

Our church is our extended family at the moment then. It's the place we go to for sharing our joys; it's the place we go to for sharing our sorrows.

Just the other night we attended a Sunday supper and talent night there. It was a swell show; Elliott Norton would have loved it. It had exotic dancing and corny jokes by the master of ceremonies.

It had a couple of kids sawing away earnestly on toy-size violins; another few tootling tunelessly on recorders (I can say this; I was one of the tootlers). It had impersonations and cross-dressing and kazoos. It even had a kindergartner who stood up, showed the audience his favorite Christmas toy and then knocked their socks off with a demonstration of break-dancing like it's meant to be done — by people about his age, with no real bones yet in their bodies.

I sat in the back during most of the proceedings, ostensibly to see to the baby. The real reason though was that I couldn't keep my eyes dry.

It was all so touching, and people were clearing each other's places and holding each other's children in their laps. A gang in the kitchen banged away at the dirty dishes, and everybody clapped like crazy for everybody else.

I'm still pretty new to the idea of how we're all connected to each other. I didn't even begin to sense it 'til I started my own family and fell in love, one by one, with the children that were given us.

It's funny; you'd think having kids would make you more me-and-miney. In many cases it has the opposite effect.

Those two presidents were right when they said what they did about the family. There is nothing more important. The family's the thing, all right; the big one, to which we all belong.

Winchester Kernels

Despite the apparent move forward, inchester's new housing proposal doesn't have everyone ready to break out the champagne.

One resident fears that the scattered-ite housing issue will be focused on the Swanton st. area.

Paula Ferrone says she's coming out swinging — and plans to meet with Selectmen in early March to voice her concern.

Meanwhile, she's looking for support, she says, from residents equally concerned. She'll be circulating leaflets to spread the word as well.

Somebody must have an ax to grind in Mansfield, the town where Winchester's new town manager comes from.

A phantom letter arrived at our office the other day with some pretty mean poetry — of sorts — regarding W. Chadwick Maurer, who is leaving Mansfield for Winchester.

The author apparently was determined to stay unknown, since whoever it is blacked out the return address. The only line showing was "Mansfield, Ma."

Even the old hold-it-up-to-a-light trick didn't even work. 'Seems anybody who is that disgruntled should at least have the guts to sign his or her name. . .

Parents interested in the School Supt.'s study into the enrollment problems in Winchester schools might want to attend tonight's 7:30 meeting at the Administrative Center on 154 Horn Pond Brook rd.

The Advisory Committee to Supt. Mitsakos is expected to suggest redistricting the Lincoln School area "over the next few years" to reduce the size of the student population at Lincoln.

School officials, as well as the advisory panel, have met with parents of children in the various Winchester public schools since late fall.

Also on the meeting docket tonight is the Selectmen's second half of the budget hearings. Scheduled for 7:30 at Town Hall, the annual scrutinizing of the town's budget began last night.

Those who have gotten into the habit of parking at the Skillings rd. parking lot were in for a surprise today. The lot was closed in order that lighting can be installed.

The lot is expected to be closed for today only. 'Bet there's more than one person in town hoping the project doesn't drag on like it did when it was hot-topped.

'Seems parking spaces continue to be a hot item in town. . .

Winchester Town Clerk Carolyn Ward is a little concerned these days about the census.

Apparently the bright red boxes she's had dotted about town aren't picking up enough completed census forms.

As the deadline draws near for the local data to be compiled, Ward says she may just have to resort to telephone polling.

Residents could save the hard-working Town Clerk from another headache by sending in their data promptly.

It may not be the most glamorous of races, but the town election on March 26 is really where every individual vote has the most wallop.

One vote can — and has — made the difference in who will be Selectman, Assessor, School Committee member and so on.

Think it's not important? These boards set town policy, the tax rate, determine the education local children will receive, the zoning that will allow (or prohibit) certain things from going on in your back (or front) yard — in other words, they directly affect day-to-day life.

Need to register to vote? The Town Clerk's staff is making it easier and easier. Of course, they're open any weekday from 8:30 to 5 — but they're holding some special registration hours, too.

They'll come in on Feb. 19 — Tuesday night — from 7 to 8, and on Saturday, March 2, from noon to 8 p.m.

And for "Deadline Annies," on the last possible day you can register (and still vote in the March 26 elections, that is) — Wednesday, March 6 — Carolyn Ward and her crew will hang out until 10 at night to take registrations. They sure would like a few people to drop by and sign on the dotted line.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Opening The Reservoir Area To Traffic Could Threaten Drinking Water, Reader Says

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I assume your drinking water isn't very important anymore. Who is concerned as to where it comes from or how much time, care and money it takes to give the people clean safe drinking water.

It is so easy when you need water, to simply turn on the tap. The clean water is there to be used for cooking, drinking and washing with no problem at all. Who cares?

The group of people who want to open up the area of the drinking water supply to the public certainly don't care about the problems it will create. Their only interest is that the area is beautiful and should be opened for all to see.

The words "open to the public" are four very large and scary words. In a very short time those words will destroy your watershed, a century of hard work and care. Your forefathers 40 years ago closed this area. they closed it for the same reason then, as we do now — to keep the people out.

You can argue the facts forever, but the bottom line is people destroy things of beauty. We see this fact come to life every day, on your streets, on your property and it's the public that does it. Can you take that chance with your watershed?

The public will destroy the Fells. They will set fires, throw rubbish, and do vandalism. They will also have parties, drink and picnic. Let us not forget the public's next move, when they are tired of walking. Let them drive in their cars, trucks, campers, motor bikers. But don't forget their boats and in the winter, snow mobiles.

In light of the true facts I've given you, we cannot forget the most important factor, violence. We will have assaults, rape, robbery or even worse. This could happen in your drinking water supply if you let it.

Why don't you ask the group of people who want to open the Fells to the public, if this could ever happen? I'll tell you the answer will be "no", but the truth is, most of this has already happened over the years without the area being open for anyone.

So think about the future when you turn on your water tap and nothing comes out, and you find an "open to the public" sign in your water main with a piece of the tree it was nailed to.

A True Friend of the Fells
(Name Withheld Upon Request)

Proposed Watershed Opening Landed

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Thanks for opening up our watershed problem — your front page story was great.

Winchester residents deserve a longer look at our beautiful reservoir area than we are afforded on one (often rainy) Sunday a year.

Since we're paying to patrol the area anyway, why not permit its use by law-abiding citizens? Their presence would protect and secure and, as our Fire Chief has pointed out, would cut the incidence and extent of fire damage.

Closing the reservoir area has limited our access to the entire Fells reservation; for much of the town, the only entry is a narrow strip along South Border rd.

Surely, with a bit of imagination and willingness to experiment, the recreational potentials of this land can be tapped. Let's get that study committee under way!

Residents Debate Pet Ban In Housing

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In response to Ms. Hatch's letter regarding the ownership of pets in public housing, we, the residents of the Mary E. Murphy Apts., are extremely upset by Ms. Hatch's blatant disregard for rules and regulations.

Most of us are longtime residents of the lovely senior citizen housing on Palmer st. and Westley st. and have abided by the rules and regulations for many years.

Many of us love animals or had pets which we had put to sleep or gave away prior to moving here because we understood the rules and knew that they had to be obeyed if we were going to have a lovely safe place in which to live.

We quite frankly object to the way Ms. Hatch has acted without any regard for our rules. If no one obeyed the rules around here the place would go to pot.

After all, there are many of us who love animals and would like to have a pet, but we realize senior citizen housing is not the place for pets. We object to pets being permitted on the premises. We obey the rules which make it a pleasure to live here and we expect others to do the same.

Most of us are alone, but not lonely because we have the companionship of our contempories.

The Residents of the Mary E. Murphy Apts.
And the John L. Doherty Apts.

Parents Regret Principal's Decision To Leave V-O

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Parents and children of the Vinson-Owen school reveived news recently of Dr. Clare Corcoran's decision to leave Winchester.

My wife and I have had two boys attend the Vinson-Owen school. Dr. Corcoran has been an outstanding principal at the Vinson-Owen during that entire period. She has been able to deal with the education of our children as well as the varied political and administrative responsibilities that all school administrators are required to put up with during these times.

I can not imagine any individual performing this difficult and often times thankless task better than Dr. Corcoran. The entire school system of Winchester, suffers greatly with her departure.

I hope sincerely that her decision was one that was related to her own career plan and not influenced by any political decisions and harrassment within the Winchester school system.

Sincerely,
William G. Lavelle, M.D., F.A.C.S.

Principal Decries Vandalism

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Unfortunately, Bartlett School was vandalized early Sunday morning — I was called to the building at 1:30 a.m. A homemade incendiary was thrown through a classroom window, and this classroom is not useable as of now, although the students will have class elsewhere in the building.

I would like publicly to thank the Albiani family for notifying the Fire Dept. so promptly, and also I thank the members of the Winchester Fire Dept. whose quick action prevented the fire from spreading throughout the building.

I can only hope that the vandals will be caught and punished.

Gratefully,
Norine T. Casey,
Principal

Win. Astronaut To Visit Tufts

Winchester native astronaut Frederick "Rick" Hauck (Capt., USN), will land not far from town Feb. 19, when he pays a visit to Tufts University, his alma mater, Hauck, a 1962 graduate of Tufts, will give a public lecture at Tufts titled "A Personal Space Odyssey," describing his two trips into space, including his most recent voyage of last year.

Hauck, whose mother Virginia lives in Winchester, was commander of the 1984 Discovery shuttle mission that retrieved two wayward satellites and launched two others. Hauck had adorned the top of the shuttle's control panel with a Tufts decal, and he carried along into space a specially-commissioned Tufts flag, which he will present to university officials at a private dinner preceding his Feb. 19 talk.

At the dinner, Hauck will be awarded a Tufts Presidential Medal by university president Jean Mayer. The medal is one of the highest honors Tufts can bestow; only 10 such medals have ever been presented.

"Rick is an ideal candidate for the Presidential Medal," says Ronald C. Brinn, director of alumni relations at Tufts. "He is a unique individual, an astronaut at the peak of a singular and distinguished career."

Hauck's talk, free and open to the public, will launch the Tufts Distinguished Alumni Lecture Series, which will bring accomplished graduates of the university back to campus to share their experiences with students and others. Hauck's lecture will be given at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of the Cabot Intercultural Center, Packard Avenue, on Tufts' Medford campus.

Hauck last appeared at Tufts in the fall of 1983, following his first space mission in which he piloted the Challenger space shuttle. During that mission he and the four other crew members, who also included Sally Ride, the first American woman astronaut, were awakened one morning by a specially-made recording of "Tuftonia's Day," the Tufts song, by the Beelzebubs, a student singing group.

Hauck has other connections to Tufts. His wife Dolly also graduated from Tufts in 1962 and their son Stephen is a sophomore at Tufts.

Winchester Man In Tufts Play

Winchester resident Dr. Peter Arnott of 6 Herrick st. is in the final stages of rehearsal for a new production at the Tufts University Arena Theater.

Scheduled to open on Tuesday, Feb. 19, for a week's run, the play is "No Exit" by Jean Paul Sartre. Perhaps best known for "Being and Nothingness," one of the prime documents of existentialist philosophy. Sartre also wrote a number of highly successful plays.

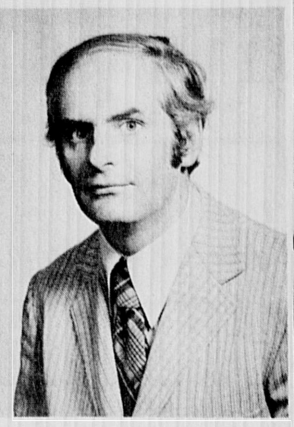

"No Exit" appeared shortly after World War II, and reflects the bitterness and frustration of this period in France, when supposed appeasers and collaborators were denounced by those who had supported the Resistance.

Sartre's main character is one such man, sent after his death to a curiously constructed hell in which nothing turns out quite as expected. "No Exit" is a penetrating examination of conscience and responsibility; it is also one of the most gripping horror stories that the modern theater has produced.

Arnott, who has lived in Winchester since 1969, is known for his theater work. As "No Exit" runs at Tufts, he will also be on view in a film of "Prometheus Bound" scheduled to open at the off-Broadway Morse Theater on Feb. 21. His son Christopher directed the highly successful production of "Beggar on Horseback" three weeks ago at the Tufts Arena Theater.

Mulvaney To Lead Hospital Staffers

Dr. Thomas J. Mulvaney of Winchester assumed the duties of president of Winchester Hospital's medical/dental staff at the staff's annual meeting Jan. 15. Mulvaney, who was president-elect for the past two years, succeeds Dr. Richard A. Kingsbury, and will serve as president of the staff for the next two years.

Dr. Thomas J. Mulvaney

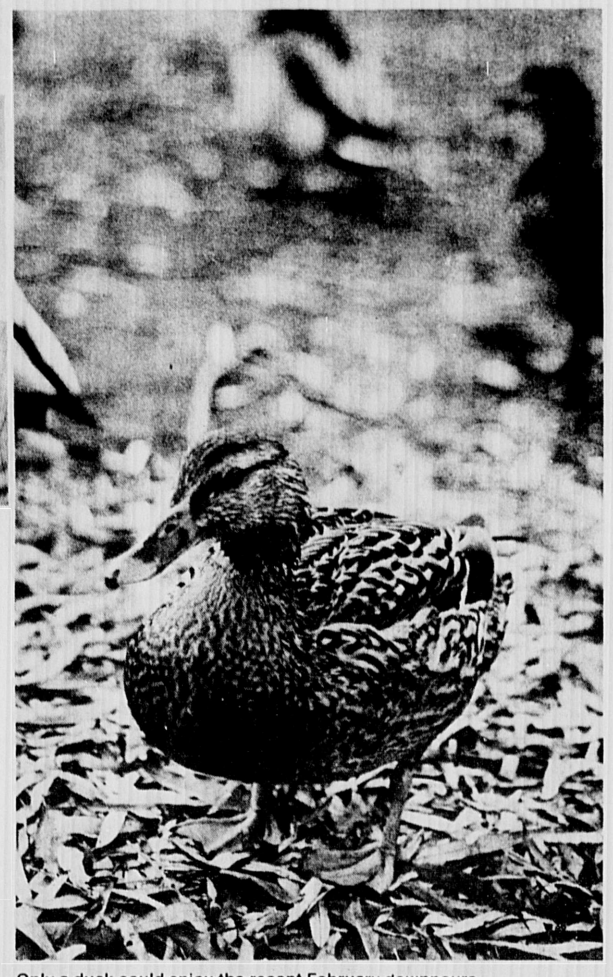

Mulvaney is chief of Winchester Hospital's Otorhinolaryngology Service and has been a member of the hospital's active medical/dental staff since 1975. He is a graduate of the State University of New York's Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, and served his internship at the U.S. Air Force Hospital at Travis Air Force Base in Fairfield, Calif.

Following four years of service as a medical officer in the Air Force, he completed a surgical residency at Saint Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton, as well as a residency in ear, nose, throat, head and neck surgery at the Mass. Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston. He is director of Ear, Nose and Throat Ambulatory Services and the Emergency Room at the Mass. Eye and Ear Infirmary.

Mulvaney is certified by the American Board of Otolaryngology and is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons. He is a member of the New England Otolarngological Society, the American Medical Association and the Massachusetts Medical Society.

After 19 Years On The Job, Principal Enjoys Challenge

It was an innovative school in a conservative town and the teaching method was unusual.

By HELEN WILLIAMS

Richard H. Young, principal of the Francis J. Muraco Elementary School since its inception in September 1967, is well known to Winchester parents and students. He and his 1967 staff which included five teacher-writers, opened the kindergarten-through-6th-grade school. Included in that staff were George Flynn, present Ambrose school principal and Robert Forrest, former acting superintendent and Ambrose principal.

The Muraco School was inhabited by not only teachers and students during its first week but also by 10 mice, as reported in a Winchester Star story at the time. Today the school's symbol is a mouse — which you'll see most everywhere. Its silhouette flies on the gold flag, greets you at the front door, and guards the cafeteria "Mouse Trap," a traffic-light device that monitors lunch time noise level.

"The Muraco School was the first large open area school in New England,' said Young during a recent interview. "Opening this school, he continued, was one of the greatest challenges during his years in Winchester.

Among the challenges: it was an innovative school in a conservative town and the teaching method was unusual. There was much outside criticism, which made the Muraco people more determined to stick together, despite difficulties such as old textbooks, too many students within groups, and a very high turnover.

"By staying that first year when all was lost," Young relates, "we found it most satisfying. By all pulling together, (we) realized a workable educational system."

Young, a Winchester High School graduate, lives in Winchester, received his bachelor's degree in business administration from Boston University and his master's in elementary education from Boston State.

Before coming to Winchester, he taught for 5 years in Natick and Sudbury and was for 3 years a principal in a Sudbury School.

For the last 19 years he has been principal of Muraco. He is a member of the national and state associations of elementary principals; he has directed Winchester's College Gate Program and the Lesley College Summer Program, and has been a Town Meeting member.

When asked about hobbies and other interests, Young said that he is very interested in athletics, and hence taught Muraco's kindergarten physical education class. He states, "I do as much as I can in sailing, tennis, skiing, and golf; and make every effort to keep up on educational reading."

Young states his philosophy is definitely wanting kids to come to school wanting to learn and interested in being there. "Of course," he said, "I recognize this cannot happen all the time."

He said he wants a child to get a basic skill and to have ample opportunity to use those skills. For example, he said, running a store in the first grade and a banking unit in another grade are helpful, useful skills. Young states, "the other ingredient in a good school is respect — respect between child and teacher, teacher and child, and a respect to people and property."

Young said he treats the principalship as a teaching position. He added he sees himself as a teacher of people, of teachers, and other people in the building. And he said, he sees himself as setting an example for children throughout the building.

Still, he does not miss the actual classroom. Young said being outside of the classroom allows him to expand a bit. "You're a middle man, but where the action is, and where it is the most fun. It is a critical and key job. I wouldn't want another."

Looking back, he said, there were no experiences he might like to change. This year his major goal is to assure that each child is learning the basic skills commensurate with his ability. Another key goal is to encourage teachers to use new teaching methods and materials. He said he plans to have teachers visit schools with successful new programs and to encouraging them to attend workshops.

Each year, Young takes one grade and produces and directs a play, usually a musical. He says, he likes to do it and to get the kids on stage. For doing so, he has received a simulated Oscar with mice at the bottom.

On another front, the recent absentee call-in safety program started by Young is working well. Under this program, a parent is required to phone the school the morning a child is absent. Each child is accounted for early in the morning.

Finally, Young states, he would like people to listen more to each other and to work together for everyone's benefit. It is important, he said, for Winchester schools to work in concert with teachers, children, and parents.

Computers, Ball Fields Discussed

Kenneth J. Cereghino
Director Of Recreation

QUESTION: What is the status of the Playfield Study Committee, the group that is studying the improvements/rehabilitation of town parks and playing fields?

Answer: The Playfield Study Committee submitted its report at the Fall Town Meeting of 1984. Subsequent to the acceptance of the report and positive action on a motion to appropriate $25,000 for architectural renderings, the Acting Town Manager, Jake Ciarcia, asked me to organize and coordinate the project on his behalf (monies voted by Town Meeting were to be spent under the direction of the Town Manager).

I have outlined below a process timetable that should give an idea of what can be expected in working towards a completion date for the project.

• 1. November 1984 — Town Meeting accepts report, appropriates $25,000 for professional architectural/engineering services.

• 2. December 1984 — Request for proposal (RFP) is developed outlining details of work to be done by architectural/engineering firm.

• 3. January 1985 — RFP's sent to approximately 20 firms/individuals. Proposal received on January 26.

• 4. February 1985 — Proposals reviewed and short listed — finalists selected for interviews.

• 5. March 1985 — Final firm/individual selected — contract negotiated — work on design development plans begins.

• 6. April - October 1985 — Development of schematic and design development plans investigated and completed.

• 7. October - November 1985 — Final plans presented to Town Meeting (November) - Funding proposal outined.

• 8. November 1985 - February 1986 — Selected projects prepared — Specifications developed - Bidding procedure initiated and awarded.

• 9. Spring 1986 — Work begins.

Nancy Upper
Computer Curriculum Assistant

QUESTION: What is the current computer curriculum in the Winchester Schools?

ANSWER: The educational philosophy of Winchester's computer curriculum emphasizes the role of children as active individuals who learn most effectively when they have some control over their educational environment, and when the tasks presented to them are meaningful and motivating.

All kindergarten through grade 2 students learn Delta Draw, supplemented with reading/math readiness and computer skills software (K), and CAI to teach telling time (Gr. 2).

All students in grades 3 through 4 continue to develop computer literacy with two or more reading, writing, and arithmetic or problem solving packages.

All students in grades 5 and 6 receive 15+ hours per grade of instruction in Logo, supplemented with selected CAI software.

All students in grades 7 and 8 take one-quarter year of BASIC or Logo in grade 7, plus 30 hours of keyboarding. Computer Applications and Advanced BASIC electives are offered in grade 8. CAI is used in Chapter 1.

The science department offers a high quality teacher-development graphics package, original and commercial programs in physics, and CAI in the chemisty an IPS courses for high school students.

The math department uses teacher-developed "inquiry" programs in trigonometry and analysis courses, and offers a full-year course in BASIC and its applications.

The English department has established the Macintosh Word Processing Room which is now an integral part of the 10th grade required Writing Lab.

The business department offers word processing training, an automated general ledger, spreadsheets, and typing tutorial.

The industrial arts department includes an exploration of Robotics and Microprocessors in the electronics course, and computer assisted design is on the horizon.

Staff training, curriculum development, and computer managed instruction innovations are in an ongoing process of research and implementation throughout the system.

QUESTION: What are the practical applications of the computer work an elementary school child is doing now?

ANSWER: Children are learning the fundamentals of computer usage to become "computer literate."

The educational software a child is using helps to build confidence and comfort using the computer.

The variety of software a child is exposed to provides a means for active learning about the many things computers can do.

Experiences with the computer foster critical thinking, strategy testing, and problem solving.

Inventive, imaginative software provides a medium for creativity in general, and for creative use of the computer in particular.

Group work at the computer fosters cooperation, sharing, social interaction, and a sense of self-worth.

QUESTION: Does a child need to have his/her own home computer?

ANSWER: No. Having a computer at home may help a child to learn computer skills, but it is not necessary for deriving the benefits of Winchester's computer program.

Furthermore, the opportunities for using computers in the Winchester community are many. Currently there are nine computers per elementary school, with a centrally located computer/printer system in each school library.

McCall Jr. High has a well-equipped computer laboratory, plus individual computers in Chapter 1.

WHS boasts computer laboratories in the math, science, business, and English departments. An additional "mini-lab" of three computers can be transported to individual classrooms as needed, and the WHS Library houses several.

There are opportunities for supplementary computer learning experiences on all levels, from the elementary school Mentor Program through Adult Education.

Lincoln School Committee

Vacancy notices have been posted for the positions of acting principal and principal of Lincoln School. A search committee for the principalship, consisting of two Lincoln teachers, four Lincoln parents, an elementary principal and director, under the chairmanship of the assistant superintendent for personnel and management, will recommend the semifinalists to the superintendent on May 10. A recommendation from the superintendent on the principalships at both Vinson-Owen and Lincoln schools will be made to the School Committee on May 28.

Superior Performance

Winchester students continue to outperform their counterparts on a variety of national standardized tests, according to a report prepared by Asst. Supt. David Ackerman. The 1984 report embraced national standardized tests, local and departmental tests, and minimum competency tests. Commendations were given for student and program performance through the grades and across a wide range of subjects.

Ackerman rcommended clarification of the listening test, the selection within two years of an updated achievement test program with results to be available on line to school and departmental computers, and further detailed analysis of the various test results at the system, building, class, and individual student levels.

Heckley Head Teacher

Steve Heckley was appointed head teacher at Ambrose School beginning Feb. 1 until the end of the school year.

Ambrose Patent Office

The Ambrose School patent office, a special project of principal George Flynn, opened at the school on Feb. 1.

Follow these steps to a patent:

1. Have a brainstorm — come up with an idea for an invention.

2. File a patent application. Forms are available in the library and school office.

3. Applications are evaluated by the patent office.

4. A patent will be granted in your name when you have proved to the patent office that you have a new idea or a new or unique application of an old idea.

Memorial Fund

Donations to the Paula Caffrey Memorial Fund may be sent to the Lincoln School office. Checks should be made out to Lincoln School Parents' Assn. The fund is being used to purchase American history and biography books for the school library. If there are any questions, contact Jean Berry at the school library.

Coming Events

The February theme at Lynch School is families. Friday, Feb. 15, is the Third Annual National Hug Day.

Happy Arrivals

The fourth and fifth graders at Muraco School have been involved in an embryology project sponsored by the 4—H County Extension. On Jan. 17, 24 eggs which had been purchased at a farm were put into two incubators. The children then monitored the heat, the humidity, and turned the eggs three times a day.

On Feb. 1, Joanne Shorser from 4-H came and showed a film which detailed pictures of the embryo's development. The youngsters eagerly awaited the 21st day — the birthday.

Muraco's fourth and fifth graders were probably the only kids in town disappointed when school was cancelled that day because of snow. However, an early morning call from Mike Procopio, school custodian, alerted teachers Sheila Gill and Anne Marshall that cracks and peeping noises were coming from the eggs. By the time the children returned to school on Thursday, three baby chicks greeted them.

Head Teacher

With the departure of Dr. Clare Corcoran to the Lesley College Graduate School, Mary Conley has been appointed Head Teacher at Vinson-Owen School until the end of the school year.

The second annual COLONIAL DAY is coming to the Winchester Town Hall on Thursday, Feb. 28 from 1 to 2:30 p.m. This is the culminating day in the grade 2 unit on the colonial days, on which all 2nd graders, in colonial garb, come together to learn the arts of candlemaking, stencil making and colonial games from local craftsmen and senior citizens.

The event is being coordinated by the community Schools Assn. and Susan Bokil, second grade teacher at Muraco School.

The School Committee approved a pilot field study experience Feb. 28 to March 2 to Washington, D. C., for a select group of grade 8 students. The trip is being coordinated by McCall instructors Gene Bouley, Neil Gillis, and Jim Maconochie and will include visits to historic sites, museums, and caverns, all of which tie in with social studies curriculum and earth science studies.

SCHOOL NEWS

McCall Students Shine In Art Competition

The McCall Junior High Art Staff is pleased to announce that McCall students fared very well in the 1985 Scholastic Art Awards Competition. McCall's acceptance record this year is one of the best in the state.

McCall art teachers, Dave Ardito and Don Latham, submitted 14 art works created by 7th and 8th graders. Judges selected nine of these to be exhibited in the regional location, the Montserrat School of Visual Art in Beverly.

Five of these works received gold key awards and are on display in the Prudential Center lobby in Boston until March 3. Three of these works received blue ribbons, the state level's highest award and will now compete on the national level in New York City.

Congratulations are due to all students who participated, noted Ardito. The original 14 works were created by Katie Daggett, Ray Donlon, Kathy Martinelli, David McIntosh, Katie O'Connor, Cynthia Pasciuto (2), Julie Sexeny, Young Won, Matat Behnke, Kathryn Colson, Denise Chabot, Emily Rubenstein and Kathy MacArthur.

The nine regional winners were: Sandra Bennett, Katie Daggett, Ray Donlon, Kathy Martinelli, David McIntosh, Katie O'Connor, Cynthia Pasciuto, Julie Sexeny, Young Won.

The five gold key winners were: Katie Daggett, David McIntosh, Katie O'Connor, Cynthia Pasciuto, and Julie Sexeny.

The three blue ribbon finalists are: Katie Dagget, David McIntosh, and Cynthia Pasciuto.

Parents May Attend School Enrollment Talk

The Advisory Committee to the Superintendent on the Future Housing of Students in the Winchester Public Schools will meet on Thursday evening, Feb. 14, at 7:30 in the Administrative Center, 154 Horn Pond Brook rd. to review the suggestions that it plans to submit to the Superintendent. Interested citizens are invited to attend.

The Advisory Committee is planning at this time to recommend that the current school organization be maintained (Five K to 6 elementary schools, one 7 to 8 junior high school and one 9 to 12 high school); that staff be provided to reduce the number of split or combination classes at the elementary level; that special staffing considerations be given to those situations that are of an unusual nature; and that the current district lines of the Lincoln school be modified to reduce the size of the student population of that school over the next few years.

Youth Center Offers Teen Job Bank

Know a teen who's looking for work?

All Winchester residents or students between the ages of 13 and 18 should be aware of the opportunities the Youth Center holds for them, said Recreation Dept. staffers. The Job Bank is a referral service that matches youths with prospective employers within the town of Winchester and surrounding communities.

Some examples of referrals include waitressing at private parties, snow shoveling, babysitting, furniture moving and employment in a variety of local businesses.

The Job Bank contains permanent part-time opportunities as well as temporary or one-time jobs. Since wages are good and employment times are flexible, this service is the perfect way for students to earn extra money as well as attain work experience.

For more information or an application, call or drop by the Youth Center, located in McCall Junior High School, next to the gymnasium. The Youth Center phone number is 729-7390.

Career Directions Aims To Help Youth

Employment Resources Inc. is accepting applicants for a new program called "Beginnings: The Young Parents' Career Directions Project." The program is designed to assist young parents and expectant parents, ages 16 to 21, who have dropped out of high school and would like to obtain a GED, explore vocational options and participate in occupational skill training leading to employment. The program is opened to both males and females regardless of marital status.

In addition to offering support, program staff will help to coordinate the delivery of other services through the Dept. of Public Welfare, the Dept. of Social Services and other agencies. Day care and transportation assistance as well as a weekly training allowance will also be provided.

Program applicants will begin by attending an orientation session followed by individual and group counseling sessions. Group sessions will focus on such topics as world of work skills, budgeting and other issues of concern to young parents. Counseling will continue throughout the program.

After a few weeks of counseling sessions, classes in preparation for the General Equivalency Diploma (GED) will begin. Classes will be held three days per week, four hours per day. Home-based tutoring will be available for pregnant youth and new mothers.

Vocational exploration activities will begin several weeks later in conjunction with GED prep. Hands-on and classroom exposure to a variety of career fields including computers, graphic arts, office technology and skilled trades will be available. Once a particular area of interest has been selected, "job shadowing" will complete the vocational exploration. This componenet will allow participants to "shadow" an employee working in a particular career field for a period of 100 hours. Upon completion, participant and counselor will discuss opportunities for transition to further training or direct job placement.

ERI plans to serve 20 participants in its first group which is scheduled for February. Anyone who is interested in the program should call Beginnings' Coordinator, Carol Gerrit at 492-0591.

Applicants must be residents of Arlington, Belmont, Burlington, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Revere, Somerville, Stoneham, Wakefield, Watertown, Wilmington, Winchester, Winthrop or Woburn.

Young Can Register For College Gate

College Gate, a three-week program for youngsters in kindergarten through grade 3, is now registering applicants for its summer session at the Lynch School in Winchester, July 8-26.

The half-day academic program offers courses in the arts, mathematics, science, and the humanities. The Sounds of Music, Gadgetry, and The Money Market are three of this year's new courses. The curriculum offered by College Gate is not traditionally available in regular academic programs.

Last summer, more than 600 youngsters attended College Gate, hosted by five school systems in Massachusetts. For the fourth year, the Winchester School Committee has agreed to host this unique program for bright and academically talented children.

Other programs will be held in Easton, Franklin, Hingham, and Natick. For information call 828-9283 or write Box 382, Stoughton, 02072.

Fisher Extension Has New Faculty

The Winchester extension campus of Fisher Junior College announces the following three faculty members in the Associate in Science Degree in Business Management: Maggie Starrett, teaching Word Processing I; John Desloges, teaching College Math I; and Nelson Lovins teaching Real Estate. Fisher also welcomes new students from Winchester, Woburn, Melrose and Stoneham and wishes all a successful term.

★ Scouts

There are also programs designed to meet the needs of boys from single-parent homes — a much more common phenomenon today than when scouting began.

Through the Tiger Cub Program, boys as young as 8 are taught how to live safely. Many of them come home to an empty house, and they have to be taught how to answer the phone and what to do if the doorbell rings, scout officials say.

Still, some traditions never change.

"The mess kits are exactly the same today as when I was a scout," Raphael says. "I hated it then, and I hate it now."

Still, some aspects of scouting have changed drastically. Today's manufactured sleeping bags are filled with down rather than sewn together from blankets by the boys themselves. Rayon tents have replaced the mold-prone canvas units the government provided at the end of World War I.

A scout's skis no longer look like barrel staves, and because of automobiles and buses, outings are more likely to be to Attitash than the local hill.

Still, anyone saying a scout has an easy time of it today hasn't been camping with them in sub-zero weather. The outings take place in the winter as well as the summer, and many items are still homemade.

"Kids are kids," says Archie Gordon, leader of local Troop 503. "[But today] things are handed to them in a McDonald's package, and they are suprised when they have to work for something."

Scouting is one of the places they have to work, he adds.

"[Scouts today] make their way in a different type of world," points out Richard Feeney, 57, an Eagle Scout from the 1930s. "Who needs to know how to use flint and steel today?" he adds.

"We lived in our time," he adds, "and they live in theirs, and neither wants to trade places with the other."

However, the scout oath and the ideals it represents have not changed at all since 1910 Hempe says. Although most people associate the Boy Scouts with camping, knot tying and jamborees, officials say these activities are just enticements so that the boys will stay interested and learn the "way of life" they teach.

Hempe believes that the scout tradition of duty to God, country, others and themselves is more important today than when the first Winchester youth donned his knickers in 1917.

"We didn't have the distractions in 1910," he explains. "There wasn't a dope pusher on every corner. When I was a scout, I thought girls were soft boys.

"We have got to try to convince them [the scouts]," he continued, "that helping an old lady across the street is more important. . . ."

Teaching a boy the scout oath and laws and "getting him to buy it" will offer an alternative style of life for that boy to follow, Hempe stresses.

"Along the way," he says, "you have got to keep kids interested. It [outings and events] is the cement that keeps kids in, not the purpose of the program."

Feeney, a captain for the Metropolitan District Police and an associate professor at Northeastern University, believes that scouting has had a profound effect upon his life, providing him with a philosophy of life, teaching him discipline, and giving him leadership training.

He also believes that scouting has been a good influence on his seven sons and his four brothers. Each was a Boy Scout, and two of Feeney's sons, John and Brian, attained the rank of Eagle Scout, scouting's greatest honor.

One of Winchester's most recent Eagles, Christopher Bett, 17, agrees that scouting has a big effect on many boys.

"You couldn't help but get something out of it, even if you're not looking for it," he asserts.

Thinking back to his first scout meeting at age 12, Bett remembers "everyone seemed to be a lot bigger than me and it seemed scary," he recalls.

Still, he adds, there was something about scouting that seemed to have a comforting sense of respect and responsibility.

"There was something else that wasn't spoken," he recalls. "But it was there. Everyone was there for each other."

"Scouting isn't a panacea," admits Van Roosen, "but there is enough caring going on so that the kids sense it and gravitate towards it. . . . You give them an alternative to some of the disastrous things they get involved in."

"It kept me on the straight and narrow when I needed it," he adds.

Two of the most important goals the scouts strive for are self-sufficiency and leadership. The troop leaders are advisors to the boys — it's the scouts themselves who do all the planning for troop projects and trips. It is a quasi-military structure, and the junior scouts listen to the directives of older troopers.

"I would see a boy come in as a crybaby," Van Roosen recalls, "and three years later watch him train other kids who were in the same position he had been in."

In fact, scout training eventually helped Winchester's boys fare well as men during World War II. Local servicemen progressed in rank more quickly, say scout officials, than those who had not been scouts.

Most scouts learned how to march as well as give and take orders before they entered the service. That meant many managed somewhat better "over there" than others.

"They knew the most important thing on a hike is an extra pair of socks," Feeney adds.

"You can't make the kids today do things [like march]," says Raphael. "They don't like to show themselves in uniform."

He attributes this in part to remnants of anti-military sentiment prevalent 10 years ago. Whatever the reason, scouts sometimes feel uncomfortable about the reactions of others to them.

"When I first started," Bett remembers, "kids would tease me, but now a lot of them tell me they wish they had done it."

Despite the common wisdom, this may have been the case throughout the history of scouting. Many boys in his day would wear a coat over their uniforms because "some of the other kids would ridicule you for being in the scouts," recalls Raphael.

Perhaps then, it is adversity, both from the elements and some of their peers, that forges a bond between scouts.

"We had blacks, Chinese and whites in our troop," Feeney says. "There was no race thing. They were just our fellow scouts." Some of the earliest editions of the scout handbook have racially integrated covers.

Within that binding, says Feeney, lies information that "fills in the gaps" in formal education, teaching subjects that schools don't have the time to teach.

"These are subtle little things," Raphael says, "even a college graduate would have never learned in high school or college."

Many of the articles in the handbook have changed little since its first edition in 1911, but all in all, boys have changed even less than scouting has since 1910, former scouts agree.

"I'm not sure that every boy doesn't have the thrill of the pioneer in him," Hempe says with confidence. "It's part of every boy's makeup."

★ Tests

graders who failed the test.

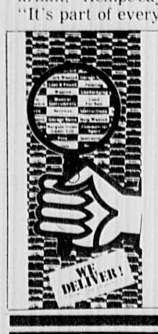

"This is the first time we have come up with that number of kids who have failed," Ackerman says.

Such an occurrence should not lead to panic, according to Ackerman, because the test is more difficult than in other systems and the increase in failures may be a statistical aberration.

"The results are not made to be definitive statements on the kids," he says, "but warning signs to the school district where problems may lie."

He says that school officials will be "monitoring those kids to see what progress has been made."

A similar concern regarding last year's ninth grade class seems to have been addressed. According to the report, 23 of the 26 students who failed the minimum competency test last year passed this spring.

Sachemettes Race Past Tannerettes

By DIANE ARONSON

Winchester was up against Woburn for the last dual meet of the season Thursday night, and the Sachemettes proved to be the stronger of the two teams beating out the Tannerettes 51-35.

In the 45-yard high hurdles Michele Sweeny captured first with a personal best time of 6.6 while teammate Zoe Layden took third in 7.1. Layden then went on to the high jump winning with a height of 4 feet 10 inches while teammate Ali Mueller took third jumping 4 feet four inches.

Senior Maura Cullen took a second in the shotput with a throw of 28 feet 9½ inches. The Sachemettes swept the 45-yard dash with Melissa Skehan winning in 6.0 followed by Carolyn Curry and Marjoire Price in 6.2 and 6.3.

Janet Weylman ran a super race in the 600 winning with a personal best time of 1:23.8 while teammate Laura Rutherford won the 300 in 42.0.

Winchester's Heather Innes came on strong in the last lap of the 1000 capturing second place with a time of 3:04.8. Sandra Riley won the mile in 5:53.3 while Leslie Strazzulo took third in 6:12.9.

In the two mile Lauren Chabot finished second. Winchester's relay team of Michele Sweeny, Carolyn Curry, Laura Rutherford and Janet Weylman won with a time of 4:28.2.

The relay team did a super job especially Janet Weylman who realy came on strong the final lap of the relay.

The dual season is over and unfortunately the girls' final record doesn't show how good the team really was, a lot of meets were close and the girls deserve a lot of credit.

The Reaction: To Be An Athlete

By Steve Norton

Some years ago, a cardiologist from Red Bank, N. J., told me the following story about a friend of his.

It seems when this friend was preparing for an advanced degree from a nearby Ivy League college, he learned he had contracted cancer. Radiation and chemotherapy were begun. That was the doctor's reaction, the medical one.

This individual's reaction was an intuitive one. He became an athlete, with a 90 percent chance he would be dead in three-to-five years, he committed the greater part of each day to sports. He swam an hour each day, punched the heavy bag and ran 6 to 10 miles a day.

He eventually took up skateboarding, hang-gliding, and diving. After the chemotherapy treatment, he completed in a full triathlon (2.4 mile swim, 112 mile bike ride, and 26.2 mile marathon run.)

When he finished he collapsed and spent three hours in the emergency room. Why all this? Why faced with all this pain in the future, seek suffering now? Why hasten death? Why push on and struggle when he could enjoy life?

Although these questions baffled the physicians and cancer specialists, I had very little trouble understanding what he was doing. For, this individual, by conquering these formidabale tasks led him to believe that the body was not losing the fight to cancer. He believed that he was beating this monster back!

He was winning-thumbing his nose at all the cancers and abnormalities that eventually strike us all down. By working harder and harder, coupled with pride and perserverence, he gained a new confidence. This confidence led him to a new plateau of self-certainty, self-trust, and self actualization. Pride always lasts longer than pain.

When the eulogies were given at his funeral not too long ago, the cardiologist from Red Bank, N.J., stated a lesson of life:

Sachems Capture League Title, Dominate The Middlesex Loop

Sachems capture league title and meet — again "No one will ever dominate the Middlesex League. That has been the feeling of other coaches among the league, but in this past week Coach Larry Tremblay's team proved, rather persuasively, that they're far and away the best team in the league by again winning the title.

On Wednesday night, the Woburn Tanners traveled to Winchester for the final match of the regular season. On the line was the Middlesex League Crown and the usual pride that comes with victory in the Winchester-Woburn rivalry.

Though Woburn was psyched up to beat the Sachems they managed only 12 points up to 140 and then lost every match.

Winchester chalked up wins at 107, when Andy Lowenstein pinned. Then at 121 Alex Puchulu beat Scott Foley impressively. At 140 Rob Anderson got the ball rolling with a pin that sparked a string of six straight wins. Those who followed Rob in victory were: Joe Lawrence (147), Tony Fortunati (157), Dom DiVencenzo (169), Bruce Schwartzman (187) and Dave Carter (Unlimited).

In beating Woburn, Winchester completed its first undefeated season ever, 15-0. The victory was their 28th in a row and marked the first time any Middlesex League team has gone undefeated in close to a decade.

But most importantly the win locked up the league title for the second year in a row and secured Winchester's place as dominators of the league.

Winchester won the league crown for the second year in a row by crushing its opponents by scores like 64-0 (Burlington) and 50-10 (Melrose.) In fact, like last year, no team within 20 points of the Sachems, an astounding statistic.

If there were any skeptics of the Sachems' actual power they were quickly put to rest at the league tournament on Saturday.

The Sachems as a team captured first place quite easily more than doubling the second-place team's (Belmont) score 217½ to 103.

By the time the tourney had wound down to the finals they looked like a dual meet Winchester vs. the league. In the finals, Winchester occupied nine of 12 weight classes!

Of the nine, six wrestlers — Andy Lowenstein (107), Alex Puchulu (121), Rob Anderson (140), Tony Fortunati (157), Dom DiVincenzo (169) and Bruce Schwartzman (187) — emerged as champions. Joe Lawrence (147), Greg Doherty (100) and Dave Carter (Unlimited) each took trophies for runner-up.

Three other wrestlers placed in the tournament leaving no weight class unfilled by a Sachem place winner. Jay Rice (128) and Charlie Cowen (134) each took third while Glen Richmond (107) took fourth.

At the tournament Winchester was the recipient of other awards too. The team accepted the League Championship trophy and the League Meet trophy.

Andy Lowenstein received an award for most pins in the tournament too. But for the man who brought Winchester wrestling to its great heights, Coach Larry Tremblay, an award as Coach of the Year.

With the regular season over the Sachems now roll into post-season tournaments (see related story).

Tourney Saturday

The post-season tournaments will be held in the Winchester High School Gym this Saturday and Sunday. This is the Division I Central Sectional and the top four place winners in each weight class go to the States.

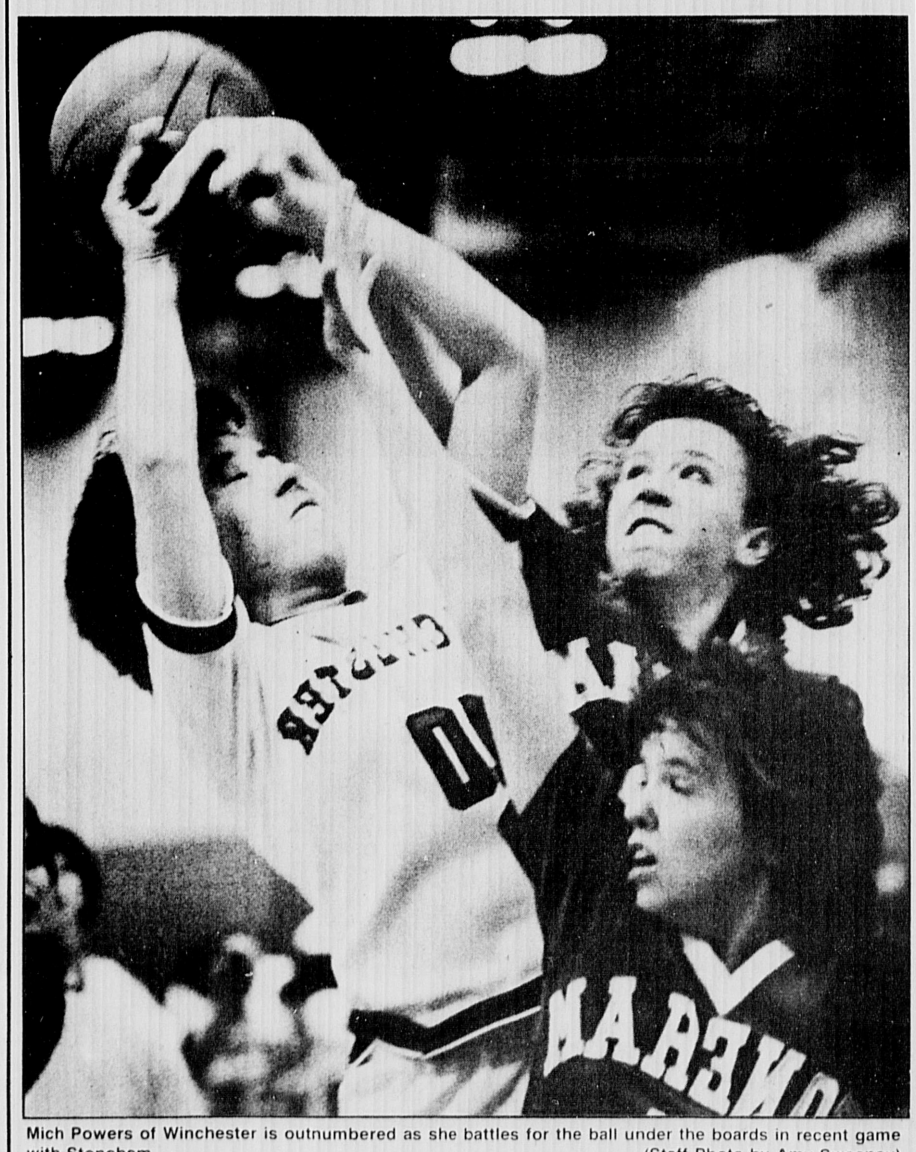

Though Winchester is the heavy favorite to capture the tourney, Waltham should be tough to beat. In the past two years Waltham has beaten Winchester out of first place.

The tournament should be very exciting. All are welcome and asked to come cheer the hometown Winchester Sachems on in the only Wrestling Tournament ever to be held at the high school.

For those attending the tournament, refreshments will be served during periodic breaks in the action and throughout the entire two days. Wrestling will be going on continuously for Saturday and Sunday. Here are some special times for the tournament.

Plans For Tennis Are Under Way

As spring is just around the corner, plans for the Winchester Women's Spring Tennis Ladder are in full swing.

All Winchester women, 18 years and older who are interested in playing doubles this spring, should sign up for the outdoor tennis ladder by March 1.

Ladder play, which begins in March, will consist of one challenge per week for four weeks. These matches will determine the player position on teams that will represent Winchester in the Suburban League and the Northest League. The seven weeks of league play will begin in April.

Besides being good exercise, playing on one of these teams is a good way to meet new players.

For sign-up information, call Laurie Minniti at 729-9328.

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

Dear Mr. Norton:

"...Our daughter runs for you at Winchester High Schol and enjoys it very much. The problem is that her brother, who is age 12, has taken up running and frequently accompanies her on training runs. Could you comment on this?

Mrs. B.D., Winchester

Dear Mrs. B.D.:

Children should definitely be allowed to run. They are, after all the most natural runners. The question isn't whether they should be, but how much is permissible. Let your son run with your daughter. If the pace is too intense then he'll stop. We adults should take a lesson from children. We don't listen to our bodies; they do!

Good Luck
Steve Norton

Dear Readers:

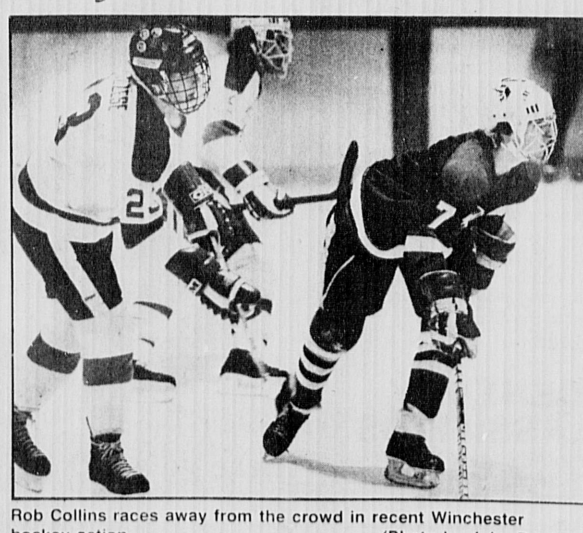

This one is for the just 'when you think you've heard everything' category:

A New York Times article carried the following story: "Ethiopia asks Soviets for Aerobics Advisers." The article read: "Ethiopia and the Soviet Union have signed a new sports agreement for Soviet advisers to help develop Aerobics in Ethiopia. The sports agreement coincides with an international effort to feed hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians who are starving as a result of Africa's drought and famine."

Some Valentines For Agnes

By MARY MANNINGHAM

More than 50 years ago, I was the teacher in a little rural school in northern Wisconsin. There was no indoor plumbing, no furnace (teacher built the fire in the big jacketed wood burning stove.) There was no electricity, no janitor.

But there were children, 56 of them aged from 4 to 18. There were classes of 10 to 15-minute duration from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. with an hour for lunch and two 10-minute recess periods.

Agnes was one of my pupils — 8 years old and in the third grade. Her family was very poor, her clothing was ragged and dirty, her shoes were fortified by cardboard insoles. I suspect that she was often cold and hungry.

But Agnes was a good student, sweet natured and always helpful to "teacher".

Valentine's Day was a very important one in every rural school. Teacher and children would cover a cardboard box with red and white crepe paper and decorate it with hearts. There was a slit in which to drop Valentines. The box was usually made a week or two before Valentine's Day.

Of course, teacher gave every child a Valentine — a real store-bought one. More than that, I usually baked cup cakes — one for each child to have with lunch. Lunch was usually eaten from a tin syrup pail.

How well I remember the day when the Valentines were distributed in 1929. The number of Valentines usually indicated the popularity of the pupil. As usual, Agnes got one — only one from teacher. Although I could read the hurt from her face, she did not cry, just quietly said "thank you".

Other children had fists jammed full of Valentine's — but Agnes did not comment.

When school was out, my sister picked me up with three other ladies in her car. Of course, they all asked about Valentines. Agnes just said "I got a pretty one from teacher."

The subject was dropped then — but the next day the same four ladies each brought a box for Agnes. In it was a selection of costume jewelry, scarves, ribbons, and all trinkets to delight an eight-year-old girl.

Agnes refused a ride home — she walked on angels' wings.

St. Valentine loved her very much.

Poetess Weaves Memories Into Verse

By JILL M. HIGGINS

She is the epitome of pleasantness — the grandmother of every child's dreams.

She is Mary Manningham — a warm, sensitive poet who paints pictures with words.

Once a teacher in a one-room schoolhouse in her native Wisconsin, Manningham, 76, began writing as a child. At 12 she won her first poetry contest, one sponsored by the local newspaper, The Oconto County Reporter.

She has been writing ever since, and even did a stint as a poetry reader on a Boston radio station for several years.

Seated on the small couch in her home "office," the Winchester resident is quite at ease while reading her poetry aloud. With perfect diction, she brings alive the clever scenarios, bobbing her head and flexing her voice to suit the mood of each poem.

"I wrote this one for my son," she says, her face bursting with motherly pride. "It's one of my favorites," she adds.

"My heart travels high
"In a thick cloven sky
"My heart travels high," she reads.
"With the sun pouring down
"From its diadem crown
"My heart travels high," she continues.

Her melodious voice envelopes each word and gently shapes the stanzas that she prods into the air.

Admittedly, she is a word fanatic. Words, she says, were her only real form of art when she was growing up on a Wisconsin farm.

The farm background also helped her appreciate family life; a fact that is evident in the last verse of the poem she reads.

"With snow on the runway
So high they can't pile it
My heart travels high
My son is a pilot!"

Home and family are perhaps the two most cherished aspects of Manningham's life. Her poetry is seasoned with anecdotes about her children and grandchildren, and, of course, her husband Howard.

"We'll be married 52 years on Flag Day," she says smiling. As he enters the sun-speckled room, it's clear they are just as in love as when they married more than a half century ago.

They met in Wisconsin, where he delivered milk and eggs by horse-driven wagon to her aunt's house. Now a former publisher, he's taken charge of publishing her books of poetry

"He won't let me put out anything that doesn't look classy," she says with a glimmer of pride. "He's very adamant about that. He says he wants my writing to be treated just right."

To date, there are two such smartly bound books — the first, "Thoughts and Verses," which came out in 1971, and "A Mary Mixture," which came out in 1976. A third is likely to be published sometime within the next year, she said.

Though she's had her share of ailments during the past year or so, Manningham isn't wanting for enthusiasm. She eagerly shows off her various awards and honors, tucked neatly atop an intricately carved corner shelf that was a gift from her former housekeeper.

"This is one of my favorites," she says almost reverently as she picks up a silver and glass vase-like piece. "It's from the Women's Press Club of London and it's a real antique," she adds.

The array of awards and citations — including those from the New England Women's Press Assn. and the National Federation of State Poetry Societies — are proof of her literary accomplishments.

Her interest in writing, she says, can be traced to her parents. "My father was very strict about pronouncing words properly and using them correctly," she recalls.

"We had a big unabridged dictionary and he would make us look up words when we misused them," she says. "This is at a farm, remember. But my father was insistent on our being educated in the English language."

As a young woman, she taught in a rural Wisconsin school after graduating from the Teachers Training School in Wisconsin. It was there that she met Agnes, the little girl about whom she wrote the Valentine's story.

"I write how I feel," she explains. "And I've been thinking about Agnes a lot lately. She was just a very sweet little girl, and I think her story is a different kind of Valentine story."

Clearly, it is the different, simple things in life that this sensitive woman finds noteworthy. Seemingly commonplace events — from building fires to baking cookies — are the everyday occurrences that find their way from her heart to her pen.

The memory of a single poor child in a rural schoolhouse sparks a yearning — and a desire to share the experience with others.

Sharing — like writing — is a gift that seems to come naturally to Mary Manningham.

Wildflowers Shown Today

The Winchester Public Library has a beautiful new audio-visual resource available for borrowing by groups and organizations — the Sally Wund Slides. The Winchester Trails Organization donated the Sally Wund natural history slides to the Winchester Public Library in April 1984.

This collection contains colored slides of Winchester's four seasons, featuring ferns, mushrooms, trees, flowers and insects, compiled by the late Sally Wund, an enthusiastic amateur naturalist who served as the official photographer for Winchester Trails.

To introduce this lovely addition to our collection, the library and the Winchester Trails are co-sponsoring a Feb. 14 slide presentation of the Sally Wund Natural History Series. The program will be held in the Library meeting room from 10 a.m. to noon. Refreshments will be served compliments of the Winchester Trails Organization.

Groups or organizations interested in borrowing the Sally Wund Slides from the Winchester Public Library should call 721-7171 and ask for the reference department.

Seniors Plan Supper, Exhibit

Sports Night at the Jenks Senior Center is scheduled for Saturday, Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. The boxing exhibition by the Harvard College students will be preceded by a ham and bean supper with hot brown bread and salad, topped off by apple pie a la mode. There are a few reservations open; call the center (721-7136) to reserve tickets.

'A Doll's House' To Debut

Sydelle Pittas as Nora Helmer dances a Tarantella in rehearsal for 'A Doll's House.'

Local playgoers are in for a treat with the Winchester Players' production of Ibsen's "A Doll's House". If the faces on stage seem familiar, it is because all the actors but one are Winchester residents. Eric Row, making his acting debut, is the exception and lives in Somerville.

Sydelle and Chris Pittas, mother and son both in the play and in real life, have acted together once before — in a scene from "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" for a directors' class at Emerson College.

To make it a real family affair, daughter Pilar has choreographed the Tarantella which Sydelle dances in the play. Pilar, a veteran of Winchester High School productions, is presently working with Curtain and Cue on "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying." Sydelle is familiar to Winchester audiences as Aldonza in "Man of La Mancha" and the Bulgarian servant girl in "Arms and the Man."

Karen Detore makes a welcome return to the Winchester stage as Kristine after a long absence. Work and child-rearing, she says, left her little time for the theater. She may be remembered for her leading roles in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," "Cactus Flower", and "6 Rms Riv Vu."

Michael and Clare Jacobs, father and daughter, are appearing together for the first time, although Michael has appeared recently with the Quannapowitt Players in Alan Ayckbourn's "How the Other Half Loves" and in the Arlington Friends of the Drama's production of "Two by Two."

Lee Barton, who has appeared most recently in "She Stoops to Conquer" and "Arms and the Man," finds the present play contains layers of irony and meaning, and that there is depth to each character. He plays Dr. Rank.

Dirck Strycker is Krogstad and his recent credits include Sergius in "Arms and the Man" and Hastings in "She Stoops to Conquer."

The cast is rounded out by Ann Baehr and Diane Wessels, both of whom have given their services backstage in recent productions.

Director Karen Barton has worked in every facet of the theater and is assisted by stage manager Steve Hagan who worked in the same capacity on "Man of La Mancha."

Production dates are Feb. 22 and 23, Mar. 1 and 2. Tickets are available by calling the Players' answering service at 721-1831.

Ultra Seal — Quality Workmanship At A Fair Price

As the cold and costly winter temperatures approach, there is no time like the present to guard against both cold and the high fuel bills it creates, by installing energy efficient windows and/or doors. And, the company that can do the job most inexpensively and professionally is Ultra Seal.

Co-owners Jim Olsen and Larry Buckley have more than 15 years of home improvement and window installation of experience between them. With credentials like that they are more than qualified to tackle the window installation in your home or business.

"We can handle any job no matter how big or small," explains Olsen "We also offer the most competitive prices for our work and windows."

One might best sum up Ultra Seal's policy as "Quality workmanship at a fair price." A major factor in the fair price Ultra Seal can offer is that the customer deals directly with the company owner, not a salesman, and therefore a commission on the job is eliminated.

Ultra Seal supplies stock and custom-fitted windows in all sizes and has windows available in wood, aluminum, and vinyl. Some of the name brands available to customers are Marvin, Pella, Andersen, and United States Steel.

Prices on windows can range from low to very expensive so any budget can be accommodated. No matter what window you choose, in the long run you save on your energy bill. Since, Olsen explains, "at least 25-30 percent can be saved on your fuel bill by installing double-paned windows."

Stock-size windows can be installed in 1 to 3 days, but custom-fitted windows will take from 4 to 6 weeks to be ordered, so don't hesitate as winter approaches.

Ultra Seal also installs doors and repairs and installs garage doors.

Free estimates and consultations are available by calling Ultra Seal seven days a week at 665-0100. Call today to insure both a warmer house or office and to keep your fuel bill as low as possible this winter.

Checklist Can Prevent Winter Car Blues

Even a well-tuned, properly-maintained car might not start on a bitterly cold New England morning. Following a regular maintenance routine check can help prevent problems.

The "Old Farmer's Almanac" says this winter will be colder and drier than normal, with below average snowfall. Whether the Almanac's prediction will be on target or not, AAA Massachusetts says it's a good idea to prepare your car for winter's annual assault.

Here's a quick winter checklist to use:

• BATTERY

If it's going into its third winter, have it checked for power and condition. Also make sure battery terminals and cables are free of corrosion.

•ANTIFREEZE

Have it tested for 20 degrees below zero. Look into the radiator and make sure the liquid is clear. If cloudy, it should be drained and replaced, because the rust-inhibiting qualities are no longer there. Proper mixture is half antifreeze, half water.

• HOSES

If any look cracked or feel mushy, or if connections show discoloration, they might be weak enough to spring a leak. Have them replaced.

• ENGINE OIL

A multi-purpose 10W-40 oil will give good results in winter, but a 5W-30 oil will be better. Winter oil should be lighter in weight (lower numbers on the can).

• TUNEUP

An engine that needs a tuneup will probably give the first sign by stalling on the first cold morning. So find out if new spark plug or carburetor adjustments are needed in advance.

"You may think you don't need to winterize your car so long as you follow the regular maintenance schedule in the owner's manual," said Stewart W. Hall, Director of Automotive Services for AAA Massachusetts. "But New England winters can be tough, and a little extra car care goes a long way."

Tire, Traction Trouble

As winter bears down, many motorists begin to wonder about their tires. Are snow tires a good idea? Are radial tires effective in snow? What about so-called "all-season" radials?

The answers to these questions vary according to the type of car one drives, the tires currently on a car, and a car owner's budget, according to John R. Duddy, Manager of Automotive Services for AAA Massachusetts.

"For those drivers who want the best possible protection against winter-driving problems, radial snow tires are the answer," Duddy said. However, he pointed out that radial snow tires will result in lower gas mileage, make for a noisier ride on dry pavement, and should be used only during the winter months.

The so-called "all-season" radials are a step above regular radial tires for winter driving, but they don't have the aggressive tread of a snow tire, nor are they designed for driving in deep snow.

"Radial tires themselves are at the next level of effectiveness for winter driving," Duddy said. "They're certainly not as good as radial snow tires or 'all-season' radials, but they are superior to regular bias-ply tires."

Duddy suggested that owners of front-wheel drive vehicles consult their owner's manual for the best advice on tires for that type of vehicle.

Early Morning Driving

Black ice and frosty bridges are a couple of things early-morning drivers should watch out for this time of year.

"Black ice occurs when water along the roadsides or from melting snow flows across the highway and freezes in a thin sheet before morning," said Caroline J. Hymoff, Manager of Safety Services for AAA Massachusetts. "Often it's hard to see this ice until you're nearly on top of it. Sometimes it fools you because it looks like water.

"Bridges tend to accumulate frost and ice whenever temperatures go down at night," Hymoff continued. "By morning they are very slippery. In some areas, signs are posted that say 'Bridge Ices Before Highway' but such warnings are few and far between."

Boosting dead batteries
Plus to plus, minus to metal

That's the simple formula for boosting a dead battery. It could come in handy some cold winter day, says AAA Massachusetts.

Many motorists carry booster cables in the trunk so they can get a boost if their battery goes dead and so they can help another motorist whose battery has failed.

Here's what to do before using the booster cables:

1. Make sure dead battery and the good battery are the same voltage.

2. Put gear level into neutral or park. Set parking brake.

3. Remove battery filler caps and check to see if liquid electrolyte is frozen. Don't try to start if liquid is frozen, because battery may explode.

IMPORTANT: Owners of the sealed batteries shouldn't attempt to boost it when center of test indicator on top is bright or light yellow.

4. If not frozen, replace filler caps and place a damp cloth over caps of both batteries.

5. The engine of car with good battery should be running.

6. Identify positive and negative posts on both batteries. Most batteries have +, P or POS and -, N or NEG clearly marked next to each post. In some cases, positive is identified with red and negative with black. If uncertain, study cables leading from each post. One will be grounded to car body or engine block. The other will lead to solenoid or starter. The grounded wire is negative.

Some imported cars have positive ground electrical systems. Check the owner's manual for proper boosting procedure. (BMW cars with trip computer require additional precautions.)

Now here's the way to use the formula to attach the booster cables:

Hook one booster cable from positive terminal of dead battery to positive terminal of good battery.

Hook other cable from negative of good battery to bare metal part of disabled car away from engine and battery.

Most cables are color coded so drivers won't inadvertently cross them when hooking up.

Start the stalled car.

Unhood the cables in reverse order.

Windshield wiper care

Windshield wipers are among the most neglected safety items on an automobile. New England winters can be tough on a car's wipers, and AAA Massachusetts says replacing the rubber refill blades is easy, inexpensive, and essential for safe driving year 'round.

"Good visibility is critical, particularly at this time of year," said Stewart W. Hall, Director of Automotive Services for AAA Massachusetts. "A simple check of the windshield wiper blades' condition and their operation should be part of every driver's regular maintenance routine."

To check to see if wiper blades need replacement, squirt the windshield with washer fluid and turn on the wipers. If they fail to clean the glass properly, leaving the glass streaked and your visibility blurred, they need replacing.

Although streaking can be caused by a worn blade, it can also occur as a result of a buildup of grease, dirt, and road salt on the blade. Mild soap and water will usually clean the residue and restore the blades to proper working condition.

When a wiper blade "chatters," there can be a number of possible causes. Most often, it's because the wiper-arm tension needs adjustment.

During winter, preserve wiper blades by using a scraper to clear the windshield of accumulated ice and remember to keep a full reservoir of windshield-washer fluid (mixed with the proper amount of anit-freeze) to keep the windshield clear while driving.

AAA says periodic inspection and testing of the car's windshield wiper system will provde an inexpensive "safety insurance" now and throughout the year ahead.

Diesel Fuel Use

Unless it's winterized, diesel fuel can congeal in the fuel line when the temperature gets down to 10 degrees or lower. For owners of diesel cars, AAA advises drivers to make sure to get the "winter blend."

Winter blend is a mixture of Number 2 Diesel (regular diesel) and Number 1 Diesel (very similar to kerosene). If drivers are unsure about getting the winter blend, then try to get the Number 1. In a pinch, add straight kerosene, but this is an emergency measure only.

Even a well-tuned, properly-maintained car might not start on a bitterly cold New England morning. AAA Massachusetts recommends some ways to increase the chances that a car will start when the mercury drops town towards zero:

• Put cars in a garage whenever possible. Otherwise, try to park heading south, or along the south side of a building, using the building as a windbreak.

• Use an engine heater. Various kinds are available, including some that permanently attach to the engine.

• When the engine is warm, cover the hood with a blanket (preferably one that reaches all the way to the ground). A heat lamp (200 watts or more) mounted on a wide board can be placed on the ground under the oil pan. The heat will then be held in the engine compartment and make starting easier.

• Keep the fuel tank three-quarters full and add a can of gasoline antifreeze to reduce the chance of fuel-line freeze-up.

Finally, New England is notorious for its rapidly changing weather, especially in winter. A driver may start out on a clear and bright day and end up in the midst of a snow or ice storm.

For that reason, AAA Massachusetts recommends carrying the following items in the car:

• Windshield scraper — with long handle and brush for easy snow removal.

•Can of windshield de-icing spray.

• Extra windshield washer fluid (antifreeze type)

• Old cardboard milk carton or plastic bottle of sand or kitty gravel.

• Small snow shovel.

• Wire drying spray for moisture problems.

• Flares for protection — remain good indefinitely if protective coating is not penetrated.

• Old blanket or coat — for extra warmth when stuck, for protection against rain or snow, to put on the ground to change a tire, or to put under the wheels for extra traction.

Of course, no one can ever be fully prepared for a storm emergency, but there are some additional things that can help out — boots and heavy socks, a first aid kit and some of those high energy foods that hikers use.

'Megabucks' Dreams

By Steve Norton

Megabucks has become mega dreams for area residents who are gambling a dollar in hopes they will be lighting cigars with 10 dollar bills.

The "computer" or megabucks machine is part of a system that allows bettor's to play daily, weekly, and bi-weekly Megabucks numbers and is installed in dozens of mom and pop stores throughout Winchester and surrounding communities. Most of them are going full tilt all day and are overloaded with people's magic numbers.

Still people will calmly wait in line thinking "this is the line to end all lines." Winchester resident Carmine Ciapero expects to win big after buying his dream tickets at the News Store in downtown Winchester. "I'll buy a new house, a new car, find a bride and settle down," said the husky lumber yard executive.

If you select the right six numbers from one to 36, you may win as much as $15 million or as little as three million dollars paid out over a 20 year period. Millions of people across the state all believe they will be able to call up work Monday and say "I quit, because I just hit the Megabucks!"

Kathleen Mulroy of Melrose said she would tour Europe and Hawaii before settling down in her custom made house. Mulroy, like other lottery players, uses birthdates to add a little magic to her lucky six members.

"I'll just give it away," said a Genevive Lange of Woburn. She was the only person interviewed who was ready to give up her winnings as quickly as she won them. One man standing in line did not want his name in the paper because his wife would be upset to learn how many tickets he had purchased.

Patty Cooke, who is employed by a Winchester restaurant, said she has a special method of picking up lucky numbers. "I cut up numbers one to 36 and put them in a hat and randomly select six."

Matthew Bent will get married, he said, if he hits Megabucks. As I found out, there are as many dreams as there are dollars in the megabucks jackpot.

Meditation Course To Meet At Library

"Meditation is like going to the bottom of the sea, where everything is calm and tranquil," said Renuka O'Connell, instructor of the course in the "Art of Meditation" to be taught at the Winchester Public Library.

The course will be offered free at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesdays for three weeks beginning Feb. 20, practical techniques to learn meditation at home will be taught, and the subjects of creativity, music, sports, diet, and spirituality will be discussed.

Renuka said meditation helps people to find creativity, peace, simplicity, dynamism. "It's like trying to dive deep inside to find our spiritual qualities that lie quietly waiting to be awakened."

The course is designed for every level from the beginner to the more advanced and all are welcome to attend. For further information, call 648-7100 during the daytime.

William Welch

William J. Welch of Winchester, formerly of Somerville, died Feb. 5 at the University Hospital in Boston after a brief illness. He was 72 years old.

Called the "dean of auto racing," he was most recently employed as a stock car racing announcer. Mr. Welch officiated at several speedways, including the Westborough Speedway, the Stafford Speedway in Stafford Springs, Conn., and the Thompson Speedway, in Thompson, Conn.

Born in Somerville in 1912, he moved to Winchester in 1964.

He graduated from Northeastern University in 1934, and served with the Army Signal Corps in France and England during World War II.

In the 1940s, Mr. Welch built a midget racer that triumphed at more than 400 events. In the 1950s he entered the field of stock car racing and then, in the 1960s, he became a racing announcer.

Mr. Welch was an employee of the New England Speed Equipment Co. in Allston for many years and worked for other racing equipment supply firms during his career, including Performance Vehicle in Malden.

He earned the respect of his colleagues for his efforts to establish rules for fair treatment and to professionalize auto racing.

Hospice Care Offers Help For Dying

Patients dying at home often feel abandoned and lonely and afraid. At a time when all hope for a recovery is gone and curative treatment is replaced by supportive care, patients and their families have many concerns, many questions and many needs. If the person is a Hospice Care patient, the help is there, and Dr. Bob Liberman is one of the people there to help.

An internist and specialist in hematology and oncology, Liberman is a staff physician at Symmes Hospital and Internists Inc. in Arlington. He is also a member of a team of Hospice Care professionals who lend support to terminally ill patients (and their families) who choose to remain at home in Arlington, Winchester, Burlington, Lexington and Woburn.

Liberman gives much to Hospice Care. All his time with Hospice care is donated. He attends weekly team meetings on his day off, and is often called upon to make house calls.

As an oncologist (cancer specialist), Liberman sees it as "only natural" that he be involved with hospice, as over 90 percent of the hospice patients have cancer.

He sees hospice as a "reasonable approach" to having patients deal with their illness and death, and feels hospice care should be integrated into basic medical practice when patients are diagnosed as being terminally ill.

He explains, "In most cases, people with terminal illnesses need more care and support than the family is able to give, and with family members scattered about the country, the natural support system that was available in this country 50 years ago seldom exists."

He feels the hospice team gives families this "much needed support and guidance" in caring for their relative, and offers a "viable alternative" to hospital or nursing home care.

According to Liberman, patients often have medical questions they don't feel they want to bother their own doctor with because he or she is so far away or no longer involved with the patient's care.

Questions range from concerns regarding their illness and what they can expect in the upcoming months to questions about the medications they are taking and various methods of pain control.

He also works with visiting nurses and the Hospice Care interdisciplinary team in designing care plans for the patients. The team meets weekly to discuss the patient's progress and evaluate the treatment.

He is quick to point out that his position is that of an "adviser" and that the patient's primary care physician is still in charge.

The doctor says he knows the patients and families feel "relieved and much more secure" knowing a support group is available to them as close as the phone.

"We feel more secure knowing Bob is here to help," says Karen Crain-Wimberly, HCI nursing coordinator.

★ Building

Workmen clean up scaffolding pipes ripped down from the second floor of the new police station by gale force winds early Wednesday morning. (Staff photo by Amy Sweeney) ficials point out construction errors in the building.

For instance, a number of new steel beams in the police station addition had to be torn out and reset eight inches lower.

Poswolsky said, "The beams were placed incorrecly and they were replaced correctly when it was discovered. That's life," he stated.

In their new repair room, firefighters indicated where a steel beam had been shifted about three times before it was finally aligned accurately.

And another town employee said a newly-built wall had to be demolished and rebuilt apparently due to a mistake.

Architect Poswolsky defended the contractors. "I don't know what standard you can hold people against," he commented. "Things are not perfect," he said. "That's why the architect and the clerk of the works are here."

Tonaszuck agreed. "It's a complicated job in a very small area. In every job, some things do go wrong," said the Permanent Building Committee head.

Poswolsky said the mistakes have all been "correctable."

And Winchester will not have to pay for them, he said. "It means no money to the town because the contractors corrected them themselves at their own time and expense," the architect stated.

What price the delay?

According to Tonaszuck, the town shouldn't end up paying more than it bargained for — the $2.75 million approved by Town Meeting last spring.

If the project goes beyond the mid-July completion date, the contractor — not the town — will incur extra costs, said Tonaszuck. He stated the contractor might have to pay an additional $4,000 to $5,000 per month in fees for an architect and a clerk of the works. Both are required to inspect the construction.

And Winchester is in good shape to handle unforeseen building expenses as well, Tonaszuck indicated.

"We're not going to run out of contingency fund," he said. According to Tonaszuck, the town budgeted $155,000 for extra expenses, and to date has committed $60,000, less than half of those funds.

Plus, he said, most unexpected expenses arise during demolition of an old building, rather than during new construction.

"The worst is over," Tonaszuck stated, for the town's risk of surprise construction costs.

Meanwhile, Acting Town Manager John H. Ciarcia said a construction delay would not burden the town's finances. A five-week delay, he commented, "is not going to affect the budget that much."

Ciarcia said the town might even save utility fees by waiting a few weeks to open the sophisticated new station.

Delay causes headaches

"It's been very difficult for the people that work in the fire station," said Chief Robert McElhinney Monday. "They've had to put up with an awful lot of inconvenience," he added.

Unlike the Police Dept., the firefighters have had to stay in their old headquarters while the work is going on, amid plaster dust, noise, and torn-up walls.

Even the racks for drying fire hoses have been displaced to the Lockeland rd. station. Every time there's a fire, firefighters must race to get the hoses from the West Side Station. Then, after the fire is extinguished, they have to transport wet hoses back up to the Lockeland rd. station to dry.

Firefighters say the extra trips don't make their job any easier.

Hanging like spaghetti, color-coded loops of wire lead from the fire station basement outside to another problem spot: the communications trailer.

"The biggest problem we've experienced is the difficult conditions at the trailer," said Police Chief John P. McHugh.

"It's cramped, hard to heat, the roof leaked, we had trouble with the wiring and the plumbing," he explained.

Inside the trailer sits dispatcher Nicky Labedz-Maenpaa, hemmed in by a desk'ful of telephones, telescreens, clocks and computer printers. She seemed none too happy with the temporary outpost.

"It's like being in a tin can," she said, pointing out the space heaters needed whenever the wind picks up.

In contrast to the firefighters, who must live amid the construction, the Winchester police seem at home in Lynch Elementary School, where they've been stationed since June.

"We're not hurting," said Chief McHugh from his office armchair. "We've settled in.

"It's the first time in a long time we've had a lot of space, as compared to the other building," he said.

Although the town now has no jail cells of its own, McHugh says Woburn, Stoneham and Lexington have all agreed to take Winchester's prisoners.

Non-violent suspects are kept temporarily in a corner of the police offices, where they sit handcuffed to a thick metal ring attached to the wall.

Still, there are minor irritations, said McHugh. The police lack adequate storage space. Each officer, for instance, has a little locker designed for a school kid.

Another drawback is that citizens may not be able to find the police station, McHugh added. He said there aren't many signs in town pointing people to its Horn Pond Brook rd. locale.

One advantage of the temporary location is that student-police relations seem to have improved, said the chief. "We had kids come down, gave them badges, stickers and a tour of the building," he said.

Plus, "We have no vandalism at this school," McHugh pointed out.

Previously, the area around Lynch school had been a notorious hang-out for drinking, fighting, and even stealing cars, said the chief. All those problems "seem to have disappeared," McHugh stated.

Tire Facts: Today's Buyers Want Durability

By Eric Jude

Car buyers today are more concerned about handling and road performance than they are about fuel economy, according to independent research studies conducted by the Armstrong Rubber Co., a manufacturer of replacement passenger tires. The studies show a change in buying habits over the last 20 years.

Twenty years ago "style" and "horsepower" were the key phrases for car buyers who were lured by automobile advertising that featured a sexy blonde and a red convertible. In the 1970s the oil embargo taught the American consumer to be concerned about mileage ratings and "smallness" and "efficiency" became the key words.

The 1980s are seeing a return to the "fun" of driving, with consumers looking to tires to achieve optimum handling and performance.

When asked to rank those factors thought most important when purchasing a replacement tire, 59 percent of the consumers in the study rated durability as extremely important, giving it the highest ranking. Handling was the next favorite choice, being rated extremely important by 35 percent of the respondents, followed by price, 29 percent; mileage warranty, 26 percent; fuel economy, 15 percent, and speed rating, 9 percent.

Within these specifications, consumers have a variety of options ranging from retread tires to tires incorporating the latest designs. Retreads have evolved from being shunned and considered unsafe to being produced at a rate of 42 million per year, according to the Tire Retread Information Bureau. Armstrong's Assurance tire with Tredloc interwoven belting, an innovation in tire design, recently received an award for product achievement from the National Safety Council.

Both new and retread tires offer warranties. Quality tires of both types can be driven at the same speeds under the same driving conditions, according to the retread bureau. Both are manufactured according to federal government standards.

Retreads offer environmental and economic savings — retreads generally cost about 30 percent less than a comparable new tire, according to the bureau. The manufacture of a new passenger car tire requires 7 gallons of oil while retreading uses only 2.5 gallons.

Whether a consumer chooses new replacement tires or retreads, he should replace tires if they have less than one-sixteenth inch of tread depth, according to the Tire Industry Safety Council. Several practices will ensure longer life for tires and promote safety.

— Proper inflation. Check tires at least once a month to ensure that they are inflated to the vehicle manufacturer's recommendations as shown on the tire information placard or sticker in the vehicle. Never exceed the maximum inflation pressure as indicated on the tire sidewall.

— Alignment and balance. Correct front end alignment is essential for good tire mileage and safety. Poor ride in the form of a vibration or thump may indicate a need for rebalancing. Both front and rear tires should be balanced by an expert.

— Rotation. A tire that remains in one position on the car throughout its life may become unevenly worn because of the way a car handles. Through rotation, these wear characteristics can be spread among the tires to keep the wear as even as possible. Radial tires should be kept on the same side of the car in the rotation process, according to the Car Care Council.

— Regular inspection. When you check air pressure once a month, look closely at the tires and remove small pebbles, bits of glass and other foreign objects from the tread. If left in the tread, they could work their way deeper into the tire and cause loss of air.

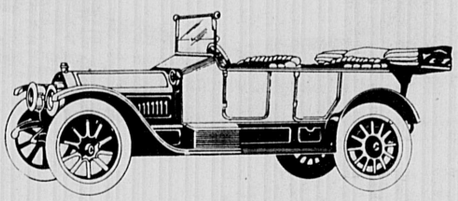

— Driving habits. Observe the speed limit. Avoid jackrabbit starts and stops and fast turns. Look for potholes in and objects on the road. Don't run over curbs or scrub the sidewall of a tire against the curb when parking.

Cars Warning Signals

By Eric Jude

When a car's brakes fail, the result can range from an annoying fender bender to a tragic crash. Brake failures nearly always are due to poor maintenance or improper repair, said J.E. Davidson, automotive technician and accident investigator in Pittsburgh.

But brakes rarely fail without giving notice, Davidson said. A car's brakes often will give warning that they need service. Do they squeal loudly, shudder or pull to one side when applied? Does the pedal drop further than it used to or pulsate up and down under your foot? Does the pedal sink slowly as you hold pressure on it at a stop sign? Do you feel you are pushing harder and harder to stop your car? These are some of the brake distress signals that you should heed, Davidson said.

If you decide to have your brakes repaired by a professional repair shop, discuss them thoroughly with the shop manager or service technician. Ask for a complete brake system inspection, a description of the necessary repairs and an estimate of the cost.

If you plan to do it yourself, purchase a copy of your car's factory service manual from your nearest dealership. It will give you all the information you need to do the job correctly.

According to the Car Care Council of Detroit, a quality brake inspection begins with a test drive, checking for brake noises, pedal travel and brake pulls. Then the service technician will check the brake fluid level. A low level may indicate a leak in cylinders, lines or hoses running to the brake mechanism on each wheel.

The technician then removes one front and one rear wheel and checks the shoe and pad linings for uneven wear, glazing or saturation from brake fluid. He measures the thickness and recommends replacement if linings are below specification.

When linings are replaced, the technician may find that the brake drums or disc brake rotors are cracked, warped or have developed hard spots. These sometimes can be repaired, but the repairs should be done in pairs to retain brake balance, Davidson said.

New mounting hardware may be needed with disc brakes, and new return springs with drum brakes. The wheel bearings should be inspected only if a new wheel seal is installed and the bearings are repacked.

A complete brake system inspection should include the hydraulic system, Davidson continued. The master cylinder and wheel cylinders or calipers should be inspected and overhauled or replaced as needed. The rubber brake hoses should be checked and replaced if they are cracked, ballooned or worn.

To complete the brake job, the entire system is pressure bled with new, clean brake fluid. Finally, the technician should look over the parking brake to make sure it is adjusted properly and not frozen.

After the brakes have been repaired, how long they last will be determined by the way you use them, Davidson said. With an automatic transmissiomn it is easy to rest your left foot on the brake pedal, but this can cause the brakes to drag lightly and wear out prematurely.

On the other hand, prolonged light brake application, called "feathering," can glaze the surface of the linings and make the pedal feel hard. Moderate pedal application is preferable.

Also avoid prolonged heavy brake application, such as when coming down a mountain grade. This can burn out the linings and boil brake fluid, often causing complete loss of the brakes. It is preferable to manually downshift your transmission before starting down the grade. If brakes still are needed, use them intermittently. Apply them for about three seconds, release for the same time and repeat.

Evaluating Insurance Coverage

By Carol Roberts

If you've just bought your first car, you know that before you hit the road you need insurance — but what kind, how much and where do you get it?

If you already have insurance, how can you evaluate your coverage to make sure that it is the best available for you?

Nancy Golonka, vice president of consumer affairs-education for the Insurance Information Institute, offers these pointers about auto insurance.

Most people obtain auto insurance in a package that includes several different kinds of coverage. An insurance agent or company representative can give you full descriptions of each of these coverages, but following are general descriptions. Remember that in each case you're covered only up to the limit stated in your policy.

— Bodily injury liability provides money to pay claims against you and the cost of your legal defense if your car injures or kills someone.

— Property damage liability provides money to pay claims and defense costs if your car damages the property of others.

— Medical payments insurance pays medical expenses resulting from accidental injuries and covers you, your family and other passengers in your car.

— Uninsured motorists protection pays for injuries caused by an uninsured or hit-and-run driver.

— Underinsured motorists protection often is an optional coverage that makes up the difference between the other driver's coverage and the amount of loss he causes you.

— Collision insurance pays for damage to your car resulting from a collision or from overturning.

— Comprehensive insurance pays for damages when your car is stolen or damaged by fire, flooding, hail or other perils, but not when it is damaged in a collision or when overturned.

You don't have to buy each of these coverages if they don't fit your needs. If your car is older, you may not wish to insure it for collision. Most states do require that you have liability coverage, and each state has laws that set the minimum amount.

Rates you pay for auto insurance usually are based on your age, sex, marital status, the kind of car you have and how much you use the car. Young people who, as a group, drive a lot and cause the most accidents are charged higher rates than adults who use the car only for pleasure and are comparatively safe drivers.

But there are many ways to keep insurance prices down. Following are some tips from the Journal of American Insurance on how consumers can control the cost of their car insurance while maintaining adequate coverage.

— If at all possible, own only one car. Only 10 percent to 12 percent of families in the United States pay more than $500 a year for their auto insurance unless they own more than one vehicle. The average premium for a single car is less than $350, or about $28 per month.

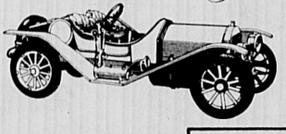

— If you drive an older car, you can save substantially by dropping collision and comprehensive coverage altogether after the car decreases substantially in value. However, don't skimp on liability coverage. If you drop physical damage coverage on an older car, the most you can lose is the value of the car. But if you skimp on liability coverage, you could be faced with a catastrophic lawsuit.

— Take advantage of discounts. Many insurers offer rate discounts for younger drivers who complete a driver education course or maintain good grades in school. For adult drivers, many discounts are available, including one for installing anti-theft devices and another for senior citizens who complete defensive driving courses.

— Keep your agent or representative informed of any changes in your driving habits or age. If you used to drive to work every day but now ride a bus, you may be eligible for a lower premium. And, for example, when you turn 25, most companies also will lower your rates.

— Use deductibles wisely. You can gain substantial savings by agreeing to pay the first $100 or more of each loss out of your own pocket. This cuts out a lot of small claims and handling costs for your insurance company.

Keep Records Of Maintenance

By Dean Carroll

Car maintenance can be as simple as a 10-minute do-it-yourself checkup or as detailed as having your car in the shop for weeks.

Regardless of the degree of difficulty or the cost, regular maintenance is essential to keep a car running properly and, believe it or not, to save money.

According to most experts, many major and expensive repairs can be avoided by finding and making minor repairs as soon as they become necessary.

Many times, minor maintenance can be handled by do-it-yourselfers, while major repairs often must be sent to mechanics. In either case, a good way to make the maintenance even more worthwhile is to keep a record of any maintenance or repair work.

According to Fram Corp., makers of auto parts, keeping a maintenance diary for your car and saving parts and repair shop receipts can prove that your auto has been well cared for — an important selling point that can add dollars to your vehicle's resale value.

According to the Automotive Information Council, the following 10-minute check will let you know if most key parts of your automobile are working properly and which areas may need repairs. Of course, while the check itself will take about 10 minutes, it will take more time to make any necessary repairs. Following are suggestions for a routine check.

Brakes — At about 25 miles an hour, begin braking with a steady pressure on the pedal. The vehicle should slow to a complete stop as long as pressure is applied.

Windshield Wiper Blades — Replacements are needed when the rubber leaves a streak on the window. It's a good idea to replace the blades a couple of times a year in a four-season area.

Shock Absorbers — Push down on each fender. The car shouldn't bounce more than a couple of times. The most obvious sign new shocks are needed is an oil leak.

Tires — Worn treads may suggest a replacement or alignment is needed. When you check tire pressure to meet recommended specifications, do it after the car has been idle for an hour.

Lights — The best way to be sure tail lamps are working is to get out of the car and see for yourself. To check brake and back-up lights, you need another person to look while you step on the brake and put the car in reverse gear. Don't forget the turn signals, both front and rear.

Under the Hood — Check fluid levels for transmission, brakes, power steering, oil, coolant and windshield washer. Check the condition of belts and hoses. Replace worn and frayed fan, alternator and accessory belts. Belts should fit tightly but be careful not to overtighten.

Look For Strings On Low Interest

By Jimmy Thornton

From time to time, new car dealers will advertise unusually low interest rates to induce you to purchase their make of vehicle.

However, the Federal Trade Commission advises you should look a gift car bonus under the hood, so to speak.

The following are some FTC-suggested questions to ask about what appears to be a low interest rate deal.

— Will you be charged a higher price for the car to qualify for the low-rate financing? Would the price be lower if you paid cash or supplied your own financing from a bank or credit union (which, as far as a dealer is concerned, is the same as a cash transaction)?

— Does the financing require a larger-than-usual down payment (25 percent to 30 percent down)?

— Are there limits on the length of the loan? Would you have to pay it off in 12 or 24 months?

— Do you have to buy special or extra merchandise or services to qualify (such as rust-proofing, extended warranty or service contract)?

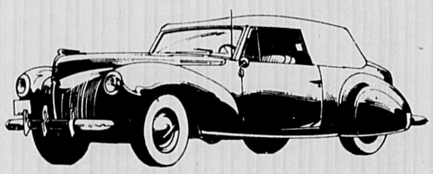

— Is the financing available for a limited time? Some merchants require you take delivery by a specified date.

— On which cars does the low rate apply?

— Do you have to sacrifice a manufacturer's rebate by giving it back to the dealer (assuming one is offered)?

The FTC advises you read the contract carefully and understand exactly what you will pay.

Curse of The Working Class

By John Sinor

The windshield wipers quit working on the way home the other day. I checked the fuse. It looked fine.

Cars are the curse of the working class. Especially the class that doesn't know a blessed thing about how they work.

I recently spent about two grand on my wife's car. And it is three years newer than mine.

Maybe they could have fixed it for $50. There's no way I will ever know.

Anyway, I replaced just about everything on that car except the body.

First the engine. Then the clutch. Then the water pump. Then the brakes. Then the wheel bearings.

It seemed as soon as I got one thing fixed, something else went wrong.

Every time she called and said, "The car sounds funny," my blood pressure went up.

We went through three mechanics.

I returned a screwdriver that the first one left under the hood. If he had been a doctor and the screwdriver a scalpel, I could have sued him for malpractice.

He just said, "Thanks. I wondered where I left that."

"Why were you using your windshield wipers, anyway?" she asked. "It's not raining."

I said, "I know it's not raining. I'm not blind. I was trying to wash the dust off the windshield."

The squirter thing worked fine. Left a big glob of windshield cleaner right in my line of vision.

But the wipers wouldn't budge.

I told a friend about it. He said, "It's got to be the fuse."

I said, "It can't be. The fuse is fine. Besides, the lettering on the cover says the same fuse is used by the turn signal. And that works fine."

Later in the day I made a short run to the store. On the way home I noticed the turn signal had stopped working.

The skies were darkening. And my mechanic had closed shop for the day.

All my car troubles come at nights or on weekends when the shop is closed.

Cars should be regarded as patients. There should be emergency hospitals for them. With a little supply of tranquilizers for their owners.

I got home and said, "Life is getting too complicated."

Outside the skies grew darker.

I went out to the car and once again removed the fuse. It looked brand new.

I'm no mechanic, but I know what a burned-out fuse looks like.

Then I noticed a little mistake on the fuse box cover.

One of the fuses was supposed to be for the rear window defroster.

I don't have a rear window defroster.

So I took all the fuses out. They were all the same size — 15A.

Then I closed my eyes and mixed them up in my hand, so I didn't know which ones had been where.

Then I replaced all of them.

I turned on the ignition and the engine started up. I flipped the handle and the windshield wiper started working like crazy. The headlights worked. The radio worked. The heater worked.

Everything worked beautifully.

I went upstairs and said, "I fixed it."

She said, "What did you do?"

I said, "Just made an adjustment."

What a mechanic!

Critic's Corner

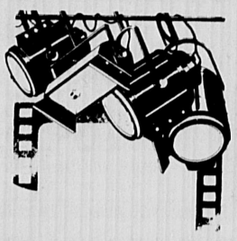

PENN AND HUTTON

THE FALCON AND THE SNOWMAN

Uneven docu-drama about two young men from affluent California families who sold government secrets to the Russians and were convicted of espionage. Director John Schlesinger relates the details of this true crime story with persistent energy. Yet, various unanswered questions arise as to the spies' motives which leave the film in a muddled state. Timothy Hutton and Sean Penn give realistic and dynamic performances as the two chums turned traitors. (R)

© 1985 CINEMAN SYNDICATE

BEVERLY HILLS COP

Eddie Murphy, as a brash, street-wise, Detroit detective, shakes up posh Beverly Hills in his quest to find the killer of a friend. Murphy engagingly turns on his cool charm, pulls off numerous impersonations and teaches the local by-the-book cops some effective police tactics. The bloody ending is heavy handed, but there are ample laughs and thrills for thorough enjoyment—Murphy style. Also with Lisa Eilbacher and Judge Reinhold. (R)

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with .58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over — from Maine to Rhode Island to New York — but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

Knox Dodge, under the leadership of Bud Knox, invites residents to come in and meet the new generation. At the Knox dealership buyers will have the best of three generations.

For over 50 years Knox Dodge, at the same location in Somerville, has been here to sell and service Dodge cars and trucks. Knowledge, integrity, and concern for the buyer has been the company's hallmark.

Knox Dodge has earned Chrysler Corp.'s Five-Star Service Excellence Award with Service Manager Tony Baleno and boasts the largest parts department in New England with Frank White at the helm, joining Chrysler Corp's Millionaire Club for parts sales each year since its inception.

Everyone is invited to come and avail themselves of the best buys offered by competent professionals in the automobile business. Bernie Fox, General Manager, will greet visitors along with Jeff Knox, the new generation sales manager.

Join in the grand opening of the "New Generation" Knox Dodge and the Washington's Birthday annual display of the beautiful new line of 1985 Dodge cars and trucks. Refreshments will be served.

The "Good Guys" are alive and well and operating successfully at 645 Broadway, Somerville, striving not to be the biggest, just the best. What else is there?

Coombs Motors

Coombs Motor Company at 66 Galen st., Watertown, has always believed individualized attention to each customer is their unquestionable right — no matter what department they are dealing with.

The service department is headed by Gordon Stone and Paul Blanchard. They have over 58 years as Ford technicians between them. They are always there, able and willing to help with any mechanical problem that may arise.

The reasons are obvious for sales, service and parts — Coombs Motor Co. — The area's leading Ford dealership.

They don't have to work as hard as they do, nor do they have to give the best service in the area — they want to. The service technicians at Coombs Motor Co. are professionals in the truest sense of the word.

Through their hard work and attention to detail, the automotive mechanics at Coombs Motor Co. have earned the reputation as the areas best service department.

As a matter of fact, more than three quarters of the people who buy new cars at Coombs Motor Co. do so not only because of the company's reputation for generous trade in allowances, but because of the service.

COMPETING AGAINST NEW HOMES

If you are considering selling your older home but are worried about competition from new homes, here's something to think about.

Generally speaking, whether buyers choose to look at new or resale homes, there are tradeoffs in both directions. Older homes usually offer more living space for the dollar and are usually built on larger lots. Because developable land was more plentiful in earlier years, builders also had a great choice of where to build. Therefore, the location of a resale home may be more desirable. Also, there is no guesswork in action. Landscaping has matured, neighborhoods have formed and a buyer doesn't have to be concerned about how the area will develop. It already has.

On the other side, new homes may be more energy-efficient and require less repair and maintenance.

How does your older home stack up against new home offerings? Your best bet would be to have an experienced residential agent provide you with a current estimate of its market value.

Pair Keeps Vigil Of Hope For Hostage

By JILL M. HIGGINS

In Lebanon, Islamic extremists are holding four American hostages.

In Winchester, the terrorists are holding two hostages — Frank and Mary Langone.

The Langones have been living in fear for the life of their longtime friend William Buckley, one of four Americans held in Lebanon.

Buckley, a Medford native, is a political officer at the U.S. Embassy in Lebanon. He has been reported missing and is believed to be a hostage of a fanatical Islamic group.

Frank Langone said on Monday that he has long been a friend of Buckley, ever since Buckley hired him as custodian at the Lexington Public Library.

"He helped us in our time of need. He was right there for us," said Langone.

He explained that Buckley gave him a break after he lost his job when the Ford Motor Co. shut down in the early 1960s.

At that time, explains Langone, jobs were scarce. "I had two small children at home. It was hard getting a job and I was in a real predicament," he recalled.

The Lexington job, he added, was a godsend; an act of admirable kindness on the part of Buckley.

"He (Buckley) was assistant director of the library then, and he came through for me when I needed a break."

Mary Langone, a local school crossing guard, also spoke with concern and care about the former library official who is being held captive in troubled Lebanon.

"It's my husband who really did — I mean does — know him best," she said. "We never talk in the past because there's always hope," she added quickly.

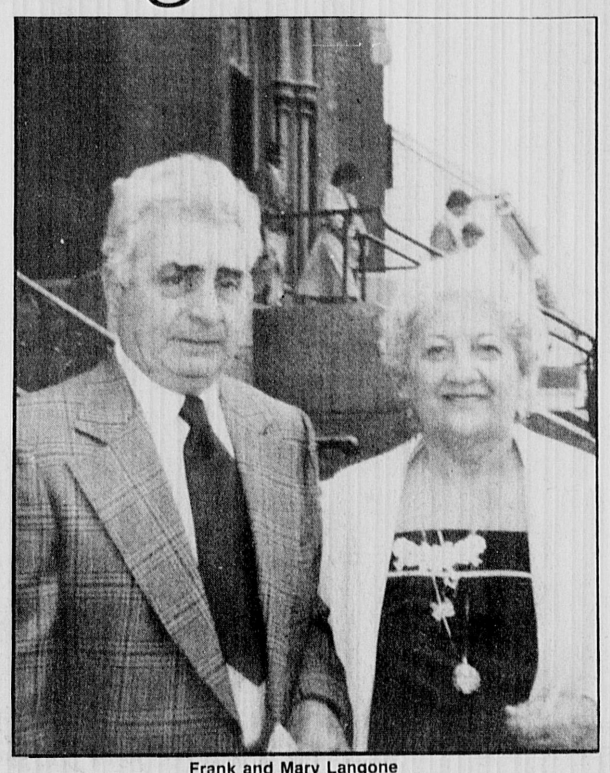

"Mr. Buckley is just a kind, kind man. I can't imagine why anyone would want to do this to someone like him.

"He reminds me of Mayor Ray Flynn in Boston — always willing to anything he can to help people out."

The Langones said Buckley is an extremely patriotic man who takes great pride in his country. He would always stand up for his country, they said.

Langone said Buckley is well-known about Lexington for his diorama — a three-dimensional model — that details the historic battles of Lexington.

"He has always been very big on history," said Langone. He added that Buckley's Lexington diorama was exhibited in world fairs, and is now on exhibit in Lexington.

Frank and Mary Langone

"He always sent us cards and such," added Langone, "He always kept in touch."

Mary Langone said they are keeping a scrapbook of news items and clippings on Buckley, a bachelor.

"When he gets home, it'll be so nice to have a scrapbook for him," she said. "It'd be nice for him to know how much people are thinking of him. He's a very sentimental person; I'm sure it'll mean a lot to him."

Meanwhile, a former hostage who was held in a house where Buckley and the others may also be held, returned to the U.S.

Ex-hostage Jeremy Levin on Monday returned to the U.S. after his daring escape in East Lebanon last week.

Frank and Mary Langone are hoping their friend, U.S. Official William Buckley, will be released soon by his Islamic captors.

Levin said that for 11 months he "literally sat in darkness and deep gloom . . . in irons and misery" in a house where officials suspect the four hostages, including Buckley, are being held.

Looking obviously fatigued, the grateful Levin arrived at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland on Monday waving a small American flag.

He then appealed to the Islamic terrorists holding Buckley and the others to "let my brothers go."

Levin, a television reporter, said in emotional news conferences that he had escaped his captors by tying cloth sheets together and using them as a ladder to flee the terorists' compound.

While Levin has said he was not tortured or beaten during the 11-month hostage ordeal, he admits the kidnapping was extremely difficult.

He was abducted last March in Beirut by terrorists claiming membership in the Islamic Jihad. Levin was working as a bureau chief for the Cable News Network.

According to reports, Levin was cheered by about 100 family members, State Department officials and friends — many wearing yellow ribbons, recalling the symbol worn in remembrance of the American hostages home from Iran four years ago.

Among the officials to greet Levin, who arrived by C-135 jet provided by the White House, was Acting Secretary of State Kenneth Dam.

Dam said Levin's "long and cruel captivity aroused the nation's indignation and sympathy and your courageous escape to freedom has won our admiration."

Speaking of the four Americans still held hostage, Dam said, "We will continue to make every effort to obtain their freedom as soon as possible. They should know they are not forgotten."

No, they won't be forgotten. But they are missed

Just ask Frank and Mary Langone.

Town Budget Time

Police Seek 7.1% Hike, Fire Budget Also Increases

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Winchester Police Chief John P. McHugh is looking for a $106,081 hike in his budget — up 7.1 percent over the current $1,564,401 budget.

At a Selectmen's hearing last Wednesday, the chief said most of the increase stems from equipping and maintaining the town's new police/fire station, which will not be ready for occupancy until at least September.

Selectmen reviewed two of the town's major department budgets Wednesday — the police and fire. The fire request is $1,527,892, up from the $1,511,125 allocation for the current fiscal year.

Crying budget constraints and Proposition 2½, the board asked each chief to suggest areas in the budgets that could withstand cuts.

But neither chief, most vehemently McHugh, was willing to describe services that could take the ax.

"I can't in good judgment come here and say 'this isn't the best I could do,' "said McHugh.

"I never have padded a budget in my life and I haven't now. I think padding a budget is a form of dishonesty," he added.

The police request includes plans for a new $4,500 "fail-safe" alcohol breathalyzer system which would include an audio-visual taping system for police booking procedures.

"It will save a lot in court costs," said McHugh. "It's been proven that the taping of suspects often presents enough positive proof of wrongdoing," he added.

Selectman Wade Welch agreed with McHugh, adding that "since its inception, the videotaping of suspects has proven very successful in and out of courts of law.

"Considering the expense of court cases, I think it'd be worth the town's while if we had such a setup," added Welch, who practices law with a Boston firm.

Also the subject of some discussion was the topic of police overtime pay costs. The matter drew some controversy last summer, when Selectmen demanded explanations for the expenditure of $5,080 for overtime.

This year, the chief is requesting $84,388 for overtime costs, which he attributed to the costs of running the new station.

"Even though we won't have the problems that we have with the station situation we have now, we'll just have new ones," said McHugh. He added that the new station will be much bigger than the department has had, which could mean staffing adjustments.

"I thought the reason the overtime was out of sight before was because of the split operations," said Welch. The police headquarters now is located in the Lynch School basement, with dispatching services operating out of a trailer at the old station which is being enlarged.

"What can I say," said McHugh. "I can't cut the overtime without cutting services. Sure, you can save a lot of money by cutting people," said an irritated McHugh.

The board then grilled McHugh on training costs, asking him if some training requests could be delayed and granted on a sporadic basis.

Board Hears $3.9m DPW Request

By NANCY PICK

In the best of all possible worlds, town departments would receive every dollar they ask for in their preliminary budgets.

Town officials and Town Meeting, however, must cut those requests down to size.

Last Thursday, Selectmen reviewed the wish lists of two departments: the weighty $3.9 million budget requests of the Dept. of Public Works (DPW) and the more modest $210,000 proposals of the Recreation Dept.

Although all departments were asked to fund their programs at the same level as last year, both the DPW and the Recreation Dept. made appeals for increases.

Budget requests from town departments totaled more than $1 million above Proposition 2½ guidelines, Selectman Michael Saraco said.

The DPW, for instance, requested nearly $400,000 more than Town Meeting allocated it last year.

Selectman Wade Welch commented, "I know it's a good budget. There isn't a lot of water in it. But when it comes back hacked up, you've got to know there have to be cuts somewhere," he told DPW representatives.

If the DPW's requests are granted, the budget for the town's transfer station, a temporary garbage holding facility, will soar $155,000 above last year's budget, said DPW Director Dominic J. Serratore.

He said the transfer station is already operating in the red, and he projected a $46,000 deficit by the end of fiscal 1985.

Next year, transfer station costs are expected to rise again, when a new trash-incinerating facility opens in North Andover.

Winchester now pays $21.50 per ton to haul and dispose of trash, Serratore said. That cost may climb to $30 per ton when the new North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC) facility opens, possibly as early as July, the DPW director said.

And $30 per ton is a "very conservative" estimate, he said.

Serratore blamed the transfer station deficit so far this year on underbudgeting for fiscal 1985 and on a decision to dispose of grass clipping and leaves at the transfer station, which he said received no funding at all.

Prior to last year, the garden refuse was dumped into a transfer station field, Serratore explained.

This year, however, the field was full. In order to make it usable next season, the DPW has been removing the organic matter. That way, Winchester could avoid trucking the grass clippings to North Andover in the future.

"Believe me, we're going to be making loam out of our ears," Serratore told Selectmen.

He said he hopes the 1985 snow and ice budget will have sufficient funds left over, in the wake of a mild winter, to cover the transfer station debt.

And Serratore said he has sent a memo to the Finance Committee asking them to earmark $46,000 for the transfer station, in the event that winter storm demands use up the surplus funds.

The preliminary DPW budget also includes a $53,000 increase in water and sewer funding.

The department has requested about $15,000 to modify water pipes on dead-end streets and about $12,000 more for summer-help salaries.

Last year the DPW paid high school and college students $3.35 an hour to paint fire hydrants and clear brush in the reservoir, Serratore said.

Snakes And Other Crawly Things. . .

By ERIC W. BLOM

"Who's not afraid of snakes?" asks Donald Winas of the Sherborn Zoological Research Institute.

More than 100 children race to put their hands in the air. Only four girls, sitting together during the Muraco School program last Friday, admit a fear of snakes.

However, tension covers the face of each youngster as Winas prepares to take out his first creature. He sees that his goals of dispelling the children's fear of snakes (ophiphobia) and increasing their knowledge of the reptiles have not yet been met.

The teacher tells a curious boy who crowds a bit too close to the snake demonstration, "Sit down." She repeats herself as two others inch from their knees, trying to catch a glimpse of the animal Winas prepares to exhibit.

Each youngster strains toward the stage where the black-bearded man reaches into his gray wooden box. The children's eyes grow wide as they see the keeper struggle to lift the heavy animal from its cage.

Soon, the anticipation is quelled, as

POLICE LOG

Tuesday, Feb. 19

A 19-year-old Washington st. man was arrested at 12:30 a.m. on charges of malicious destruction of property, following state trooper John Farnam's report that two tires had been slashed on his cruiser.

The incident occurred while the car was parked in Farnam's Washington st. driveway, he told local police.

Several hours earlier, Farnam had confiscated the suspect's Motron moped and taken it to the Lynch School police station. He alleged that the 19-year-old was riding it illegally, police said.

On Tuesday, the orange moped was still at the police station.

The suspect was booked at Lynch and bailed at 2:10 a.m. Tuesday, officers reported.

• Firefighters doused a smoking car on Church st. at 6:15 p.m. The driver, a Englewood rd. woman, was not injured in the incident.

Firefighters said the smoke was probably caused by a defect in the 1981 AMC Concord's transmission or crank case.

Monday, Feb. 18

• Arsonists tried to set two trucks on fire at the T. Tighe Sons trucking and warehouse company on Holton st., police reported, but caused only minor damage. The incident occurred sometime during the weekend.

The trucks' scorched interiors were discovered by a driver who arrived at 9 a.m. to work on the vehicles, authorities said.

The dashboard of one International truck was partly burned, police said, and the rug of a second truck had been set on fire.

The Tighe truck driver told police he thought the trucks would be back on the road Tuesday.

Also, officers said diesel fuel was found near a third truck, which sustained no damage.

Police confiscated a propane torch from the warehouse, which they took to the station to check for fingerprints.

Firefighters responded to other minor fires in the same area on Saturday. (See below)

• Police arrested an East Boston woman on charges of receiving stolen property, speeding and driving after revocation of a license when they discovered two purses filled with personal effects in the front seat of a car stopped on Main st.

According to police, the pocketbooks were missing from employees' lockers at the Touraine store in Medford's Meadow Glen Mall.

Police confiscated the purses along with two sets of identification cards, cash, a number of perfume bottles and a black wig.

The 29-year-old suspect was booked and taken to the Woburn police station.

• Gold, pearl, and diamond jewelry hidden in cereal boxes was stolen from a Ravine rd. home, the owner reported, while the family was on vacation.

The woman told police that a cellar light was on when she returned home, but that everything else seemed to be in order.

Later, she discovered the jewelry was missing from its hiding place in the kitchen cabinet, the homeowner told police.

Police found no signs of forced entry into the house, they reported.

The homeowner said diamond earrings she valued at $7,000 were missing, along with a second pair of earrings, a pearl bracelet and necklace, and a gold bracelet.

• A two-car collision on Main st. left one man with a bloody nose, police reported. The injured man, a Harvard st. resident, was taken to Winchester Hospital for treatment.

The company's alarm went off twice during the same period, the firm's owner told authorities.

The car belonged to the officer, not the town.

• The rear window of a 1982 Ford station wagon was smashed by a rock between 7 and 8:45 p.m., the car's Canterbury rd. owner told police.

• Police received reports of youths horsing around in the train station waiting room. Officers said all was quiet when they arrived.

Saturday, Feb. 16

• Firefighters responded to two railroad car fires behind T. Tighe Sons trucking and warehouse firm at the Woburn line.

At 4:20 p.m., Winchester firefighters sent Engine 1 to extinguish a fire in a Boston and Maine caboose. Woburn firefighters took over and investigated the incident, officials said.

Then, at 7:33 p.m., a fire in a Burlington Northern flat car was reported. Firefighters said it was a paper fire which extinguished itself. None of the lumber in the railroad car caught fire, they reported.

The man said the bank later told him there was no money in his deposit envelope.

• A car belonging to a Salem, N.H., woman was rammed during the night while parked in an Oak st. driveway, police reported.

The homeowner's brother told police he heard noises outside at about 4 a.m. but did not notice any damage to the car until he left for work.

• Police responded to a noise complaint on Richardson st. shortly before 5 a.m. Officers advised a man to stop banging on his girlfriend's door, they reported, "or face the proverbial music."

Buckle Up For Safety

Officer Kevin Mawn checks to see if Timmy Hall, 4, of Bacon st. is wearing a snug seatbelt. Last week, Mawn reminded elementary school parents about the child passenger safety law, which states that "All children under the age of 5 must be fastened in a properly adjusted car seat or safety belt." The policeman distributed copies of the law along with heart stickers that read, "We love you. Buckle up!"

Local Police Suspect Drug Overdose

A 21-year-old Upland rd. woman was rushed to Winchester Hospital at 7:45 p.m. Monday when she was found having convulsions on Shore rd.

Police said her illness was probably due to a drug overdose.

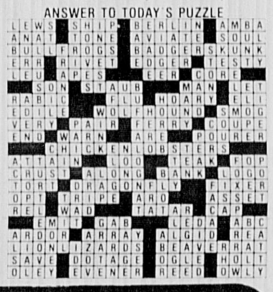

According to police, one of the woman's friends said she had drunk "a lot" of vodka and ingested half a gram of hallucinogenic mushroom at lunch that day.

Police and doctors have speculated that the mushroom might have been treated with a poisonous drug known as PCP, authorities reported.

Some of the mushroom substance was recovered by police and will be sent to a laboratory for analysis, an investigator said Tuesday.

Police have issued no charges and no arrests have been made.

Local Candidates Move Along The Campaign Trail

Francis X. Curran Announces School Committee Candidacy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

F.X. Curran of 586 Washington st. has announced his candidacy for election to the School Committee.

Mr. Curran is a graduate of Boston College with an M.A. and L.Ph. in the field of philosophy. He has been involved as a teacher, counselor, and administrator both in the private and public sectors of education throughout his career.

Mr. Curran has a deep concern for the educational process of all children, but particularly for those who have recently entered school or who will soon begin. He is convinced that with an effective experience in the classroom from kindergarten through grade 4, and with support from home, there is no child who cannot become a "self-learner."

The following briefly summarizes Mr. Curran's philosophy of education: Learning is not a didatic communication of facts, but rather the fruit of a relationship between a teacher and a student.

The primary goal of a school system must be to develop each student's capacity to "learn how to learn."

Education is a life-long endeavor and "schooling" is an important but brief part of this process.

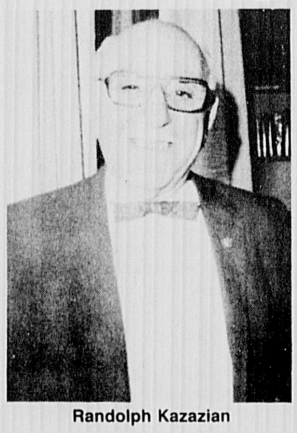

All Children Can Learn — every teacher and administrator must be persuaded to this fundamental truth.

There are two kinds of knowledge: (1) self-discovered and (2) imposed. The only true knowledge is that which is self-discovered. Imposed knowledge is temporary and gives the illusion of achievement, for it renders one capable of passing tests.

If you share these concerns in the education of our children, Mr. Curran welcomes your support for his candidacy to the School Committee.

Randolph Kazazian Sr. Seeks Return To Housing Authority

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

Randolph Kazazian

Randolph L. Kazazian Sr., 49 Lincoln st., who one year ago was appointed by a vote of a joint session of the Winchester Housing Authority and Board of Selectmen to serve out Mary Murphy's term, is announcing his candidacy for that position.

He is a Town Meeting member representing Precinct 2 and a member of the Names Committee. He and his wife, Rena, have lived in Winchester for 50 years. They have two children Randolph Jr. and Barbara.

He has always been active in civic affairs. As a charter member of Lions International Kazazian has served as King Lion and treasurer and is still very active in the organization.

Currently, he is treasurer of both the Sons of Italy Lodge and the Aberjona Civic Association, serving on their many committees.

Upon his retirement in 1979, he became a member of the Jenks Senior Center assuming many responsibilities.

Since being appointed to the Housing Authroity Kazazian says, "I am aware of the great need for adequate housing. I am very interested in the welfare of our Winchester residents and will endeavaor to maintain the town's high standards of living. I ask for your support in the coming March elections."

O'Connell: Form Of Service, Not Values, Will Change

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

Edward F. O'Connell

Ed O'Connell is changing, but Ed O'Connell has not changed. that is the message that Selectman Edward F. O'Connell brings to the voters of Winchester as he terminates his service on the Board of Selectmen after nine years and seeks to gain a seat on the School Committee.

The issues may change and the cast of characters may change, but O'Connell vows that, given the opportunity, he will bring the same qualities of analysis, reasoning, and judgment to bear upon the problems confronting the School Department that he displayed in his three terms as a Trustee of Winchester Public Library and three terms as a member of the Board of Selectmen.

O'Connell believes that his background in townwide affairs would be an asset to service on the School Committee and would help to bridge the gap between general purpose government and educational affairs. He is quick to point out, however, that what he seeks to accomplish is not an original idea. Two of his predecessors as a Selectman, William J. Speers, Jr. and John A. Dolan, also went on to further service as members of the School Committee.

O'Connell's professional career has been a blend of educational and governmental service. He has taught at every level from junior high school through graduate school. In addition he has been assistant dean of the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy at Tufts University and director of secondary education for the schools of the Canal Zone government.

At one time he was a foreign service officer who served tours of duty in Panama, the Congo, the Ivory Coast, and the State Department in Washington. Currently he is the deputy regional director of the United States Department of Education. He has had articles published in leading national education journals; was contributing editor to a guide to the teaching of American literature that was published by Ginn & Co.; and translated several books from Spanish into English.

O'Connell is a graduate of Tufts University with a master's degree from Boston University. He also holds certificates in international studies from the School of Advanced International Studies of Johns Hopkins University and from Oxford University in England.

It is O'Connell's belief that each child has the right to look forward to an educational experience that will enable maximum development of his or her potential. It is important that this belief extend to all students: the gifted, the average, the less than average and those with special needs.

Education of our youth is too sacred an obligation to settle for less than a best effort. We know the enormity of the challenge, but we should not shrink from it. The time has come for resourceful, innovative and prudent decision makers to take on the challenge.

I welcome the opportunity to be a part of the team that will maintain high educational standards while considering our citizen taxpayers. It will not be easy, but it can be done. People who work together can still accomplish wonders.

Muggia: Concerns, Goals For Town's Policy-Making Board

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

Judie Muggia, candidate for a seat on the Board of Selectmen, understands that the board is the policy making body for Winchester. This realease outlines her opinion on forming and instituting policy in several areas. In her next release, she will give her views on issues affected by the Selectmen's policy.

To set effective policy, the Board of Selectmen should:

1. Review and clearly understand its duties as outlined in the charter and bylaws.

2. Conduct specific review and planning sessions to assess past activity and to set goals for the coming year.

3. Hold both quarterly meetings to assess progress and a year-end session to review accomplishments and carryover items.

Areas of Concern include:

Charter review. This year during the mandated comprehensive review of our charter, the selectmen must, for example, look at townwide committee appointment rules in particular.

Currently, our charter allows apointments which may create the appearance of conflilct of interest.

Conduct of weekly board meetings. Particular attention should be paid to the reception extended citizens and guests. More would be accomplished by controlling discussion of non-agenda and past-voted items.

Attention to the direction of both Town Meeting and citizen referenda. Town Meeting members and all voters must expect their mandate to be carried out as promptly as possible. Instructions through the vote, such as that in favor of granting a liquor store license, always deserve the quickest possible implemention.

Accessibility. Selectmen should be as accessible as possible to the public.

Judie Muggia

I plan to work at Town Hall a minimum of three days a week as well as to be available at other times. I would welcome comments and suggestions from the public and consider service to Winchester a Selectman's most important responsibility.

Main St. Project Sept. Completion Seen

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Winchester's latest downtown revitalization project is expected to begin within weeks and be finished by September, according to developer Anthony Albiani.

The Main st. project will include construction of a 16,000 square foot office and retail building, which could house the town's first liquor store, according to Albiani.

Meanwhile, the Massachusetts Industrial Financy Agency this week approved a $1.3 million industrial development bond for the Albiani Development Corp.

According to Albiani, the next step is to secure financial agreements with area banks for the project.

He added that the new businesses would likely mean about 60 to 70 new jobs to Winchester, depending on the number and type of businesses that move in.

He said four prospective tenants have applied to the town for the town's sole liquor store license, but he refused to identify them.

"I don't think that would be right," he said when asked why he would not divulge their names. "It's just too early yet."

Demolition of two buildings at the site, off Park and Elmwood, which have housed the Winchester Art Assn. and a former electronics business, won't begin until after the new building is constructed.

The Art Assn. is slated to move out tomorrow, according to Albiani. That group is still negotiating with potential landlords in efforts to relocate, according to spokesmen.

The land upon which the two buildings are located will be used for a parking lot, said Albiani.

The Albiani project is part of the town's Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD).

Locating in the town's existing commercial area district qualifies the project for the low interest rate financing through the state financing agency.

Albiani said the agency's approval of the $1.3 million industrial development bond is the first step toward the construction.

Now, he said, he will contact area banks to get the bond money.

"If we can come to terms with the banks then we'll be all set," said Albiani on Monday. "If not, then we'll have to turn down the bond agreement," he added.

"I'm expecting it to be half business and half retail," he said, adding that the size of the businesses will depend on the tenant.

"We're negotiating with a couple of prospective tenants now who are talking about around 1,500 square feet each.

Of course, if we're talking about 2,000 square feet per tenant, we're talkling basically eight businesses. It really all depends on the tenants' needs," said Albiani.

He said he expects the project will "fill a void in the ugliest part of downtown."

The service seeks to motivate a commitment on the part of participants to become personally involved in the peacemaking process as individuals and as families within their communities, their nation and the world.

The St. Mary's World Day of Prayer service will be held at the church, Washington st. at 1 p.m. Speaker will be Sister Mary Hennessy, R.C.

Armenian Church To Honor Women Survivors

Because of the 70th Anniversary of the genocide, this year the group will honor the women survivors of the genocide of 1915.

The church services will be conducted at 11 a.m. with the participation of St. James of Watertown, St. Gregory The Illuminator of Haverhill, S.S. Vartanatz of Chelmsford, Holy Cross of Lawrence and Armenian Church of Cape Cod, followed by a luncheon and program.

Local residents working on this committee are: Andre Bakarian, Cynthia Kazanjian, Ann Toomajian, and Araxie Toomajian.

The program will consist of musical renditions by Arpie Kouzouian accompanied by Helen Mouradjian. Speaking on "women who gave their lives" and "women survivors" will be Dr. Krikor Maksoudian. Two women who have survived the genocide and deportations will give their personal testimony on this occasion. Among the special guests to be honored will be Mr. Krikor Derderian of Methuen who at the age of 109 is one of the oldest survivors of the genocide.

Please call the church office at 354-0632 or chairman of the Women's Guild, Phyllis Martins, at 876-6918 for reservations.

Cemetery Restriction Removed After 63 Yrs

By ERIC W. BLOM

While a housing shortage makes it difficult for some to find a place to live in Winchester, there should be plenty of room for those who die here.

A 55,904 square feet section of the Wildwood Cemetery that has been restricted for 63 years was opened to interments last week. The move will "extend the cemetery several years in its lifetime," according to Randolf Kazazian Jr. of the Wildwood Cemetery Board, the group that oversees the town-owned cemetery.

It appears as though the area was originally restricted because three houses, occupied by the superintendent of cemeteries, other department heads, and the cemetery caretaker, sat on the land.

"I presume he [the caretaker] might have been a little nervous about having burials right around his house," Selectman Michael Saraco said, speculating on the reason for the restriction.

Since the land — 47 percent of the property purchased from Alice Pratt in 1922 — no longer housed anyone, the Cemetery Board asked for a warrant article that would have removed the restriction on burials.

However, in a letter to the board, Town Counsel Douglas Randall noted that a warrant article would not be necessary. The restriction was more than 30 years old and never renewed, stripping the clause of its legal basis.

He did suggest that since a declaration about the restriction had been made at a Town Meeting, the issue should at least be noted at the Town Meeting this spring.

At the Selectmen's meeting, there was some dispute about whether or not the issue should be brought before the meeting. If the restrictions no longer exist, why should the matter be placed on the agenda, wondered Selectman Wade Welch.

"I don't disagree with Wade," said Selectman Alan Macdonald, "but I like Doug's [Randall] stategy. Even though I do agree technically that no restriction exists, I would like it to go to Town Meeting.

"If there are members of the Pratt family who still are interested in this," he added, "then I'd be interested to know what their thoughts are about this."

"Let's try to keep the Town Meeting short," Saraco said. "I don't know who is going to remember why this restriction was put in in 1922 anyway."

Macdonald said he was convinced by the other Selectmen's arguments and the board voted to open the land for burial without having the matter go to the Town Meeting.

The Cemetery Board plans to use the area for 1,000 double-deep graves. Because the land needs less preparation than other parts of the cemetery, there will be a cost savings, Kazazian said.

Saraco suggested that an increased fee could be charged for the area since they would be "choice plots," and he asked that the Cemetery Board come up with development plans to submit to the Selectmen.

★ Snakes

a butterscotch-colored paca lifts its head from the box, twitching a thin, rodent nose toward the third graders in the front row.

"Ahhhh," they sigh, appearing relieved. The paca — named Alex — blinks.

Winas explains that pacas, such as Alex, are harmless hairy creatures with a few comical idiosyncrasies. For instance, he says, pacas like to eat pizza and pasta and drink beer.

Just the thought of the hairy little guy wolfing down pizza and beer makes the young crowd ripple with laughter.

And then, the youngsters nod knowingly when Winas explains that Alex is related to the common gerbil and hamster family. Just as quickly, their expressions change to sad faces when they learn that Indians used to make dinner out of the hairy mammals.

After placing Alex back in the hutch amid a chorus of "bye, bye's," Winas builds the suspense by promising to bring out a reptile. The children strain to see the expected snake, but instead he pulls out "a big, fat toad."

Six-inch-long legs dangle from its flour-colored body as the youngsters squeal.

"You don't have to worry about stepping on this toad in your backyard," Winas jokes.

He tells the boys and girls that the "warts" on the toad's back are poison glands which "could kill a good-sized dog."

Finally, the children are shown a snake. The small hognosed serpent darts its tongue into the air. It is smelling the room, Winas explains.

The keeper rolls the reptile into a ball and sticks it under his black and green sweater to show that the slithery creature is harmless.

Lacking in poison, the snake "pretends to be a cobra to scare people away" and plays dead when encountering an animal that has never seen a cobra. It feeds on toads, but not ones as large as his pet, Winas explains.

The next animal the instructor brings out, a king snake, hung like a camouflage-colored pretzel from Winas' hand. The reptile's four-foot-long body is immune to venom, Winas says, and the serpent feeds on rattlers and other small snakes.

"Ugh," the children pronounce in unison.

From among the youngsters, four volunteers are chosen to hold the snake. The first, Michelle DeFuria, takes the snake as soon as it is handed her, but she holds the animal in tense hands at arms-length. She says it is sticky, but not slimy.

The next youngster, Marc DiFelice, walks toward Winas, who unexpectedly wraps the snake around the boy's neck. Its head rests on the boy's gray and red Patriots sweatshirt.

Marc blushes, his face matching the color of his hair, but he smiles and says he isn't afraid.The boy turns in a circle, unwinding the snake into its keeper's hands.

After the last child touches the snake, offering her impressions, Winas explains that any stickiness they felt probably came from the sweat on their own nervous palms. Snakes are "perfectly dry" because they have no perspiration glands, he explains.

"There is no such thing as a slimy snake," he says.

Finally, the moment of truth arrives, the moment promised from his first statement of the day: the display of a boa constrictor. Four students hold the bag as Winas draws forth the seven feet long half-grown snake.

His name is Ted, "a short name for a long snake," Winas explains.

Saying that the Boa kills by using its muscular body to suffocate its victim, Winas half-wraps the South American serpent around Keith McClearn's neck. The snake has 70 to 75 teeth, set in four rows like a shark, the snake-handler says.

"Do you need Keith around here any more?" Winas asks the youngsters.

"No!" they shout in unison.

"He [the snake] would swallow Keith head first, but I don't have time for that," Winas says with downcast eyes.

"Oh" and "please" the children answer. Keith smiles at his friends' good-natured jest.

"I have absolutely no feeling in my right arm right now," Winas mutters, looking at the animal coiled there.

He puts the snake away, and the children leave for the day, but they carry with them the feeling that not all snakes are the monsters movies make them to be.

Even the giant cobra can be harmless, they've learned, if it's handled with a cool head.

Water Conservation

Each American uses more than 60 gallons of water a day, and over 20,000 gallons a year, according to the Metropolitan District Commission.

Hug Day

On Friday, Feb. 15, Lynch School celebrated its third annual Hug Day.

The observance was begun in 1983 by Lynch Library Aide Peggy Hallisey with the encouragement of Principal Andrew Allan. Hallisey had read of the success of a hug service offered to students by college librarians during exam periods. Its purpose was to help students "lighten up" during this stressful time and to make them aware that they were part of a community which supported and cared about them.

Lynch parents were encouraged through the school's weekly newsletter to make the day special by starting their children off to school with a hug and a special surprise in their lunch boxes.

Throughout the day, all members of the Lynch community could stop by the library for a hug. The more inhibited were offered a bookmark and a smile. All students were given the chance to win a giant Hershey's Kiss which was raffled off at the end of the school day.

Hug Day is part of the February Lynch Library theme of families. All month, the students will have the opportunity to fill out book report forms voting for their favorite book family.

Class library visits focus on family stories which inlude: "Peter's Chair", "Tikki, Tikki, Tembo" and "Make Way for Ducklings".

The events are aimed at improving reading skills while deepening their appreciation of what it means to be a family. Students learn differing views of families as: "Little Women", "Ramona and Her Father", "Dear Mr. Henshaw" and "The Homecoming".

Winchester Kernels

When an armed robber prowled on the loose at the Woburn Ramada Inn, Bruno the police dog — Winchester's own — came in to save the day.

Only he didn't.

Poor Bruno snuffled around a bit but couldn't pick up the scent.

At least the weather came to Bruno's defense. Police officers admit it's difficult for canines to track a trail in the rain.

New Englanders have a thing for heritage and traditions that sometimes confuses residents of other parts of the country.

One holdover from the early days of the country that appeals to both transplants and native-born folks is Town Meeting.

Town Meeting — almost a miniature legislature — offers residents an opportunity to have a say in exactly how their town is run and their taxes are spent.

In some communities, any registered voter can take part. In others — like Winchester — voters choose representatives, who take up the items on the meeting's agenda, or warrant.

In either case, there's still a grass-roots democracy. Citizens can petition the meeting to consider any issue, and may even address the meeting.

It's too bad that Town Meeting seems to be fading away for lack of interest in some towns.

Arlington, with only one long spring session, has trouble getting a quorum — enough members to conduct business — as the meeting drones on toward summer each year. They also have trouble in some precincts getting enough people to run.

Town Meeting here is broken up into two more manageable chunks, but Winchester seems to be affected by a growing apathy, too: some of the eight precincts have just barely enough candidates to fill the seats — and one precinct falls short by three people.

If Town Meeting disappears from New England, the alternative is what much of the rest of the country lives by: a city council, board of overseers or alderman.

In essence, a handful of people set policy — instead of the town at large. That would be a shame.

The weather's been pleasing just about everybody (in spurts) these days.

The snowbunnies got a good weekend of skiing last week; this weekend, spring fever struck.

Joggers were out on the road in shorts and T-shirts; even saw some golfers playing through the last few snowdrifts at the country club on Sunday morning.

Folks who hibernate all January sneaked out for a stroll — and the breezes, although they were brisk, had the soft brush of spring, not the biting edge of winter.

Hope the skiers won't be offended — but spring can't come too soon!

Town Clerk Carolyn Ward says that census returns are barely trickling in — only 71 percent of the town's homes have returned them. Her staff is staying late each day and coming in Saturdays to try and complete some by phone.

"Sure would appreciate it if people would drop those forms in the mail, bring them by Town Hall, or even call in the information," Ward says.

The census is serious stuff — it determines the town's election districts, and can affect its representation in the State House and the state aid it receives.

Come on, folks — it only takes two minutes. (And if you'd done it when you were supposed to, it would only have cost 20 cents to mail — instead of 22 cents!)

While Winchester may be having its share of hassles gathering state census data, Lynn officials are apparently getting an earful — literally.

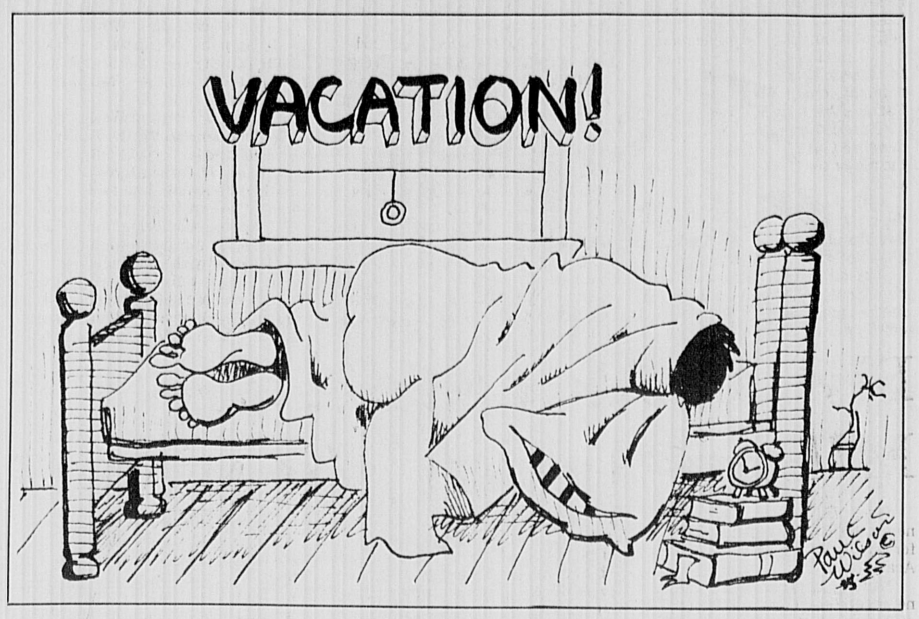

According to that area's newspapers, census takers are doing the job by telephone.

Gathering census information is probably tedious enough, but just imagine having to be strapped to a phone for hours on end!

Speaking of phones, received a recent mailing on telephone answering services that imitates the voices of celebrites.

A Thought Touched Off — By A Tooth!

BY TERRY MAROTTA

A piece of my tooth flew off yesterday at the dentist.

Of course pieces of teeth are always flying off at the dentist, I realize — that's what the drilling is all about — but they arrange things artfully so you don't actually notice 'em whirling around in your mouth there.

I guess it's like the little pup-tent the doctors and nurses pitch on your tummy when you're having an operation. The last thing they want is for you to wake up mid-way through the thing, glance down and scream "What's that you just took out of me?!"

The difference is, at the dentist they don't need tents and anesthesia; they rely instead on the fact that nobody so far, without the aid of a mirror, has been able to look inside his own mouth. They pin you down with sheets of rubber and heavy-duty dribble-bibs, so you can't see anything if you want to.

Then they distract you with a lot of cheerful talk. The radio plays special dentist-office ballads dealing with heartbreak and betrayal. And the last thing you're thinking about is the fact that your teeth are disappearing, bit by tiny bit, as the drill whines and grinds its singing way through your enamel.

It's the last thing I was thinking about, I can tell you.

I wasn't ready in the least for the sight of a toothchip in the palm of my hand. The dentist offered to throw it away for me, but I said, no thanks; I'd keep it, if it was all the same to him.

"I've been carrying it around ever since. I take it out and look at it from time to time; just take it out and look at it.

It's a reminder to me, I think, of the passage of time. When I cruised this world inside my mother's belly, the beginnings of this very tooth slumbered deep in the flesh of my just-forming baby jaw.

It popped out into the light when I was — what - 10? And it's been with me ever since.

Teeth have that nice sense of permanence about them. Even after you die, your chompers go on for a while, grinning up at the sky when all the rest has turned to dust. They're built to last.

But nothing lasts forever. Not even them; not even me.

It's the first time in my life, unbelievably, that I've come to grips with this fact.

I got to thinking about what kind of old lady I'll be. At first I tried picturing myself as someone placid and ample and heavily cushioned, like your favorite easy chair. It made a nice image. I saw myself as cuddly, with lap enough for two. I'd putter around in print housedresses, I figured, and keep kleenexes stored up inside my sleeves.

Then I tried seeing myself as skinny with a down-turning nose. If I'm that type, I'll wear little sneakers, probably, and buzz around like a mosquito, fussing at the pillows. I'll be up at midnight threading needles and talking to the moon. My early years were never very placid; why should my later ones be?

Maybe I'll be an old person who wears the same clothes all the time. You see this kind, though they're men, generally. It's just the green tweed sportscoat, thanks very much, and the few wisps of hair standing up bravely by themselves on the top of their heads.

I may be a nodder-off in the middle of sentences. My great aunt was this type. She could fall asleep anywhere, and often did. She fell asleep at the dinner table once — slid right out of her chair and collapsed like an armful of coat hangers onto the floor.

However I grow old, I'm going to try to like doing it. I'm going to try to be all simple and smoothed out about things. Teenagers will enjoy my company because I understand them. Money won't matter to me; worldly power will be as nothing; I won't even care if the dishes don't get done before noon.

We're all headed for old age — us lucky ones, that is. I'm going to try and enjoy the journey, whatever it brings.

I figure if I can get a bang out of having my teeth filled, I'm on the right track for it.

BEACON HILL

This week's report records votes on roll calls all dealing with local aid resolutions.

APPROVE RESOLUTIONS (H 5018) — House 140-5, Senate 26-6 approved non-binding resolutions expressing the intent of the legislature to provide cities and towns with $156.5 million in increased local aid in fiscal 1986.

Supporters said the resolutions are designed to help cities and towns plan their budget by informing them of the minimum amount of local aid they can expect.

Opponents said the resolutions do not go far enough to help cities and towns and noted they supported many amendments to increase aid and distribute it in a different manner.

A "Yea" vote is for the resolutions. A "Nay" vote is against them.

Rep. Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes. Sen. Richard Kraus voted no.

$10 PER CAPITA (H 5018) — House 91-55, Senate 26-8 rejected similar amendments increasing the proposed local aid by $4.8 million and raising the minimum from $5 per capita to $10 per capita.

Amendment supporters said this would raise the local aid to some $161 million

Opponents said the amendment goes too far and claimed an increase to $10 is prohibitive.

Saltmarsh voted yes, Kraus no.

Resident Reviews The History Of Why The Fells Reservoirs Were Closed To Traffic

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Reading with interest the tentative plans to reopen the roads and land within the Winchester watershed, I am puzzled by the lack of interest as to why the woodlands around the reservoirs were originally closed.

We have read, with longing, of the sylvan idylls of our forebears - who augmented the family larder with overflowing baskets of blueberries and mushrooms, with an occasional trout from the reservoirs thrown in for good measure.

The cumulative effect of the use of the watershed up to the year of 1935 was that North Reservoir had to be shut down for three months that year due to the problem of people relieving themselves in the woods surrounding the water supply.

In the year 1935 - when we first realized how really unhealthful our water supply had become, the state dept. of Public Health advised the town to install two chlorinators at the reservoirs in order to make our water safe for consumption again.

The chlorinators did not do the job - even with extra policing of the area - and thus the Dept. of Public Health saw no other solution of the problem than closure of the watershed. The town quickly agreed and the unhealthful condition of our water began to show marked improvement.

Here in Winchester, despite the rapidly escalating national problem of air and water pollution, we are blessed with a great rarity - a healthful and dependable water supply. This fact alone should give us all thankful pause - and have us ponder the effect of the admittance of large numbers of the general public into the watershed area.

I have always loved the outdoors and the inherent natural beauty of Winchester - so thus have been saddened that the unique and fragile beauty of the watershed area has been denied to all of us throughout my lifetime.

I have gratitude, however, that this beautiful open area is there, and great thankfulness that due to the foresight and planning of town and state officials in 1935, we are not bound to weekly deliveries of bottled water today.

I hope that any "study committee" formed for the purpose of reopening the roads and land of the watershed will keep uppermost in its collective mind that it is starting out with a water system that is second to none and which is the envy of every town and city in the immediate area.

With appreciation,
Daniel T. Chane III

Pet Owner Questions Critics

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The recent letter from "the residents of the Mary E. Murphy Apts." which was signed by "The Residents of the Mary E. Murphy Apts. And the John L. Doherty Apts." is puzzling me. Who wrote the letter? Where are the signatures of these mysterious tenants who object to pets? This appears to be no better than an anonymous letter if they lack the courage to stand up and be counted.

A few weeks ago I personally contacted 38 residents of Palmer st. and 49 at Westley st., most of whom indicated they felt dogs should not be permitted on the premises but had no objection to indoor cats. In fact many of them even expressed the wish that Maggie might be allowed to stay.

To me, the letter from "the residents" has no validity because I know these nice folks are not two-faced.

Reader: Why Punish All?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In answer to the letter from "Name Withheld" in the Feb. 14 Star on opening reservoir area, no one to my knowledge has requested stopping patrols of our waterlands.

MDC and Appalachian Mountain club officials have requested a review of rules and procedures in the joint water-and-park lands surrounding our reservoirs to reduce the large number of complaints received last summer. We all recognize that to protect our water supply from acts of a small number of people, some patrolling is required.

Allowing the public access on foot to joint service roads but not to land on the reservoir side of such roads (whether park or water lands) could aid in patrolling such areas.

Why penalize 98 percent of our citizens who are law-abiding because of the 2 percent who will cause trouble regardless of the rules?

We have some valuable park lands in and around Winchester which all decent area citizens should be able to enjoy.

Sincerely
Malcolm H. Masters

Resident Backs Pet Owner

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I sincerely hope members of the Winchester Housing Authority will temper their judgment with kindness and sensitivity in the case of Marian Hatch and her cat, Maggie. Clean, quiet and loving Maggie is a joy to the residents who visit her.

Miss Hatch, a lifelong Winchester resident, has been the first to help the elderly in distress, and I join the many who wish this fine lady well at a most distressing time.

Reader Says Postmaster 'Acted Hastily'

(The following letter was sent by Mrs. Daniel A. Manley of Winchester to the postmaster of the local Postal Service office. The Star is reprinting the letter as written at the request of Mrs. Manley, who decries Postal Service rules that required a longtime employee to remove from display photographs of his family which were on post office window.)

Dear Sir:

How could you act upon an annonymous letter? The snapshots Mr. Dresser had at the window made an otherwise impersonal building a bit more human. As a patron of the Winchester Post Office for the past 20-odd years, I feel you acted hastily and unwisely.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Daniel A. Manley

Resident Remembers KAL Plane Tragedy

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If one of your neighbors had beaten you up, set a fire to your house, and killed your spouse, would you give him a gun? Would you give him food or make him a loan? Would you destroy your own fire arms? Obviously not.

It may appear ludicrous to even bring up such an implausible situation. Instead, would you seek to protect yourself and your family and bring the criminal to justice.

Yet neighbors of our country are trying to destroy us and our government's only response has been to "sell" food to those neighbors, give them loans (which are rarely, if ever, repaid) supply them with the technology, and in many cases, the weapons they are using to threaten us.

On Sept. 1, 1983, a Soviet fighter plane shot down Korean Air Lines (KAL) flight 007 killing Congressman Larry McDonald and 269 innocent men, women and children.

This atrocity made the headlines for a few weeks and was the main item on most television news shows for a few days.

President Reagan expressed his outrage and we were all horrified at this butchery. Yet, despite the fact that a U.S. congressman was murdered along with other 268 innocent passengers, nothing of substance was done!

The Kremlin could care less about world opinion. After all, they had ordered the assassination of Pope John Paul only a few months earlier. And they continue to use outlawed chemicals and gas on the freedom fighters of Afghanistan.

But our government continues to trade with Communist dictatorships, sending them high technology grains, defense-related equipment and treating them as legitimate governments.

The shooting down of KAL 007 has made no difference in US government policy. The harsh retoric of the Reagan administation was not backed by any meaningful action. And this despite the fact that the technology that allowed the Soviets to locate and shoot down a US Congressman and 268 other innocent people on a civilian air liner came from the United States.

Respectfully,
Rupert W. Kuglin

They're Off To The Races — For Town Boards

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

The starters are at the gate, the races are about to begin — and it looks like the town may see some real competition in the town elections.

All candidates who plan to be on the March 26 ballot had to file their nomination papers with Town Clerk Carolyn Ward by 5 p.m. on Feb. 12.

Enough candidates met that deadline to ensure races for most of the major town posts opening up this year.

Only the Board of Health, the Northeast Regional Vocational School Board and Town Meeting Moderator attracted single candidates.

The other boards — like Selectmen, Housing Authority, School Committee and Planning Board — will offer voters a choice.

There will be a four-way race for the two seats opening up on the Board of Selectmen. (Each seat is for a three-year term.)

First to file her papers was Judith Muggia of Dartmouth st., on Jan. 28. Next was incumbent Mark Lombardi, on Jan. 31. The Ware rd. resident is seeking his second term.

Robert Deering of Kenwin rd. filed his nomination papers on Feb. 8, and Lorna Tseckares of Highland ave. filed her papers in the afternoon of the last possible day, Feb. 12.

Incumbent Selectman Edward O'Connell, a three-term veteran of that board, will not be running for re-election.

Instead, O'Connell, an Arlington st. resident, is running for School Committee.

Two others are also seeking the two available three-year positions on that board.

M. Catherine Gatto of Winthrop st. filed her nomination papers for School Committee on Feb. 1. Gatto is an active member of the Community Schools Assn.

Francis X. Curran of Washington st. filed his papers on Feb. 12. This is his second run for School Committee; he was a candidate last year.

A fourth potential candidate for School Committee, Francis J. Massiglia of Cambridge st., had drawn papers for the race but did not return them by the deadline.

The two School Committee members whose seats are available — Dr. Roger Bauman, and Constance Pappas — both decided not to run for re-election. Bauman has served since 1979; Pappas has been on the board for nine years.

For the single opening on the Board of Assessors, there are two candidates: incumbent Sherman R. Josephson of Salisbury st., who is seeking his second term, and John J. Murphy, of Arthur st.

For Jean Thomas' seat on the Board of Health, the only candidate is Dorothea M. Sopper of Canterbury rd. Thomas, a nine-year member of the board, chose not to run for re-election.

There are two openings on the Planning Board for seats belonging to Marion Crandall and Daniel R. Kenney.

Both filed papers seeking re-election. Crandall, a Stratford rd. resident, is a two-term member of the board. Kenney, of Church st., is finishing his first term.

But there are three challengers for those seats, as well: Ann Matarese of Surrey rd.; Daniel T. Chane III of Forest st.; and Irad B. Hardy III of Edward dr.

For a single, five-year seat on the Housing Authority, there are two candidates: William A. McCarthy of Tufts rd. and incumbent Randolph L. Kazazian Sr. of Lincoln st. Kazazian was appointed last year to fill Mary Murphy's unexpired term.

For the single post among the Trustees of the Public Library, both incumbent James W. Blackham Jr. of Fenwick rd. and Beverly Hedegor of Florence st. have filed papers.

John. F. Looney Jr. of Perkins rd. is the only candidate for the town's four-year representative to the Northeast Regional Vocational School District board. Incumbent Gerard Donahoe, a 12-year veteran and current chairman of that board, will not run.

And Town Meeting Moderator John Sullivan, a Canterbury rd. resident, is unopposed once more — as he has been since he was first elected in 1977.

Besides the just-passed filing deadline, there are a few more important dates for candidates and voters before the March 26 elections.

The Board of Registrars must verify the signatures on each candidate's nomination papers by Feb. 26, discounting duplicate signatures in a single race, and those who are not registered voters.

Feb. 27 is the last day to challenge a candidate, or for a candidate to withdraw from the ballot. (Anyone pulling out later than that will still appear on the ballot.)

On Feb. 28, at 4 p.m., the Town Clerk will hold the drawing to determine in what order candidates will be listed on the ballot. It is open to the public.

And March 6 is the last day anyone in town can register to vote in the town elections. To make it easier, the Town Clerk's office will hold special hours.

They will open specially for registrations from noon to 8 p.m. on Saturday, March 2, and extend regular office hours until 10 p.m. on March 6.

Five Local Students Are Military Academy Nominees

Cong. Edward J. Markey, has nominated five Winchester students for admission to the U.S. Service Academies.

Markey announced that he has nominated Jose Calero, of Dix st., son of Dario and Maria Vargas, for admission to Annapolis; Matthew Kennedy, of Mayflower rd., son of William and Mary Kennedy, for admission to West Point; Paul Mortenson, of Priscilla lane, son of David and Carole Mortenson, for admission to the Air Force Academy; Robet Nigro, of Thornberry rd., son of Frank Nigro, for admission to West Point; and William Rowley III, of Oxford st., son of William and Margaret Rowley; for admission to West Point.

Each of Markey's nominations have been forwarded to one of the service academies — West Point, Annapolis, the Air Force Academy, or the Merchant Marine Academy — where the final selection process continues into the spring.

The four academies have review boards which evaluate the congressional nominees and other candidates from around the country. These boards make the final decision on appointments to the service academies.

"These students who have been nominated as candidates for the U.S. Service Academies have demonstrated outstanding character. In addition, these young people have strong scholastic records, exceptional leadership ability and have been actively involved in a variety of community and extra-curricular activities."

Town Meeting:

Enough Candidates For All But Pct. 8

Each year, the town's eight precincts elect one-third of the 192 Town Meeting members to three-year terms.

Most of the precincts have at least enough candidates to fill the eight seats in each precinct this year.

Some, like Precincts 5 and 7, regularly have more than enough candidates.

However, this year Precinct 8 has too few candidates for the available openings. The remaining seats can be filled by write-in votes, but are not always.

When that happens, says Town Clerk Carolyn Ward, the members of that precinct must hold a special caucus before Town Meeting, and elect someone to fill the empty seats until the next town election.

The same procedure is followed when someone resigns a Town Meeting seat mid-term, because they are moving away or their circumstances change, Ward says.

That process leads to ballot listings of seats for one-year or two-year partial terms, in addition to the 64 Town Meeting seats that regularly come up for election.

There are five one-year openings and five two-year slots this year.

All but two of those partial terms — a one-year seat in Precinct 6, and another in Precinct 8 — have declared candidates who hope to fill them.

Candidates for the 74 Town Meeting seats open this year follow by precinct; they are listed in alphabetical order, with incumbents marked by an asterisk (*). (Ballot positions will be determined by a drawing at 4 p.m. on Feb. 28 in the Town Clerk's office.)

Summer Youth Job Program Is Getting Under Way Now

Preparations are under way for this year's Summer Youth Employment Program which will enable over 1100 economically disadvantaged young people to spend eight weeks working for local public and private nonprofit organizations. Program coordinators are accepting youth employment proposals from area nonprofit organizations which are interested in serving as worksites this summer. Over 700 proposal packets have already been distributed.

The Employment Program will run from July 1 through Aug. 23, and participants will work from 25 to 35 hours per week. The federally funded program is administered by Employment Resources, Inc., a Cambridge-based job training and placement agency which provides services to 20 Massachusetts communities including Arlington, Belmont, Winchester.

According to Summer Youth Director Eileen Keegan, the purpose of the program is "to provide young people with a well-structured environment that leads to a positive work experience." At the same time, Keegan adds, "We want the work to be meaningful, to benefit the community at large."

While the program is available to 14 through 21 year olds, the majority of past participants have ranged in age from 14 to 17. "We're searching for employers who've demonstrated a commitment to fostering learning and growth." This year, the coordinators are particularly interested in expanding clerical and day-care opportunities, because many of the program's participants have expressed a desire for those kinds of jobs.

Keegan is also hoping to expand the number of special "task-oriented" projects which employ groups of youths for the purpose of accomplishing specific, beneficial goals.

Among the most successful of last year's special projects were a weatherization project in Cambridge, a "teen-help" project through which teenagers provided assistance to the elderly, and beautification projects in Cambridge, Malden, Medford, Revere, and Somerville.

Non-profit organizations that are interested in participating in the Summer Youth Employment Program must submit proposals to Employment Resources by March 15. Interested organizations may request proposal packets by calling the Summer Youth Program at 492-0591 or 492-5178.

WINCHESTER CATHEDRALS

Capt. Josiah Locke built this house in 1803, and it retains many Federal characteristics, including tall chimneys, a pyramidal "hipped" roof, and windows divided into six small panes.

Town's Oldest Homes Merit A Closer Look

By NANCY PICK

(First in an occasional series on Winchester architecture).

Old homes conjure up nightmares of antiquated plumbing, crumbling plaster, faulty wiring and creaky floors.

Too often, people snub a home's architectural heritage.

Too often, they rush right past a fine Federal fanlight, a sharp Gothic Revival arch, or whimsical Victorian trim.

Too often, they forget to look up.

Local architecture buff William O'Connor, head of the history department at Winchester High School, knows what they're missing.

He knows the sheer pleasure of pinpointing a home in history. And he says houses reveal much about the people who built them: their resources, their ingenuity, their taste, their lifestyles.

O'Connor says the oldest in Winchester dates back to 1711. He laments that it has been completely remodeled, however, leaving it almost unrecognizable as a pre-Revolutionary homestead.

Other homes — originally all farmhouses — have better preserved their architectural heritage. O'Connor points out. A good historian-sleuth can find at least four examples of Federal architecture in town, all built between 1800 and 1830.

Essentially, Federal-style homes are plain and rectangular, symmetrical and straight-forward. O'Connor argues that "They reflect all that Yankee ingenuity and hard work and simplicity."

Charles Bulfinch, the man who designed the Massachusetts State House, stands out as New England's foremost Federal architect.

Yet Yankees can't take all the credit for the tasteful buildings. Federal architecture was strongly influenced by British builders of the period who were fond of flat and well-balanced structures.

Casual observation won't reveal which Winchester homes are genuine Federal, O'Connor warns. Some have been altered by later additions, obscuring their original lines.

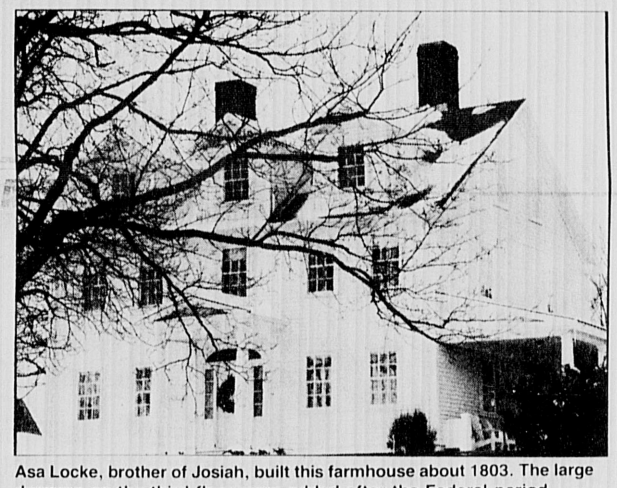

To complicate matters, O'Connor says many homes built 50 to 100 years later copied the Federal style and can sometimes be confused with the original.

The history teacher depends primarily on two sources to verify architectural authenticity: a survey of Winchester homes conducted in 1979 and his own mental encyclopedia of architectural styles.

Josiah Locke House

Capt. Josiah Locke's homestead at 195 High st. stands out as Winchester's best example of Federal architecture, O'Connor says. Relatively few changes have masked the home's original appearance.

Capt. Locke earned his stripes in the Revolutionary War, when he served with the Woburn Militia many years before Winchester's independence from neighboring communities. After the war he bought 100 acres of farmland and in 1803 built a house.

Asa Locke, brother of Josiah, built this farmhouse about 1803. The large dormers on the third floor were added after the Federal period.

Typical of a Federal home, the Marshall Symmes House has five openings across the front: four windows and a door on the first floor, and five windows across the second floor.

Locke built it to last, and he left his initials, "J.S.L.," stamped in a kingpost of the attic.

The home's perfect symmetry is a hallmark of the Federal style. Five openings break the front of the house into even parts: four windows and a door divide the first floor, and five windows balance them on the second floor.

Towering chimneys are another Federal sign, and O'Connor says they aren't just for show. Their extra height, he explains, makes them draw smoke more efficiently, important in the days before heating stoves.

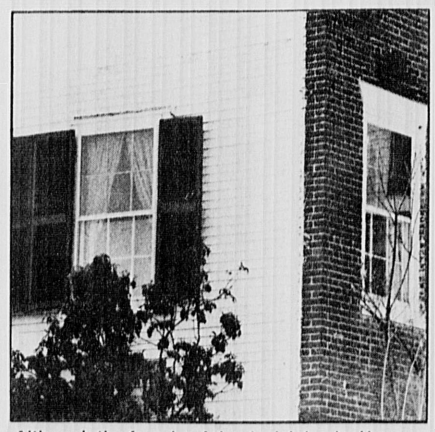

And window panes also provide a clue to Federal style. A close look reveals six small panes on the bottom section.

When Locke drowned in 1818, the house was passed down to his wife. It stayed in the family until 1906.

The Marshall Symmes House on Main st. displays a typical Federal doorway. A fanlight crowns the entrance, and sidelights border it, maintaining perfect symmetry.

Although the facade of the Josiah Locke Home is wooden clapboard, its sides are built of brick. Brick was just becoming available to Winchester settlers in the early 1300s.

But the history of the home did not end there. In 1911, a Boston banker named Thomas Vinson bought the house. His daughter, Maribel Vinson Owen, inherited the spacious home in 1942.

Both Maribel and her daughters, Laurence and Maribel, were world-class figure skating champions. Sadly for the town and for the country, they were killed in a plane crash in 1961, along with the rest of the U.S. skating team en route to Czechoslovakia.

Winchester's Vinson-Owen School is named in their honor.

Marshall Symmes House

Constructed circa 1817, the Symmes farmhouse is more "vernacular," that is to say less high-style Federal, than the Josiah Locke house, O'Connor says.

Yet the Symmes house doorway displays typically Federal details that the Locke house lacks.

An elliptical fanlight window graces the door, as well as skinny side windows which extend three-fourths of the way to the floor.

Pilasters, or flat ornamental pillars, adorn the four corners of the house, built in a simple Doric style, saucer-shaped at the top.

Unlike the Josiah Locke house, the windows have been changed to a later Victorian style, with just two panes over one large one.

Yet O'Connor, a competent architectural sleuth, says the house's attic windows give away its Federal identity. Over on the side of the house, the little windows high up on the third floor still have six panes over six.

"People didn't tend to change their attic windows," O'Connor explains.

Again, four tall chimneys grace the roof. "Comfort is becoming an important aspect here," says the history teacher. With at least eight fireplaces, the farmers could stay toasty during the cruel New England winters.

The house's architect is unknown, as is the case for all four homes discussed in this article.

"Local craftsmen for the most part built these houses," O'Connor explains, "rather than an architect. They had plan books they could refer to, but that was it."

Asa Locke Farm

"We have a few Federal houses in town that are so changed you'd hardly recognize them," says O'Connor.

The house now known as "The Farm" is one example, he points out. When three dormer windows were added about 1910, they altered the Federal look of the farm.

"Those dormers are huge," O'Connor exclaims. "They dwarf the house."

Yet the historian concedes, "I'm not sure it's so terrible. At the time, they modernized it, that's what they did to it. "It's a good example of a house that has undergone renewal and change as time goes on," he explains.

The farm must be treasured despite the architectural alterations, says Bertha Hamilton, who now lives there with her husband, Curtis. It is "the sole surviving complex of farm buildings in Winchester," she writes, "and one of the few intact early-19th century farms in the Boston area."

Philemon Wright, the first owner of the farm and the man who sold it to Asa Locke in 1800, earned a lasting place in history — but not in this country.

Wright, a veteran of the American Revolution, set off for Canada on a sleigh and pioneered the development of Ottowa. He established mills, farms, transportation systems and commerce in the region. In 1980, Canada honored his contribution to the growth of the nation with an immense bronze plaque at the Locke Farm.

When Asa Locke ran the farm 150 years ago, he grew prolific vegetables and fruit, selling his produce in Charlestown and Boston. Later, the 182-acre property was split between his sons, and when the farm was sold out of the Locke family in 1974, only 20 acres remained.

The farm, located at 78 Ridge st., now harbors 5,000 organically grown strawberry plants, which ripen in June for harvest by local fruit fans.

It is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Dana Fay House

The Dana Fay house at 37 and 39 Pond st. represents yet another twist in the Federal homes still standing in Winchester.

"There is no way you could pick it out as a pre-1830 Federal-era house without knowing the history of it," O'Connor warns.

"It's very low to the ground," he says. "I suppose that's a clue."

But otherwise, the clues are few and far between.

The hip roof was removed about 1886 and replaced with a regular gable roof. The tall chimneys were taken off. Porches were added, windows transformed.

In fact, the entire house was moved in 1886, when it was picked up from 179 Cambridge st. and transplanted to Pond st.

In the case of the Dana Fay house, it takes a true architectural sleuth to track its Federal heritage. O'Connor relishes the challenge.

Archival Center

The Henry E. Simonds Archival Center on High st. is open on Tuesdays from 9 to noon, and Wednesdays from 11-6 and 7-9:30 p.m. Original artifacts and documents from Winchester's past are on display and available for research.

Curtain And Cue

Giving Credit Where Credit Is Due

By BILL STEVENS

There are always a few people in any production of a play that do not get the credit they deserve. They wind up faceless names at the end of the program that go unread, but unnoticed in the eyes of the cast.

There are many such hard-working people in Curtain and Cue's spring production of 'How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying', which will be performed March 7, 8, and 9 at Winchester High School.

One such diligent worker is the production's assistant director-producer Katrina Nelson. Nelson has been involved with Curtain and Cue since her freshman year, when she worked on the production of the fall play, "The Jury Room."

This year, Nelson puts in about 20 hours per week solving the everyday hassles of play production. She acts as a mediator between director Brian Milauskas and the cast, and is in charge of all the financial dealings in the play. She acts as prompter and has to be able to answer, at any given moment, anything from who has what shoe size to whether a dance step looks awkward on stage.

"I like to be dedicated to something," explains Nelson. I like to be able to look back on the play and say I was a part of that. It gives me something to be proud of."

It is obvious to all that without Nelson the play would not be moving along so smoothly.

Another crucial part of the play's success in Ana Perez. Although Ana has only been in the country five months, and is still learning English, she has been chosen, because of her great dancing ability, to be the dance captain. This means that aside from knowing all her own dances, she must also know all of the other dance steps in the play. So Ana is there all the time helping the rest of the cast smooth out the rough edges.

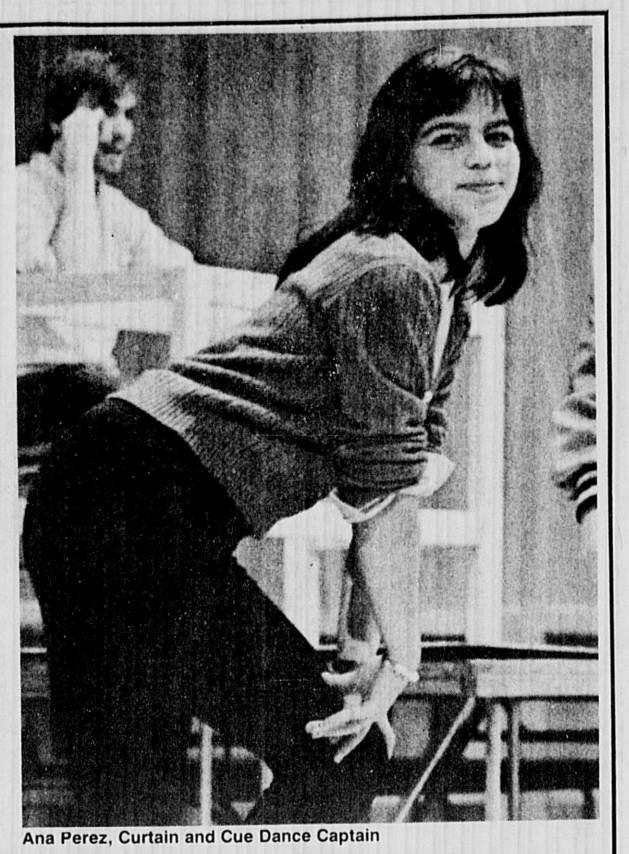

When the sounds of building come from the auditorium it's probably Patrick Berkeley. Berkeley, who has been a member of crew since his sophomore year, is building the newest play's set almost single-handedly. "I get a lot of satisfaction knowing that I have built a working set from nothing but lumber and nails," Berkeley says.

His responsibilities include set design, construction and lighting, as well as any sound effects needed for the play. He puts in about 15 hours a week building the elaborate sets needed for the production, but he thrives in his work.

Finally, there is one large group of cast members who deserve a great amount of credit for coming every day, dancing and singing. The chorus is one unit that sometimes gets overlooked but is a crucial part of any performance. This year's chorus is especially talented and seems to be enjoying the work they're putting in to it.

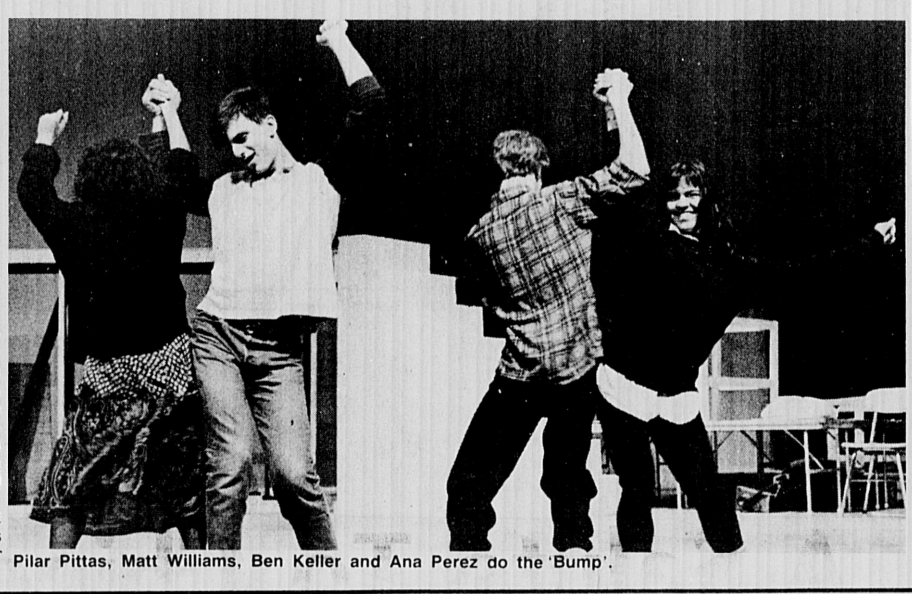

As chorus member Mark Wilkinson put it, "I like the work because it does not seem like work when you're up there with people you enjoy being around."

Year Of The Ox

According to the Chinese zodiac, 1985 is the Year of the Ox. People born under the Ox sign, one of the 12 Chinese animal symbols, are said to have the following characteristcs:

"Ox year people have a ring of serenity about them and they are good listeners. Yet for all their patience, they anger easily and display it openly. Ox people speak little, yet when required to speak they can be most eloquent.

They are stubborn and possess a great mental alertness. They are exceptionally clever with their hands and can do a variety of things. They hate to fail in anything they attempt, and hence are usually successful throughout their lives."

(From "The Chinese Fortune Calendar," compiled by Kathryn Dare.)

A Salute To Chinese New Year

By NANCY PICK

An immense fried fish lies on the dining room table. For five days, it must not be touched.

It is Ew, the good luck fish, whose name also means Plenty Left Over. Ew brings abundance for the New Year.

From the table, Ew listens to the family's every word (though children's words don't count). Thus, one must only talk about good fortune while the fish is present.

Ew is an ancient Chinese tradition for the New Year, which begins today, marking the most festive season of the Chinese calendar.

With the fortune of the coming year hanging in the balance, traditional Chinese are superstitious about the season. Many rituals accompany it, beyond the familiar dragon dance to scare away evil ghosts.

The Chinese, for instance, honor their ancestors, make gifts of money, splurge on new clothes and new hairstyles, and prepare special foods — like Ew — to assure good fortune for the coming year.

Although many Chinese Americans have abandoned the old traditions and superstitions, some still recall the way their parents and grandparents celebrated the New Year halfway around the world.

Two Taiwan natives, Jeanne Tahnk of Fletcher st. and Carole Wyant, who works for Century Publications in town, recall many of the ancient New Year's rituals.

On the top floor of the Taipei townhouse where Tahnk's parents live, there is an altar. Near it, on a scroll, the names of the family's ancestors are listed, going back many generations.

At the New Year, her family burns special play money for the ancestors. Tahnk describes, "so they won't be poor ghosts and bother people."

Wyant, who also comes from a traditional Chinese family, says her father would speak to the ancestors at the New year, welcoming them into the home and offering them the airborne ashes of the paper bills.

"This is for you to spend to help you," he would say, with fragrant incense burning. "We hope you do not have any problems on the way to eternal life."

The custom of offering money to the ancestors, says Tahnk, has practically died out. "In my generation you just don't do that," she asserts. "I don't want my kids to think I'm odd."

Tahnk says she misses the electricity of the Taipei marketplace, bustling in the holiday rush, full of flowers, sweets and oranges for good luck, artists writing special sayings with swift brush strokes, women buying bag upon bag of provisions for the holiday feasts.

"There's a little bit of excitement if you go to Chinatown," says Tahnk, "but nothing like home."

Wyant says a traditional New Year's Eve banquet would last two or three hours. But no matter how delicious the dishes, she says, one must always leave a little food on the plate and in the rice bowl. Then there will be abundance for the next year, she explains.

After the feast, the parents may go to sleep, Wyant relates, but the children must stay up until midnight. That, she says, brings parents a longer life.

The children find it hard to sleep, knowing that the morning will bring gifts of money from their elders. Children daydream about the New Year for months ahead, Tahnk says, anticipating a long school holiday, new clothes, gifts and freedom from strict Chinese discipline.

"They can always get away without a spanking at the New Year," Tahnk says.

Traditionally, the celebration would last at least two weeks. Although the women must still work hard entertaining friends and relatives, men get time off from work, time to relax, go visiting, play the gambling game called mahjong.

The New Year is also a time to set one's house in order. "Naturally, before the New Year, you try to get the whole house cleaned up," says Tahnk, "and you pay off your debts."

And, consistent with the American New Year, it's a time to reflect on the past year, to review one's foibles and triumphs, and to plan for the year to come.

They Challenged Them All And Emerged Victorious

Sachem Wrestlers Are Winners In The Division I Tournament

By CHARLIE COWEN

Ever since the Winchester High wrestling team rolled out the mats to begin another season they've had their mind set on one thing — winning. And ever since that day in late November the Sachems have done nothing but win and win big.

This past weekend was no exception. Winchester outscored, outpinned and outwrestled all of 15 other teams participating in this weekend's Division I Central Sectional Tournament. Though the news of the wrestling team's success in meets and tournaments has become old hat, this past weekend's victory was anything but ordinary.

The place: Winchester High School Field House; the time: All day Saturday, Feb. 16, and Sunday, Feb. 17; the event: Division I Central Sectionals.

This marked the first time Winchester has ever hosted a wrestling tournament, and it gave Winchester residents and local wrestling fans a chance to view the Sachem team that has been receiving such accolades.

And thanks to the work of John Joyce, tournament director, and the parents of the wrestlers, the tournament went smoothly enough for the Sachems to concentrate on their wrestling.

Winchester had plenty to concentrate about too. For the past two years they have been frustrated in this tournament by taking a close second to sectional rival Waltham.

Winchester has never won a sectional championship and as the home team heavy favorites, the pressure was on. The Sachems' desire to be champions pulled them through again, however, and allowed them to overcome the heavy pressure.

The tournament lasted for all of two days, with the finals occurring Sunday night. By that time, however, there was no doubt about which of the 16 teams attending would capture the sectional championship.

Winchester was already leading in team points by almost 100 points and still had seven wrestlers vying for their own personal championships.

Winchester's 100 pounder, sophomore Gregg Doherty, missed a family trip to Lake Tahoe and settled for first place instead.

Another champion for Winchester was Andy Lowenstein who at 107 pinned his way through the tournament.

Rob Anderson, a senior at 140, also pinned all his opponents to capture his second straight sectional title. For his outstanding pinning record Rob received the "outstanding falls" trophy.

Winchester had wrestlers in the next two weight classes whose endeavors brought them to the finals but found them shy of the title. Joe Lawrence (147) and Tony Fortunati (157) both lost in the finals to two of the best wrestlers in the state.

Dom Divencenzo (169) proved he was worth his salt by pinning his opponents to get to the finals, then by beating up the other finalist to take home another first-place medal.

The Sachems had another finalist in 187 pounder Bruce Schwartzman. Bruce wrestled with impressive aggressiveness but took second.

Winchester had two other place winners in seniors Jay Rice (128) and Charlie Cowen (134).

Jay Rice rebounded from a close semi-final loss to the eventual winner, and picked up a third-place medal.

Charlie Cowen lost in a disappointing overtime match in the quarter-finals but wrestled four more times and took a fourth place.

In the week prior to the tournament Charlie and other senior 134 pounder Stephen "Buckles" McCarthy had to wrestle off in what had to be, as Coach Larry Tremblay put it, the toughest wrestle in the state.

Other wrestlers who didn't reach the top four were Glen Richmond, a senior at 114, whose career finale was hampered by torn ligaments in the thumb. Glenn took a fifth. Dave Carter, the heavyweight, took a sixth and Alex Puchulu took fifth.

By the time the tournament was over Winchester had captured its first Sectional Championship ever with a score of 243 to second place Woburn's 149. And for the second straight year Coach Larry Tremblay was voted by the other coaches as Coach of the Year.

Now, you may say "What's left for the Sachems, is there anything they can't do?"

Well, this Friday and Saturday the top four wrestlers in each weight class from the four Division I Sectionals will assemble in Chelmsford for the State Tourney.

Winchester is expected to vie for the team championship with host Chelmsford. This would be quite an accomplishment for the team, and a fitting end to an unbelievable season, but the Sachems have their work cut out for them.

Chelmsford has 10 wrestlers entered in the tournament, six of whom are number one seeds. Winchester is bringing nine Sachems, one of whom is a number one seed.

For those wishing to come cheer on Winchester this Friday and Saturday, wrestling starts at 1:30 at the Chelmsford Field House.

They Never Say Never In Track World

By STEVE NORTON

He is the Larry Bird of the Track Team. All performance. He's the first on the oval before practice and the last to leave it. He does nothing showy. He exhibits some emotion, but certainly not a lot.

He's not a super star, but a hard worker who gets the job done. He's a leader in the classroom as well as on the track and among peers.

As with the tradition of a true Sachem, Winchester's durable tri-captain, Brian Pothier (2-miler, miler and 4X440 relay runner) is the epitome of endurance, mental and physical toughness and the tenacity for winning.

For 1984-1985, this young man has had to run two simultaneous track meets. It isn't enough that Pothier has to concern himself with the opposition. He is living and racing in the shadows of two of last year's outstanding distance runners not only at Winchester High School but recognized throughout the state: Barry Sirchis and Bill Derry.

Whatever Pothier did on the track this year was constantly held up for scrutiny - compared against Sirchis and Derry whereas most people would succumb to this unfair pressure and throw up their hands in frustration, Brian Pothier uses it to push himself for improvement.

Most of the practice time, because of the events he participates in, he runs alone. But by looking at the intensity of his concentration it is not difficult to see the images of Sirchis and Derry a stride length ahead of him.

Pothier entered the closing laps of this two-mile race as he usually does in every track meet - in the grasps of inexpressible fatigue that comes at this stage.

He was once again engaged in the struggle between a completely exhausted body and a yet undefeated will. As he circles the track and approaches the finish line there is a realization that he has pushed himself to the outer limits of what he is physically capable of, and finishing could be problematic.

The next half-dozen minutes will be the most painful experience this side of minor surgery. Why then does Brian Pothier drive himself this intensely as do the other track athletes at Winchester High School?

The answer is not simple. The answer is as complex and diverse as the other 50 or so members of the track team. But there is a core of similarity. The athletes-students know that what happens to their bodies has an enormous effect on their hearts and minds. When Pothier runs and practices, for instance, he becomes a better runner, but for less obvious and mysterious reasons a good person. He becomes...complete. Perhaps it has something to do with a sense of success and mastery over this act of running.

I recently distributed a questionnaire to the track team, that the High School requires to be completed as part of its sports evaluation process (SEP).

The essence of the questions dealt with the "why" of track running. Does it relieve boredom, help with grades, does it relax? Is it done for recognition, friendship or association? What is being asked is the familiar "either/or." Is it a process or product that pushes the track athletes? Is it the recognition or achievements that motivates these young people? Is the training and competition for the body or the spirit?

My answers to these questions is track is not either/or. It is all these reasons and more. Running is, indeed, a product. It is done for the goal - the ability to achieve a personal best. But it is the process as well. Training is not only a means; it is an end in itself.

The achievement is not the whole reason. There is also what goes on before the attainment of that achievement, what goes on before the mastering of the challenge. What is experienced is finding an additional purpose in life. Track running is both process and product. Sometimes, it is work, other times play and there are even times when it is an act of love.

The people who read and evaluate these questionnaires will never know what Brian Pothier, David Manganaro or Janet Weylman knows. They will never know the joy associated with pain, they will never understand the excitement and the delight of that inner fire and never ending search for the self.

And it is on the track where self-discovery leads to the person these athletes will be. Here is their theater where each can write and act out their own unique dreams.

Having gotten down to the bone and muscle, comes the understanding

The Runner's Eye

By Steve Norton

By STEVE NORTON

This week's mail included two items of interest and unique style.

Dear Mr. Norton:

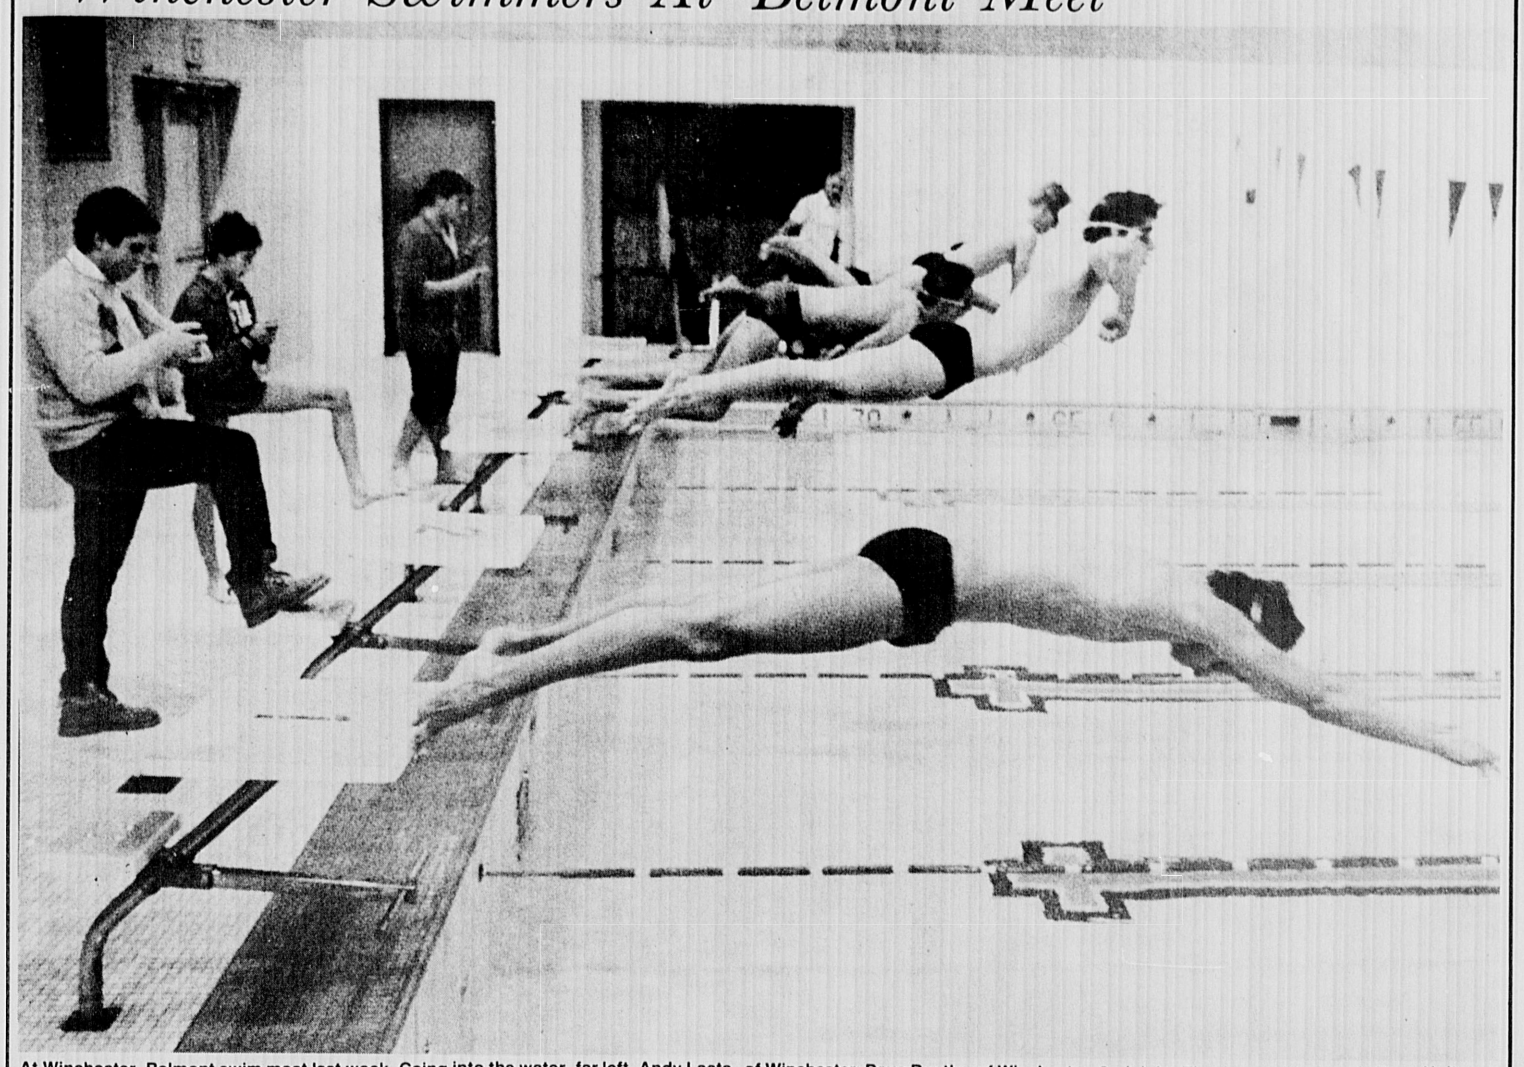

I'd like to share the following thoughts on running with you and the readers of Runner's Eye.

K. Gordon Lasky, Woburn and the Irish American Track Club

Running all alone
Keeping that idle flame burning
Feeling light and free
This is the way running should be
Then suddenly a hill comes along
And you switch gears looking for
A comfortable pace
Nice and slow
Not as in a race.
The end is nowhere in sight
Lactic acid is building up
And you are losing the fight
Then you are at the top
Wondering if you should stop, walk or rest
But Alas you want to be the best
So you push even harder and faster
Becoming your body's master
Your legs are beginning to flow
And, you're feeling such a glow
Thinking you would go on and on Running into the unknown

The Title Of 'Hero'

By STEVE NORTON

The Title of "Hero" is sometimes only bestowed on those acts of courage of the more sensational in nature. But what about personal courage? The type of valor found, for example, in Rocky Balboa in the movie "Rocky" or the intrepid Eric in "Chariots of Fire?"

The time is 7 a.m. on a Sunday morning, Oct. 21, 1984. At this hour there is no traffic at the intersection of 12th and Cary sts. in downtown Richmond, Va.

A long white line marks the point where, five hours later, some 3,000 runners will line up for the seventh Annual Richmond Newspaper Marathon. At 7 a.m., however, only eight people are at the start/finish line and only one is a runner. He is 11-years old and somewhat of a legend in his hometown.

Dack Axselle has Spina Bifida and runs on crutches. To understand Spina Bifida is to know pain with every breath and every movement.

In 1982 he completed the 5-mile race held on the same route. In 1983, he finished the half-marathon. Both are run on the same day as the marathon.

This time Axselle wants to "Go as far as I can before the course closes at 5 p.m. His mother and father will walk along side him, a medical vehicle will follow. With the conclusion of the "Rocky" theme song the starter's gun sends the tiny runner onto the deserted course.

At 1:30 p.m. Sean O'Flynn, an Irish runner who eventually won the marathon glides past young Axselle at the 15-mile point. "I was beginning to tire," O'Flynn said, "That 84-degree heat was getting to me. But when I saw that little boy on crutches still going strong..."

It's 6:25 p.m. The finish line and the course have been closed for almost an hour and a half. Axselle and his support team in a convoy of medical, rescue and police vehicles complete with sirens and flashing lights, make the final turn. As he approaches the finish line, the cheering rises to a crescendo and keeps up. Nearby bars and restaurants empty, and by the time the boy reaches the finish line at 11:10 p.m. there are more than 1,000 people waiting to greet him.

Tears are flowing unashamedly, as they should, down everyone's faces. Dack Axselle, the boy who was never even supposed to walk, had just run the race of his life and everyone who saw him, anywhere on the course, felt like a winner.

Who says there are no more heroes.

Members Take Part In Polar Bear Meet

Several members of the Belmont Swim Team participated in the Polar Bear Invitational A meet in Portsmouth, NH, during the past weekend. It was an extremely successful meet for the club with two of the younger swimmers, Marineke Vandervort of Winchester, 8, and Rachel DeVito of Medford, 10, winning the High Point Trophy for their respective age groups.

Vandervort finished first in the 100 individual medley, 50 and 100 freestyle, 50 butterfly and 50 backstroke. She placed sixth in the 50 breast stroke, for a total of 36 points. Marineke's next competition will be the 8 and Under Championships at Cape Elizabeth, Maine, where she is expected to once again be a strong contender for high point winner.

Lucy Floor and Donna Sullivan each swam well for their 13 and 14 year age group. Lucy swam the 100 freestyle and 200 I.M. Sullivan swam the 100 meter freestyle. The girls had a strong meet in preparation for the Junior Olympics in March.

Senior Belmont swimmers Marianne and Maureen Monahan, Sarah McCann, Jill Condelli and Deanna Colacito improved their seed times in preparation for the Senior Championship in March.

To Gloria Cantwell of North Reading:

Thank you for sharing with the readers of The Runner's Eye the comic strips called Crock, by Bill Rochin and Don Wilder.

Since we can't just reprint the columns without special permission, which can be quite time consuming since it's a syndicated item, The Runner's Eye will try to recreate the scene, so-to-speak.

The first clip shows a pair of military officers overlooking a calvary preparing for battle. One man asks the other who is to lead the calvary that day. The other scans the field and promptly responds that it is "Captain Preppie." The other, obviously curious, asks his compatriot how he knows that with just a glance. The response: "Not too many horses wear 'Nike' horseshoes..."

The second strip is just as amusing. In the first frame, a commander is shown saying "It's hard to believe, Captain Preppie, that you put "Nike" horseshoes on your mount."

The second frame shows the dashing captain petting his horse and responding: "It is difficult to get used to...I've always used 'Adidas.'

As a runner, it's always nice to have someone share a little element of humor once in a while. Thanks, again.

Youngsters Get Ready For Annual Colonial Day

By ERIC W. BLOM

Next week, dozens of youngsters will tromp to Town Hall adorned in woolen socks pulled high up over their pant legs.

The look will include suspenders and baggy pants for the boys; ankle-length dresses for the girls.

But they aren't looking to start a new fashion trend. Rather, they'll be role-playing — taking on the parts of their colonial ancestors.

They will be returning for a day to the style of dress popular during the colonial period of 200 years ago.

During that Feb. 28 afternoon each second-grade youngster in town will participate in the second annual Colonial School Day. They'll be dressing and hopefully acting as authentically as the schoolchildren of yesteryear — pretending for just a while that they are back in the one-room schoolhouses of that era.

"The only thing we're giving in to is cars and buses" to get from the schools to the Town Hall, explains Susanne Mahoney, a classroom aide at the Ambrose School.

"We do not bring Twinkies or metal lunch boxes," says Edna Accardo, a second-grade teacher at Ambrose. Jelly sandwiches, some on home-baked bread, and logs to warm the room will be the order of the day, she says.

The program, part of the students' lessons on colonial history, will include numerous activities, such as candle dipping and singing and dancing in pre-Revolutionary style.

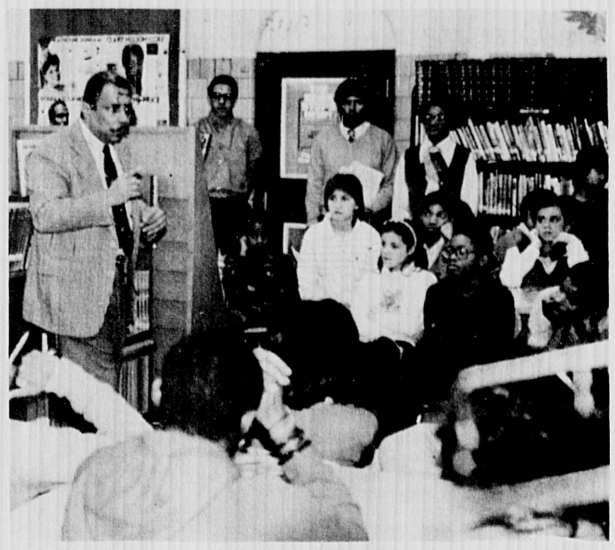

Most of the day, however, will center around the schoolroom. There, "old school discipline" will reign and students will blab — repeat after the teacher — their lessons.

Unruly children will do well to beware — as they can be forced to wear a "dunce" cap or, in extreme circumstances, be pinned to the teacher's apron.

In the colonial days, "teachers got obedience by embarrasing their students," explains Accardo.

Just for good measure, she adds, parents should be thankful that the colonial days' discipline doesn't extend to them.

For in those, days, she adds, the parents of naughty children could be placed in wooden stocks for failing to teach their child to respect the teacher.

Dr. T. J. Anderson of Winchester visits students at Edwards Middle School in Charlestown during his recent Black History Month presentation. Anderson, a music professor at Tufts University, spoke on "Black History As Seen Through The Arts." His talk was arranged by School Volunteers for Boston Inc.

years on the job and are looking to go to school," said McHugh. "I always thought it was the policy of this town to encourage that type of enterprise,".

Selectman Michael Saraco questioned the chief on contract restrictions and asked why the town couldn't send officers to school on a periodic basis.

"No, it's not mandatory that we allow everyone to go on," said McHugh, "but again, I thought we encouraged our town employees to better themselves. . . ."

The police budget request also seeks $10,000 for five new handguns, each costing $2,000 apiece and new remote radios, at a cost of $1,850.

Energy costs for the new station were suggested at $34,000 by McHugh. The board agreed that such costs will have to be studied more closely, in order to coordinate Police and Fire Dept. needs. Neither chief had contacted the other on their requests for the station.

At Wednesday's meeting, there was obvious friction between McHugh and Selectmen Chairman Mark A. Lombardi, which appeared to stem from more than just money matters.

At one point, Lombardi accused the chief of knowing that on-duty police workers were "sleeping in the trailer" at the site of the new police/fire building — a charge he has lodged before.

"You can say that it's not true, but I know it's true," shouted Lombardi. "We went down there once and we had to bang on the door to wake them up,"

"I know I'll get criticized for bringing it up again — my name was dragged all through the papers last year about it. But nobody's going to shut me I up when I know I'm right," he added angrily.

As the debate grew into a shouting match, McHugh clung to his statements made last summer when Lombardi first made the allegation.

"Nobody's been sleeping on duty," said McHugh. "I've been sitting here for some time and taking a lot of bad raps," he added angrily. "You know, that's baloney about them sleeping," he retorted.

Lombardi responded, "It's not baloney; it's a fact!"

The barbed comments flew again when the board discussed the pros and cons of civilian dispatchers versus police or fire officers on the job.

"I'll tell you right now," said an angry Lombardi, "I'd rather have a policeman or fireman answering the phone if I called to say my house was burning."

McHugh said the police force now has three temporary civilian dispatchers, a practice that has been upheld since the civilian dispatcher system began in November 1979.

According to officials, the civilian system was meant to allow uniformed police more time to patrol or investigate crimes, besides saving money with union wages.

Selectman Alan Macdonald suggested a study might help town officials to measure the success of the present system.

If it really isn't as effective as it should be, he said, a study could show that a new system probably should be implemented.

McHugh, however, defended the system, saying "I'm convinced that the system works."

He said that civilian dispatchers have allowed the officers "to perform more appropriately."

After nearly two hours of grilling, Chief McHugh gave up the hot seat to Fire Chief Robert McElhinney, who met with the board for about 45 minutes.

McElhinney's $1,527,892 fiscal 1986 budget request, up from the $1,511,125 allocation for the current fiscal year, was also scrutinized.

Asked for cuts, the chief said his budget also was as tight as he thought he could make it.

McElhinney said one way he might trim his budget would be to require less costly physical exams of all employees, a program begun several years as a purported cost-saving measure.

He said the town ordered extensive physical exams for all firefighters on a periodic basis, but that the idea doesn't seem to be as cost-effective as originally intended.

"We might be able to save some there," said McElhinney. The added test include electrocardiograms and full blood tests, among others, he said.

Asked about the dispatcher system, the chief replied that it appears to be working out "as well as can be expected." However, he admitted that the turnover rate is quite high.

At that pay scale, the department had trouble hiring and retaining the students, who often left for higher-paying jobs.

This year, the DPW would like to pay $4 per hour, the director said.

Playing Fields Debated

Another high-cost item is playing fields maintenance. The DPW asked for $33,000 to fertilize, seed and otherwise maintain the fields, which get heavy use, Serratore said.

In the past, Town Meeting has allocated much less than DPW requests for the playing fields, about $6,000 to $8,000, he said.

Selectman Mark Lombardi spoke out angrily against the latest request. He argued that no money should be spent on the playing fields until the completion of a $25,000 design study approved at fall Town Meeting.

"I think it's premature to spend all this money this year when we have this $25,000 study coming in," he shouted.

"Our fields haven't been that bad," he continued. "They'll go another year while the expert comes in."

Acting Town Manager John H. Ciarcia disagreed. He said the study is geared toward redesigning the fields, and has "nothing to do with turf maintenance."

Serratore also defended the DPW request for more maintenance funds.

"We're just trying to get the fields in the best shape we can so there are no injuries," he told Selectmen.

"We're only responding to the number of complaints we get in the year," Serratore added.

He said the playing field study would not be completed until this fall.

A little later, Lombardi suggested that the DPW had padded its budget — a suggestion that clearly vexed Selectman Alan Macdonald.

"Why do you have to browbeat our own people?" he shouted at the chairman. "Why do you question their integrity and their motives?

"I want you to know I take offense to the last half hour of comments you've made," Macdonald fumed.

Lombardi responded, "If you don't like it, that just too bad."

New Street Lamps?

The DPW has also requested an additional $24,000 for street lighting costs. The state's Dept. of Public Utilities sets rates for street light rentals and other charges, Serratore said, and those will increase next year.

Apparently, the town has no choice except to pay them, he said.

Still, Winchester could cut about $20,000 a year in electricity fees if it replaces the town's low-light incandescent lamps with high-pressure sodium lamps, Serratore said.

And the sodium lamps, which have a yellow cast, would also provide twice the illumination of the old lamps, the director said.

The lamp decision, said Serratore, must be made by Selectmen.

In the DPW's snow and ice budget, the request for salt funding jumped $20,000. Serratore blamed the increase on the cost of salt, which has gone up $3 per ton since last year.

"Since the cost of salt is increasing, we'd like to stock up," he said. "We'd like to carry an inventory of 500 tons."

Also, the DPW is seeking $12,000 in additional funds for town auto supplies, Serratore said, because "the cost of parts is going out of sight."

Recreation Dept. Budget

Meanwhile, Recreation Dept. Director Ken Cereghino asked for $210,000 — $13,000 more than last year.

Specifically, the department would like to hire a full-time secretary, rather than the part-time help they have now, at an added cost of $4,000.

Also, Cereghino said the department hopes to expand the Sunshine-Superfriend summer camp program. Youth Coordinator Steve J. D'Onofrio said demand for the camp has been so high that they hope to add new sessions.

That expansion, Cereghino said, would require an extra $9,000.

Meanwhile the department expects to generate more than $41,000 in user fees in fiscal 1985, which will then be returned to the town.

Town Manager Ciarcia is expected to have his budget recommendations ready within the week, which he will submit to the Finance Committee.

That committee will review both department requests and the town manager's recommendations before submitting a budget for Town Meeting debate.

MDC Awards Parkway Construction Contract

According to Rep. Whip Saltmarsh, the Metropolitan District Commission recently awarded a $1,060,007 contract to the Hanover Contracting Company for reconstruction of Hillcrest pkwy. and Reservoir st. in Winchester. "Having worked with the M.D.C. during the design phase since funding this project in the 1981 Transportation Bond Issue, I'm pleased that it will be getting off the ground this spring," said Saltmarsh.

The scope of the project will include roadway reconstruction, curbing, lighting, drainage system improvements and landscaping. In addition, the M.D.C. has agreed to install, at their own cost, a new feeder pipe from the water storage tank on Hillcrest pkwy. to the North Reservoir.

At a meeting last spring, residents expressed their concern about insufficient lighting, which they felt increased undesirable activity in the nearby Fells, especially in the summer months. "As a direct result of their input, lighting specifications were changed to reflect the needs of the area," added Whip.

"It's a naturally beautiful area abutting the Fells, and should be kept that way. I'm just glad to have been in the position to bring this project to fruition by securing the necessary funding, at no cost to the town," concluded Whip.

Foster Parents Sought

Tom is an attractive, likeable 16-year old boy, who is the oldest in a large family. His parents are separated; neither of them is able to meet his needs. Tom has gone back and forth between his mother and father's home, but neither arrangement works out in the long run.

He is representative of so many adolescents in the foster care system today; he is a child in limbo, a young man who can't live at home, through no fault of his own, and yet isn't quite old enough to be on his own. As a result, he is confused and frustrated.

Tom is a "follower" whose friends are older adolescents. He realizes at this point that his peer group is not a very good influence in his life and is willing to move to a foster home in another town.

He wants a fresh start with a family who can help him to make better choices. Tom needs to be with adults who will take an active interest in him and make him feel valued.

Tom needs a stable foster home where he can finish high school and learn the necessary skills to be out on his own. His social worker is looking for a married couple or a single adult, who can provide clear limits and structure.

Tom is a composite description of four boys DARE Family Services is currently attempting to place in foster homes. You can make a difference in their lives, by getting involved as a DARE foster parent!

Interested families and individuals are urged to call DARE Family Services at 628-3696.

Assoc. Will Regroup Soon

The February meeting of the Winchester Art Assn. will be held Tuesday evening Feb. 26, at 7:30 in the meeting room of the Wincheser Public Library.

All members are encouraged to attend to vote on revised bylaws and to hear some exciting plans for the association. The present gallery will close its doors on Feb. 21 as the building is slated for demolition.

The past year has been exciting and rewarding. The future holds promise for the Winchester Art Assn. and all members are invited to share in the planning process.

Guest speaker for the meeting will be Heddi Vaughn Siebel of Cambridge. Siebel is primarily a painter, now teaching in the Boston area. She has taught at Yale and at Wellesley College.

She is now involved in developing plans for outdoor environments. This endeavor incorporates outdoor murals as part of architecture. Slides of outdoor murals will be shown as Siebel lectures on her forte. There will be a question and answer period following the lecture. The public is invited to attend.

Cardiac Class Will Begin Friday

Winchester Hospital will offer a five-week Cardiac Education Program beginning Friday Feb. 22. Registered nurses from the hospital's education department will discuss coronary artery disease, coronary risk factors, nutrition, exercise and stress management.

Classes will be held from 10 to 11:30 a.m. in the Kingsbury Seminar Room located in the hospital's new Hood Wing.

Those who wish to attend are asked to call the education department of Winchester Hospital. There is a small fee for the course.

New Jewish Congregation To Hold Sabbath Service

The newly formed Jewish Congregation of Winchester has announced its first Friday evening Shabbat Service will be held on Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. at the First Congregational Church of Winchester located on Church st.

The new reform synagogue was formed on Dec. 4 when, after a series of meetings, the Jewish community of Winchester met and responded with overwhelming support for the idea.

Although the young synagogue faces many challenges such as selecting a rabbi, finding a permanent location to meet, and selecting a permanent name, the strong commitment from the membership is making it possible to meet these challenges.

As well as providing spiritual leadership to its members, the synagogue also plans to offer children's religious school classes, adult education classes, and help to foster a social community for adults and young people.

Anyone interested in learning more about the new synagogue should contact Marc Zauderer, membership chairman, 729-6308, or Dick Pallan, president, 729-2988.

All those interested are invited to attend the first Shabbat Service.

Winchester Trails Plans Spring Training Sessions

Frost may still be in the ground, but the pussywillows are blooming and Winchester Trails guides and friends are training for the spring nature walks with school children.

Betty Vanderbilt is organizing three workshops at her house, 332 Highland ave., for Fridays, March 1, 8 and 15, from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

All sessions will feature plants and other samples from the natural world, so that participants will be able to look and touch the plants as the children do on the walks. Anyone who is curious about life in the woods, ponds and fields is invited.

On March 1, Fran VerPlanck and the group will examine fungus, algae and lichen. Johanna Hill will lead a workship on flowers of the fields and woods.

In the second session on March 8, the group will move from the fields to the forest. Harriet Kenney and Betty Vanderbilt will focus on trees and their inhabitants, while Louise Ahearn will look at the micro-world of the fallen log.

The topics for March 15 are the pond and marsh, with Maggie Howard as leader, and books on natural history, with Marjorie Moore.

Teenage Ski Trips Will Conquer Slopes At Night

Winchester students in the 7th through 12 grades can start the spring season on the slopes with the Winchester Recreation Dept. Between the warmer temperatures, longer days and two great trips planned, March will be the best time to go on a ski trip.

Starting Friday, March 1, teens can enjoy "Friday night at the mountain" with a trip to Wachusett Mountain, challenge the 10 mountain trail. Transportation and lift ticket are $20 (the price of a lift ticket at most mountains.) Or pay $26 for equipment rental, lift ticket and transportation. The last day to register is Friday, Feb. 22.

The "last chance ski trip" will take place on Saturday, March 16, to Crotched Mountain. It's the final trip and the cost is $22 for lift ticket and transportation, or $28 for equipment rental, lift ticket and transportation. There will be a free lesson for anyone who would like a few final tips for the season.

The last day to register will be Thursday, March 7. For more information contact the Recreation Dept.

Fortnightly To Hold China Talk

The Fortnightly-Winchester will hold its spring meeting Monday, March 11 at 1 p.m. in Gifford Hall, Crawford Memorial Methodist Church.

Mrs. Richard Sheppard as chairman and assisted by her committee will serve refreshments.

Mrs. Robert Watson, president, will conduct the business meeting. Mrs. Raymond Osborne as honor guest will address the club members as director of the 8th district.

Mrs. Leon Boodakian, first vice president will present the program: "China - The Country" by Mrs. Margie Lamar and "The People" by Mrs. Rita Harms.

Publicity Guide

A free guide on how to submit publicity material on club events is available to organizations in Winchester at The Star office on Church st., between 9 and 4 on weekdays.

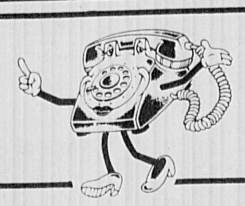

Water Conservation

OBITUARIES

Helen E. Walters

Helen Elliott Walters of Winchester died Feb. 16 at the Sudbury Pines Nursing Home after a long illness. She was 86.

A lifelong resident of Winchester, Mrs. Walters devoted years of service to the town, as did her late brothers Sydney and Alfred D. Elliott.

Mrs. Walters is survived by three children, Barbara Walters of Rockport, Virginia Locke of Sudbury, and Elliott Walters of Winchester; a sister, Dorothy Elliott Warden of Oxford; seven grandchildren and one great-grandson.

Services were private followed by burial in Wildwood Cemetery. Costello Funeral Home handled the arrangements.

Contributions in her memory may be made to the Mary E. Murphy Elderly Housing, Winchester.

Pauline Keehn

Pauline H. Keehn passed away Feb. 13 in Winchester Nursing Home after a short illness. She was 91.

A lifelong resident of Winchester, Miss Keehn attended local schools.

She was a retired operator for American Telephone Co.

Miss Keehn was the past president of the Winchester Garden Club and a former member of the Winchester Red Cross. She also belonged to the Winchester Historical Society and St. Mary's Sodality.

She was the daughter of the late Frank and Alice (Hodge) Keehn and the sister of the late Arthur Keehn.

The funeral was held Saturday, Feb. 16, followed by a funeral mass in St. Mary's Church. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery in Winchester.

Donations in Miss Keehn's name may be made to the Medical Missionaries of Mary, 1 Arlington st., Winchester.

John J. Martin

John J. "Jack" Martin — publisher of The Belmont Herald, Watertown Sun and Newton Villager — died Feb. 15 in Symmes Hospital, Arlington. He was 86.

Born in Lynn, he was a longtime Belmont resident. Mr. Martin was a former member of the Belmont Recreation Commission and the Oakley Country Club.

In 1931, Mr. Martin founded The Belmont Herald — then a free weekly newspaper. He later bought The Watertown Sun and Herald and The Newton Villager — adding to his chain.

He first broke into the newspaper field as an advertising salesman for the old Boston Post and The Boston Herald Traveler. As publisher of his newspapers, he saw his field of expertise in advertising and left writing to his editors.

He leaves his wife, Gertrude M. (Looney) Martin; two sons, John J. Martin Jr. and David C. Martin, both of Belmont; a daughter, Marian M. Currier of Winchester; two brothers, Peter J. Martin of Watertown and Frank Martin of Belmont; a sister, Josephine Cressey of Indiana; 10 grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

A funeral mass was said Monday at St. Joseph's Church for Mr. Martin. Father Rodney Copp officiated at the service.

Burial was in Belmont Cemetery.

Hospital Stress Program Offered

Winchester Hospital will present a three-part program "Promoting Stress Management for a Positive Lifestyle" in the hospital's seminar room on Thursdays, March 7, 14 and April 11 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Randy E. Kamen, a consulting psychologist, will conduct the program. Kamen has lectured and consulted extensively in stress management, pain control, psychosomatic disorders and related areas in medical institutions and universities. She is a member of the faculties of Boston University's Graduate School of Dentistry and Lesley College's Department of Counseling Psychology.

The series will allow participants to conduct personal assessments, and will teach them how to identify the source of their stress. Participants will also learn how to integrate stress management strategies in daily living.

There is a fee for the course, and all interested should register before Feb. 25 with the education department of Winchester Hospital.

DiSorbo Addresses Joint Hospice Directors Meeting

Providing comprehensive hospice services to terminally ill patients and their families works, according to Phil DiSorbo, executive director of Hospice of Schenectady.

DiSorobo recently addressed a joint meeting of the board of directors of Hospice Care and Hospice of Middlesex East at the request of Hospice Care's Administrative Director Edward Dolan.

As the director of the first Medicare certified hospice in the country, DiSorbo brought a wealth of experience to his presentation to representatives of these two local hospices. Hospice Care plans to enter the Medicare hospice program this year.

Currently, Hospice Care and Hospice of Middlesex East are seeking ways to cooperatively expand service to their communities. An initial six-month contract between these independent, community based hospices is expected to lead to new structures of joint service.

According to DiSorbo, in Schenectady, initial hesitation about the cost and fears about the public acceptance of a professinal and comprehensive hospice program has given way to strong optimism.

As his hospice increased services, local fundraising and medicare support increased, enhancing the financial strength of the program and more than doubling reserves in a year.

As they worked more closely with patients, families and doctors, explaining what hospice can offer each of them, resistance has changed to seeing hospice as "a place of refuge for the very ill," he said.

Hospice Care provides a full range of medical, nursing, social, emotional, and bereavement support to patients and families. Working with the patient's physician and in collaboration with visiting Nurse and Community Health Inc. and Choate-Symmes Health Services Inc., Hospice Care guarantees each patient home nursing by a hospice team, hospice inpatient care, case management by the Hospice Care core team and an extensive bereavement program.

"Those who say it can't work have been proved wrong," said DiSorbo. "Comprehensive, Medicare-certified hospice services almost invariably add to the quality of life for all involved. Hospice never takes away. It supports.

"What it takes is a commitment to make it work and a belief in what hospice can mean to people."

According to Ed Dolan, this is a commitment that both hospices share.

Hospice Care serves the communities of Arlington, Burlington, Lexington, Winchester and Woburn.

Computer Bought To Lower Costs, Improve Care

In 1985, many heart patients at New England Memorial Hospital will receive better, less costly care, thanks to a new cardiac imaging computer recently purchased with donations. This state-of-the-art device provides early detection and treatment of heart disease, reduces patient waiting time, and eliminates many expensive heart catheterizations.

The computer is expected to reduce the bills of some patients by about $1200 because it will perform heart studies that previously required heart cathetierization. Heart catheterization is the insertion of a fiberoptic tube through a blood vessel and into the patient's heart.

"I am very pleased that the hospital has purchased this computer, and I thank each of the 1,500 contributors whose generosity made this possible," Wolfgang von Maack, president of New England Memorial Hospital , announced recently.

"These contributions are a tremendous benefit to the hospital, but more than that, they are an investment in the good health of everyone we serve."

According to Mary Borg of Lynnfield, Chairman of the Development Committee, $133,000 in annual gifts was contributed. This was enough to qualify for a challenge grant of an additional $10,000 from the General Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists. Bequests contributed an additional $129,000.

Post Office Asks Snow, Ice Removal

Local autnorities and the general public can help the U. S. Postal Servie deliver the mail as timely and safely as possible this winter.

The Postal Service emphasized the need for ice and snow removal from walkways as a major aid in preventing slips and falls that result in fractured or broken bones or sprains to letter carriers and messengers.

The other main winter hazards that impede mail delivery, according to the Postal Servie, are ice and snow on streets, roads, driveways and stairways and porches.

Local road authorities and postal customers are requested by the Postal Service to keep public and private approaches to residences and mailboxes clean during winter months.

Last year, thousands of letter carriers across the nation were injured because of hazardous conditions, the Postal Service said.

The Arlington Advocate, The Winchester Star, and The Belmont Citizen — February 21, 1985

Under the Winter Moon

Crisp and Bright, Unending White

Beating The Winter Blahs

By Anne Marie Reidy

Midwinter madness. Cabin fever. The February blahs.

Call it what you will, everyone knows that lackluster feeling that winter has lasted too long, and spring is never going to arrive.

The remedy? There are several, nearly all of them variations on the "Take me away!" theme.

For some, the answer is an escape to warmer climes.

But, as it's been warmer in Boston than in Florida more than once this year (and in all honesty a vacation requires both substantial time and money), that's not the answer for everyone.

Others escape through a long-put-aside novel, or a stroll through a museum. Some head outdoors for fresh air and a fresh perspective.

There's lots to lift your spirits, much closer to home than the Caribbean. And you don't have to spend a fortune, either.

OUTDOORS

Instead of escaping winter, why not celebrate it? Thousands of people come up here every year just for our winter weather.

Try skating: New England notables like Henry David Thoreau and Louisa May Alcott regularly put aside their books and enjoyed a turn on local ponds.

Like bicycling, once you've learned, you never forget how to skate. And experts say you're never too old to take it up, if you take it gently.

For outdoor skating, try Winter Pond, on Woodside rd. in Winchester, or the flooded rink next to the town library on Concord st. in Belmont.

There's also Hill's Pond, in Menotomy Rocks Park off Jason st. in Arlington. When skating is good, it is lit until 9 p.m. every night. (Skaters can tell when the ice is unsafe: the "No Skating" sign is posted.)

But when ice freezes, thaws and refreezes — as it has all this winter — it can get awfully bumpy. If you'd rather skate on a smooth-surfaced rink, there are many options.

Arlington's rink, on Summer st., offers a skating sessions open to the public, on weekday mornings and afternoons, and on Saturday afternoons from 1:30-3:30 and Sunday mornings from 10 to noon. Bring your own skates. ($1.50 adults, $1 for kids.)

For Belmont residents only, that town's indoor rink on Concord ave. is open evenings and weekends through March 10. A family season pass is $35; individual is $25 for adults, $10 for children. (The pass also admits residents to the high school pool, open the same hours.) One-day admissions for both facilities are $2 for adults, $1 for children.

The Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) operates several rinks in nearby towns, including the Flynn Rink, on Woodman rd. in Medford, near the Stoneham Zoo.

It's open every morning (except Sundays) from 9 to 11:50, and every afternoon (except Wednesdays) from 2 to 4:40. On Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, it's open from 7 to 8:40.

Admission is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children for any single session. Skates are available for rental (at afternoon and evening sessions only), $1 a pair.

Cross-country skiers have a number of options, whether they own their equipment or rent it.

The Great Meadow, off Fottler ave., is in Lexington but belongs to the town of Arlington.

Left undeveloped to protect Arlington's original water supply (the town now belongs to the MDC water system now) it has become a small nature preserve.

"I've seen racoons and pheasants — all kinds of birds — and where there are birds, there are foxes," observes Mike Wright, Arlington's Director of Properties and Natural Resources. "It's good for cross-country skiing — not too challenging, just a few hills — and it's also a great place for a walk when there is no snow."

The Great Meadow is open to the public in daylight hours; but Wright asks that visitors respect its sanctuary status, and take their trash out with them. Snowmobiles and trail bikes are prohibited.

Winchester has two sources for cross-country trails: the Town Forest (access off West Chardon rd. or North Gateway), and the MDC Middlesex Fells reservation, which runs along South Border rd.

There are marked trails through the Fells, although some of them may have become overgrown. The best access is from the parking lot of the old Girl Scout cabin on South Border rd.

One word of warning about skiing — or walking — in the Fells.

One section of the Fells shelters Winchester's current drinking-water reservoir, and is off-limits to the public. The area, which is clearly posted, is actively patrolled. Police officers hand out tickets to trespassers, starting at $50.

There are no public areas for cross-country skiing within Belmont's borders, although residents may often see members skiing at The Habitat, which is privately owned.

(Habitat membership costs $12 for individuals and $18 for families — and along with other benefits, permits cross-country skiing and walks through the grounds.)

Non-members skiing at The Habitat or local golf courses are trespassing. But there is at least one golf course where cross-country skiing is encouraged. The MDC runs a cross-country ski area at their Leo J. Martins golf course in Weston.

It's open seven days a week, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day but Sunday, when it closes at 6 p.m.

The facility will stay open until March 10, and features a one-kilometer trail loop with man-made snow and lighting — so skiing is available nearly all winter, according to staffer Andy Lynch.

The trail fee is $5 on weekends and $3.50 for weekdays and evenings, Lynch said. Group ($7) and private ($20) lessons are available every day.

Ski rentals are available — 300 sets of equipment in sizes to fit an average 3-year-old to a 200-pound adult. "It's $5 for about three hours," Lynch said.

(Note: at the end of the season all the rental equipment is sold off at reduced prices. It's cheaper to replace it than store it, Lynch said.)

To reach the Weston ski track, take Route 128 south to exit 51 — Route 30.

Take Route 30 towards Wayland, go about half a mile to the first traf-

WHO MUST FILE A MASSACHUSETTS RETURN?

You must file either a Form 1 or a Form ABC if you lived in Massachusetts for any part of 1984 and had gross income in excess of $2,000. You must file regardless of whether you qualify for No Tax Status.

If you did not live in Mass. and you received income from sources within Mass. in excess of the smaller of your personal exemptions or $2,000, you must file a Massachusetts Non-resident Income Tax Return, Mass. Form 1-NR.

If your total income is $3,600 or less if single, or $6,100 or less if married filing jointly, you may qualify for No Tax Status.

WHICH FORM SHOULD I USE?

Before you begin to complete Mass. Form 1, check to see if you qualify to file the shorter, simpler Mass. Form ABC.

You may file Form ABC if you can answer "Yes" to all of the following:

Yes ___ No ___ You were a Mass. resident for all of 1984;

Yes ___ No ___ You are single or married filing a joint return;

Yes ___ No ___ Your income after deductions and exemptions was $60,000 or less;

Yes ___ No ___ Your income only consisted of one or more of the following:

- wages;
- pensions and annuities;
- interest from savings deposits or accounts in banks or similar organizations in Mass.;
- fees, such as jury duty;
- alimony;
- taxable unemployment compensation; or
- winnings, prizes and awards.

You may not file Form ABC, and must file a Form 1, if you answer "Yes" to any of the following:

Yes ___ No ___ You were a resident of Mass. for part of 1984 only;

Yes ___ No ___ You are married filing a separate return;

Yes ___ No ___ Your income after deductions and exemptions was more than $60,000;

Yes ___ No ___ Your income consisted of any of the following:

- income from business or profession;
- rents, royalties, partnerships or trust income;

- dividends; or
- capital gain(s).

If you were a non-resident, you must file a Non-resident Income Tax Return, Mass. Form 1-NR.

NON-ATHLETIC

For those who don't think they want to exert themselves (although both skating and cross-country skiing can range from placid to pell-mell in pace) there are some other options.

The Habitat, in Belmont, is sponsoring bird-watching walks, one on winter coastal birds (a two-parter, Feb. 27 and March 2) and several in search of winter screech owls, including a pre-dawn patrol with a potluck brunch afterwards. Call for details.

They're also offering their once-a-year maple sugaring workshop on Feb. 23 from 10 to noon. The fee is $10 for adults, $7 for children, and $14 for a parent-child combination.

Does art restore your soul? The Museum of Fine Arts in Boston is featuring its permanent collection, and has an exhibit of Rembrandt etchings and drawings on display.

The entire museum is open 10 to 5 every day but Mondays; on Wednesdays, it stays open until 10 p.m. The West Wing is also open Thursday and Friday evenings, 5 to 10 p.m.

Admission to the whole museum is $4; the West Wing alone, $3. Best of all, Saturday mornings from 10 to noon, admission is free. Get up early, tour a few galleries, have a late brunch at the museum cafe and still have the afternoon to check out the other wing!

The Museum of Our National Heritage, on Route 2 A in Lexington, has an ever-changing schedule of exhibits drawn from museums and collections all over the country. The newest exhibit features Benjamin Franklin, his inventions, writings, and his early printing business in Boston.

The museum, owned and operated by the Scottish Rite Masons, is open 10 to 4, Mondays through Saturdays, and 12 to 5 on Sundays. Admission is free, and it is wheelchair-accessible.

The Stone Zoo, off the Fellsway in Stoneham, is open every day, 9 to 4, and offers lions, tigers, zebras, sea lions, and tropical aviary where the warmth and brilliantly-colored birds will make you think you've gone south, at least for a little while. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children and senior citizens.

And, a curiously refreshing way to raise the spirits of both older children and adults is a tour of the Anheuser-Busch brewery in Merrimack, N.H., only about an hour away.

Wednesdays through Sundays, between 9:30 and 3:30, the brewery offers a free tour through the plant. Visitors can also visit the Clydesdale horses in their spotless, fresh-smelling barn, and stroll the landscaped grounds in good weather.

The massive steel tanks for fermenting the grains, the bottling assembly line (which will certainly remind the kids of a certain television show) and the facts and figures of making the firm's nine different beers are interesting even to non-beer drinkers.

Beer drinkers will enjoy the end of the tour — a small free sample of one of the beers produced by the plant that week. There are no freebies for those who don't drink beer, but a soda machine is nearby.

To find the Anheuser-Busch brewery, take Route 3 north, into New Hampshire, to exit 8, off the Everett Turnpike.

There are even more possibilities: federal and state parks in Boston, Lynn, Salem, Lowell, Saugus and elsewhere offer year-round exhibits and special programs.

Local libraries screen free films. Community groups produce classic musicals and dramas at budget prices.

And, if nothing else appeals, you can always snuggle up in an armchair by the fire, read the newspaper, and take yourself around the world.

Critic's Corner

WITNESS

Australian director Peter Weir fashions a remarkable, unique police thriller, a fascinating love story and a thoughtful statement on violence. Harrison Ford shucks his familiar comic book character to play a street-wise Philadelphia detective who hides from his enemies by living among the peaceful, pastoral Amish. And Kelly McGillis fills the screen with her beauty and charm as the young Amish widow who falls in love with him. The gentle Amish life is contrasted with contemporary society. (R)

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with .58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over — from Maine to Rhode Island to New York — but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

OUT-OF-SIGHT LAND

If you are planning to sell your present home and move to a retirement community, thats' fine. However, if you are basing this move on the purchase of a building lot out-of-state and intend to buy the land sight-unseen, that's not so fine. Buying land through the mail can be very risky business. Do your homework first.

It's happened before and will happen again.

A land promoter buys a huge tract of undeveloped, remote, desert land and depicts a beautiful retirement community in a glossy, full-color brochure. Despite continued warnings from the government and Realtors alike, many senior citizens have been bilked by mail-order land schemes.

The best advice is to never buy land which you have not personally inspected. Seek professional advice. Before making such a decision, consult with us. We'll be glad to check out the offer and recommend established real estate firms in the area where you wish to retire. It makes sense to be safe.

Report On Vandalism:
Winchester Incidents Low Since Earlier School Fires

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Last week, a gang of 11 rowdy teens trashed Salem High School to the tune of $1 million.

Days later, vandals smashed 96 windows at West Junior High School in Andover. It was that town's second school window-smashing spree in a week.

This week, local officials are taking a look at their own schools, wondering if the massive destruction could happen in Winchester.

Despite two local school arson incidents within the last eight months, school and police officials say vandalism isn't a problem here.

They say the early July blaze that gutted the Ambrose School library, as well as the Feb. 10 fire that ruined a Bartlett School classroom, are just isolated arson incidents.

Vandalism in Winchester schools mostly involves occasional broken windows and graffiti on bathroom walls, they say.

"Generally, there has been little vandalism of any seriousness," said School Supt. Charles S. Mitsakos. "The schools are reflective of the community. I think, and the kids of Winchester just aren't doing this sort of thing."

He said most occurrences involve graffiti, and that no major damage to school property has occurred.

"That's not to say a kid won't punch a locker some time when his team loses a game or something, but there isn't anything near like what happened at Salem or Andover," said Mitsakos.

In the early 1970s, according to officials, vandalism was at its all-time high here. Vandals were breaking huge windows at a cost of several thousand dollars per month.

Town buildings supervisor Fayette Barrow, who directs the cleanup and repairs, said that at that time the town spent several thousand dollars each month to replace the 15 or 16 major windows that were being smashed weekly.

"I used to keep track of the number of windows smashed and it was quite a lot," said Barrow.

"You're talking about a window that cost $90 or $100 to replace now. Of course, prices were lower then, but it was still big money."

Barrow said that through the years he's noticed a trend: vandalism seems to increase around report cards time.

"Maybe the kids get upset over bad grades or something, but I do notice there is more graffiti and petty vandalism during that time."

Town Makes 'Respect' Its Insurance Policy

By JILL M. HIGGINS

Winchester school official Robert Fitzgerald says the town would "be hurting" if vandals went on a destructive spree similiar to the one that occurred last week in Salem.

However, school and town officials maintain that there are too few incidents of serious vandalism to warrant an increase in the town's school building insurance.

According to Town Comptroller Joseph Bonner, the town's insurance policy calls for a $10,000 deductible, a figure that the town wouldn't likely want to change.

He said the town lost about $17,000, excluding the deductible, in the $53,000 Ambrose School fire. The insurers paid about $16,000 toward the cost, said Bonner.

Fitzgerald said Tuesday that "I don't think we've even thought about increasing insurance coverage. I don't think we need to. There just isn't any vandalism that would warrant that type of action."

Fitzgerald said he thinks the coverage the town has is adequate, but that "If we ever got hit with something like Salem did, we'd be hurting."

Several towns in Massachusetts have increased their coverage, in the wake of the Salem and Andover incidents. Officials in several schools, according to news service reports, have done so in the fear that their own towns may be hit by destruction sprees.

The Andover School Superintendent has decried their recent vandalism, saying the thousands of dollars worth of damage was the result of "copycat" vandals who picked up on the idea from the Salem incident.

The idea of "copycat vandals" is one that concerns several local school officials, including principals and Supt. Charles Mitsakos.

"We don't even like to talk about the Salem problem much," said Mit-

Town Eyes Vacant Water St. House

By NANCY PICK

A proposed article slated for the April Town Meeting warrant aims to convert a long-vacant Water st. house into subsidized housing.

Selectman Wade Welch has proposed that the town of Winchester take the run-down house by eminent domain, government's right to take private property for public use.

Town Counsel Douglas A. Randall said he is preparing to draft the warrant article, pending further information on the property's ownership.

At 41 Water st., the paint is peeling off in fringes and the interior has been gutted. Neighbors claim the owner, the Rev. Robert B. Costello, hasn't worked on the house for months.

Water st. residents say they fear their property values will hit rock bottom because of the dilapidated duplex.

Meanwhile, the property owner, Costello, told town building officials last week he is hiring a new contractor for renovations, according to Building Commissioner Anthony F. Zagzoug.

However, Costello did not reveal the contractor's name, Building Dept. officials said.

Zagzoug said Costello has "all intentions" of finishing work on the house. "It's just a matter of time and, I suppose, money," the commissioner explained.

If the article makes it to Town Meeting, a two-thirds majority vote would be needed to reimburse Costello for his property, based on appraisers' valuations.

In 1983, local Assessors valued the duplex at $24,900 and the land at $32,900, according to records.

Winchester has not exercised its right to eminent domain since the 1970s, said Town Counsel Randall. At the time, he said, the town bought homes to make room for Vinson-Owen Elementary School and for conservation land off High st.

Often, eminent domain decisions involve people who still live on the property, Randall said. In such cases the town normally allows them time to move out.

Financing College — A Lifetime Investment

Firms, Other Experts Help Search For Cash

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

Most people would consider something that cost them $20,000 to $50,000 a lifetime investment.

That's what a four-year college education is likely to cost most students in this area.

But few families approach financing college costs the way they would, say, buying a car or a house.

Often, they don't know what their options are, and many don't even know where to begin to find help.

Instead, they look at the numbers — and panic. And it's understandable.

At Harvard University, tuition was $9,800 this year; Suffolk University's was $4,500. Boston College is telling incoming freshman tuition will be $8,500 in the fall.

Even UMass-Amherst, a state university, costs $1,200 a year for tuition alone — and that's taxpayer-subsidized, at about $4,500 a student.

Tuition's not the end of it, either.

"You can count in another $3,500 or so a year for room and board, lab fees, books, and so on," says James True, of the Assn. of Independent Colleges and Universities of Massachusetts. (AICUM) Commuters' costs are almost as high.

The numbers can be overwhelming.

But figuring out how to pay for college doesn't have to put families into a panic or the poorhouse, the experts say.

There's help: basic advice a phone call away, more complex information at the cost of some legwork or some cold cash.

It all requires some poking around, a great deal of persistence and planning.

But the high school guidance counselors, college financial aid officers, bank loan specialists and consultants The Star interviewed all agreed: it can be done.

Everbody's Doing It

The experts interviewed all said most college students today finance their schooling with a package of different options.

"About 60 percent of the student body at Harvard gets financial assistance from one source or another: scholarships, grants or loans," says Jim Miller, Harvard's financial aid director.

Suffolk University's financial aid director, Chris Perry, says about 75 percent of that school's undergraduates get some form of aid.

"And for students who don't qualify for aid, we can arrange tuition payment plans," Perry adds.

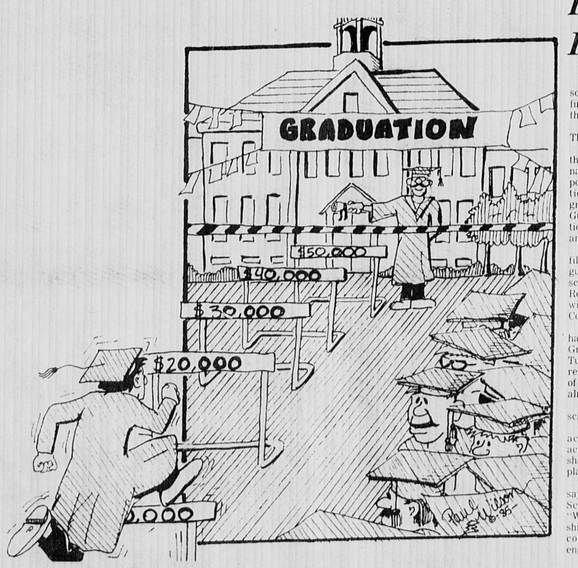

There are many ways to pay for school: scholarships, grants, federal and state student loans, loans based on the parents' resources, savings, and the students' own earnings, besides what Mom and Dad can contribute.

"There are lots of sources of money: they just don't all mean a lot of cash," says Barbara Gorham, an Arlington High School teacher who is on the school's scholarship committee.

"You need to be inventive," agrees Dr. Michael Romayne, dean of Suffolk's School of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and chairman of Winchester's School Committee.

"There's all kinds of money

Finding Scholarships Is Half The Battle

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

There are literally thousands of sources of scholarships and grants — financing towards a college education that a student does not have to repay. Sources include: private corporations; unions; trade associations; church, civic and social groups; the ROTC and the National Guard; and town scholarship foundations — not to mention the colleges and universities themselves.

Students (and parents) can find files full of scholarship listings in the guidance department of their high school, or at the Higher Education Resource Center, housed in the newer wing of the Boston Public Library at Copley Square.

"Most high school guidance offices have listings upon listings," says Grant Curtis, dean of financial aid at Tufts University, and a Winchester resident. "It just takes a heck of a lot of work to find the ones the kids don't already know about."

There are, however, hundreds of scholarships — big and small.

Some are based on need; some on academic specialties or achievements; some on memberships, or ethnic heritage, or career plans.

"We could never list them all," says Jean Scalese, of Arlington High School's guidance department. "Women in Construction has scholarships — for boys or girls — going into construction, architecture or engineering.

"The Mass. Labor Contest exam is open to every student," Scalese adds. The test is March 6 this year. "They ask questions on labor laws and history. We send the kids to the library to study."

Everything that comes into Winchester High School goes into an open file in the guidance office, says Anthony DiBiase, head of department. "We get notices of scholarships from the national Aid to Lutherans, from the Graphics Arts Technical Foundation, Sons of Italy, Kiwanis. . . It's up to the kids to look."

"Generally, the students who say, 'The guidance office is no good' (as a source) are the people who don't go and look," observes Curtis.

Students can also send away for some free information on financial aid from the federal government, state government, and the Assn. of Independent Colleges and Universities of Massachusetts.

Sometimes, a scholarship comes looking for a student — like National Merit scholarships. But they are few and far between, say counselors and financial aid officers. For the most part, it's up to students to do the legwork.

There are some private firms which offer "scholarship search" services, promising to clue parents and students into "millions of dollars in unclaimed scholarships" — for a fee.

Take their claims with a grain of salt — the people who work with financial aid programs do.

"It's my feeling if seniors were serious about doing their own research, they could find the same information as these services turn up."

Police Arrest Woman On Forgery Charges

Police nabbed a Revere woman at Logan Airport last Thursday after Chicago customs officials traced a warrant for her arrest to Winchester authorities.

Lysa M. Kooyoomjian, 21, was convicted about a year ago on charges of stealing more than $100 worth of goods and uttering bad checks, according to Police Lt. Joseph Perritano.

According to Perritano, in September of 1983, a Wainwright rd. family reported that a $1,500 Oriental rug had been bought from them with a bad check.

Kooyoomjian was arrested in Stoneham in connection with that incident. She then pleaded guilty to the charges, Perritano said, and made restitution.

However, police charge, she failed to appear in court for sentencing.

Then, last Wednesday, Chicago customs officials said they discovered a woman coming in from Mexico carrying two sets of identification. They then fed her name into a national computer to see if any warrants were out for her arrest, Perritano reported, and found the Winchester listing.

Winchester authorities asked to be contacted if the woman boarded a plane to Boston, the lieutenant said.

When she boarded an American Airlines flight to Logan, local police and a state trooper arranged to meet her at the gate.

They then arrested Kooyoomjian as she left the aircraft.

Perritano said there were several communities with warrants out for Kooyoomjian's arrest in connection with a scheme whereby a woman answered ads for goods placed in a want ad periodical and then paid for the articles with "bogus" checks.

Kooyoomjian was taken to the Lynch School police staion, where a matron booked her and took photos and fingerprints.

She was then transported to Woburn to be locked up.

Her bail was set at $1,000 cash, Perritano reported.

Historical Society Wins $1000 Grant

The Winchester Historical Society, for the second year in a row, has been awarded a $1,000 grant from the Old House Journal publication.

The Winchester organization became eligible because it had obtained a minimum of 12 subscriptions to the Journal.

This magazine has a revenue-sharing plan. Rather than spending money on subscription drives, it invites various clubs and organizations to find at least 12 members to sign up to receive the magazine.

The club with the most subscriptions automatically wins a $1,000 grant.

The names of the others are put into a kitty and five are drawn at random to receive a $1000 grant.

The magazine tells of ways to renovate older houses. The Henry Simonds Archival Center at 15 High st. has a subscription to the Old House Journal.

Water Conservation

Each American uses more than 60 gallons of water a day, and over 20,000 gallons a year, according to the Metropolitan District Commission.

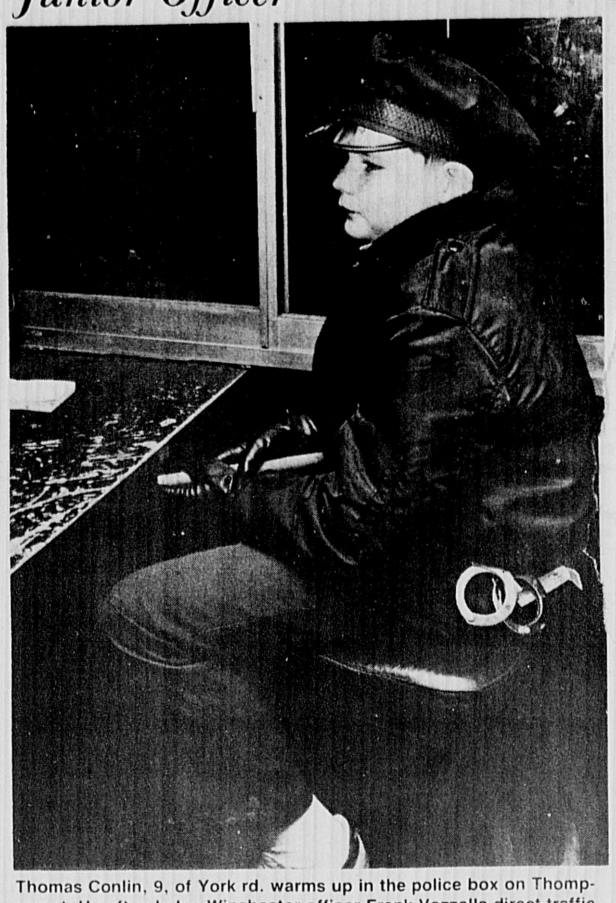

Library Offers Film

The 1961 film "West Side Story" will be shown free in the meeting room of the Winchester Public Library on Saturday, March 9, at 2 p.m. The film runs for 150 minutes.

The motion picture version of the hit Broadway musical has a "Romeo and Juliet" theme set amid the fighting street gangs of New York City. It received four Academy Awards, including one for the best film of 1961, and stars Natalie Wood, Richard Beymer, and Rita Moreno.

A strong blend of drama, dance, and music, it features the music of Leonard Bernstein, the lyrics of Stephen Sondheim, and the choreography of Jerome Robbins. Robert Wise directed the film.

Junior Officer

Thomas Conlin, 9, of York rd. warms up in the police box on Thompson st. He often helps Winchester officer Frank Vozzella direct traffic after school, and Vozzella says Tommy has his heart set on becoming a police officer. (Photo by John Pawlick)

Jewish Group Has First Service

By NANCY PICK

There is a Hebrew prayer that Jews recite for something new, inspiring or marvelous.

It has a long name, "Shehechianu," and it thanks God for sustaining life until a moment of joy.

Winchester's new Jewish congregation recited that prayer when they met last Friday night for their first service.

They met 100 strong to celebrate the Sabbath, the ceremony that ushers in the day of rest.

During the service, Richard N. Pallan, president of the new congregation, read a passage from the Torah, the hand-written Hebrew scroll containing the Old Testament.

That scroll has bound the Jewish people together from exile to exile, all across the world. It symbolizes the unity of the Jewish people and the continuity of Jewish civilization.

"We are creating a new link in a 5,000-year-old chain," said Pallan.

Meanwhile Ariel Newman, just 5½ months old in her pink jumper, symbolized the group's future as she cooed throughout the service.

Incorporated Dec. 4, the fledgling congregation has set few rituals in stone.

Their Torah is on loan from Temple Tifereth Israel of Malden. They're still in the process of interviewing rabbis. And they haven't yet decided on a name.

At the first service, the Torah lay on a table without the traditional ark to display it. People sang together without the accompaniment of a guitar or organ. Instead of a rabbi, members of the Jewish community led the service.

Voices faltered and sometimes songs started too low, but that didn't destroy the spirit in the hall.

The passage read Friday from the Torah, as dictated by the Jewish calendar, enhanced the congregation's first service — it talked about the construction of a sanctuary.

Barry Kahn, head of the Ritual Committee, played on that coincidence during a short address.

"There is no better lesson than . . . what it took for our people to create and build a Temple in the past," he said.

"Today, this spirit, this energy, compels us as it has for those in the past to seek each other out and to affirm our faith," stated Kahn.

"As we begin to worship together, we will find comfort, which comes from being amongst one another, and through our prayers we will discover that the meaning of our lives will be enriched."

The service ended with a benediction from Howard Rubenstein, and then wishes of "Shabbat Shalom," meaning Sabbath Peace, filled the hall.

Afterward, participants adjourned for Sabbath blessings over the wine and bread.

Pallan thanked the Rev. Walter B. Davis and the members of the First Congregational Church for opening the church to Jewish classes and services.

Several letters of good wishes arrived for the congregation.

The Rev. John J. Bishop, president of the local Inter-Faith Council, wrote, "So many thoughts rush forward at a time like this. You people, who have the privilege of sharing this moment, have to be filled with an excitement and an enthusiasm that know no measure."

That momentum will no doubt carry the congregation through their upcoming events. On Friday, March 8, they will celebrate the festival of Purim, children included, at 6:30 p.m.

On March 13, there will be an adult education class on the history and psychology of Passover.

Both events will be held in the rear wing of the First Congregational Church on Church st.

Daniel Silber, Murray Yavner, Barry Kahn, Nachum Jacobi and Phil Zacuto prepare to cover the Torah with a white tallis, or prayer shawl, before last Friday's Sabbath service. The new congregation does not yet have an ark to store the biblical scrolls. (Staff photo by Amy Sweeney)

Sen. Kraus Discusses Education

Sen. Richard A. Kraus (D-4th Middlesex) newly appointed vice-chair of the Education Committee, recently hosted a community meeting at the Winchester School Administration Building where he solicited suggestions as to what should be done to improve public education in the Commonwealth.

Kraus began the discussion by citing three specific problems currently facing public education: 1) the tired blood syndrome, also known as teacher burnout; 2) the lack of teachers in the training pipeline and; 3) declining public support for public education.

Kraus noted the first two problems had been enumerated often in constituent correspondence he receives. The problem of declining political support for public education, however, was an acute problem which Kraus feared may be going unnoticed.

"Unfortunately, the public is fast losing respect for public education," said Kraus. "If we allow this trend to continue, the consequences will be grave for the entire commonwealth," he continued.

Sen. Richard Kraus

Kraus opened up the discussion with a few questions: "What changes do we need to make to improve public education? How do we make those changes? How do we communicate those changes? How do we change people's perceptions?"

The 40 people in attendance came from all four towns of the district and represented a range from the superintendents' offices to the principals, to local officials and school committee members, to teachers and parents.

Some of the suggestions mentioned by the audience included the following:

- increased in-service training for teachers
- increased incentive programs for teachers experiencing "burnout"
- better advancement opportunities within school systems for those who have reached their maximum salary level
- reduction of paperwork presently mandated by state
- increase in teacher salaries

One superintendent noted that from conversations with his teaching staff he felt low teacher morale might best be addressed by increasing funds to improve working conditions rather than automatically raising salaries.

Those working conditions include the size of classes, more time for in-service-training, improved school atmosphere, and teachers' freedom from custodial responsibilities.

After the meeting, Kraus said he was pleased with the interest level and the ideas brought forth. "It's true a lot of what was expressed tonight has been said before, but that's okay. I primarily wanted to get a sense of what interested representatives and individuals in the communities thought.

"There were some exciting and new ideas, as well, for example Bob Dewald's idea to give college tuition credit to college-aged children of teachers."

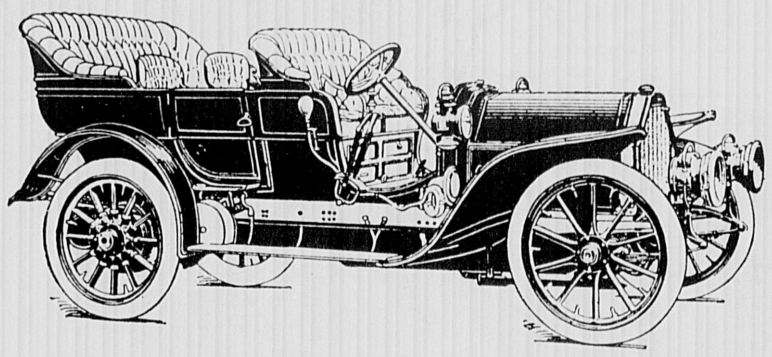

"Soon I'll be putting forth some proposals of my own," said Kraus. "I can tell you now that not everyone will agree with what I put forth, but I don't think anyone will be able to say my proposals are not provocative and highly challenging.

"Let's face it, the commonwealth's public education system needs a little shaking up and a big boost. Now there's a challenge. Stay tuned! There's more to come."

Local Students Excell In Statewide Contest

The Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards is a program intended to encourage students achievement in creative art. Each January, students in grades 7-12 submit more than 5,000 pieces of artwork to five regional sites throughout the Commonwealth and 500 Gold Keys are awarded. Approximately 250 pieces of art are given Honorable Mention.

The 500 works that earned Gold Keys were on display at the Prudential Tower Lobby. The Gold Key works competed for 240 Blue Ribbon awards. Blue Ribbon winners will be forwarded to New York for the National Scholastic Art Awards competition conducted by Scholastic Magazines Inc.

Will Parents Get A Say In Hirings?

Dr. Charles L. Mitsakos
Superintendent of Schools

Question: What role will parents and teachers play in the selection of the new principals at the Lincoln and Vinson-Owen schools?
Answer:

Parents and teachers will have a most important role in the selection of these two principals. Volunteers have been sought from each school to serve on a search committee for their respective school principalship. Four parents and two teachers are joining a curriculum director, elementary principal, and the assistant superintendent for personnel and management to screen applications and to conduct interviews. They will then recommend candidates to the superintendent for final interview.

The screening of applications will be completed in April and the interviews with the candidates will be held in May. Recommendation for the principalships will be made by the Superintendent to the School Committee at its meeting on May 28.

ROBERT D. FITZGERALD
ASST. SUPERINTENDENT FOR PERSONNEL & MANAGEMENT

Question: How and where is a teaching position "posted?"
Answer:

Whenever a teaching position becomes available in the Winchester Public Schools a vacancy notice is posted both within the system and outside of the system. The internal posting is made according to the contractual agreement between the Winchester School Committee and the Winchester Education Assn.

The contract states in part that whenever a vacancy occurs or is known to be forthcoming it will be publicized by means of a vacancy notice which shall clearly set forth the qualifications for the position, the rate of compensation, the work year and other relevant criteria.

If the vacancy which is to be filled occurs or is anticipated during the school year, the vacancy notice is placed on the bulletin board in every school within a reasonable time in advance of the appointment. In any case, the notice is posted for a minimum of seven days prior to the deadline for application.

If a vacancy occurs after the close of school in June, the vacancy notice is mailed to the president of WEA and the building representative in each building as designated by the WEA at his/her summer address at least 15 days prior to the deadline for applications.

If a vacancy occurs after Aug. 15, the notice time limit is adjusted to allow the committee to make an appointment prior to the opening of school.

Posting outside of the system is accomplished through various means. Positions are advertized in local newspapers as well as the Boston papers; personnel directors in surrounding communities are notified; placement offices in appropriate colleges and universities are notified; and affirmative action/minority hiring services are notified of the vacancy.

Vacancies are always posted internally. On occasion, circumstances are such that outside postings are not made.

Question: Mr. Bouley's advancaed science program at McCall has an outstanding reputation. What is offered in this course and why is it so distinguished?
Answer

The success of our award-winning Earth Science Program is due in large measure to the efforts of our three fine Earth Science teachers: Gene Bouley, Dick Elliott and Neil Gillis.

The advanced level of our program ("Investigating the Earth") is designed to be a challenge for students who are well-motivated and academically talented. It is taught at a high intellectual level and requires the students to do a lot of thinking. They are continually given problems to solve using the information obtained from reading and class presentations. Lab work is an integral part of the course which makes the students better observers and then requires them to draw conclusions from their observations.

The teachers constantly stress how dynamic and beautiful the earth is. The students are shown a great number of spectacular landforms that demonstrate the ever-changing earth within the hydrologic and water cycles they study. An appreciation of the United States geography and its related geology is presented with an emphasis on what the students have seen or might see by visiting our National Parks. Field Trips are set up at the end of the year tobring what was learned in the classroom to life. Through the great variety of topics covered during the year, each student usually finds one that holds his or her interest for future enjoyment or study.

McCall Students Leave For Washington

At the crack of dawn today, McCall Junior High 8th graders began their three-day trip to Washington, D.C. At 5:30 a.m. 50 students boarded a chartered bus for Logan Airport, where they were scheduled to take a flight to the nation's Capital. The students were accompanied by McCall teachers Eugene Bouley, Neil Gillis and James Maconochie.

A hectic sightseeing schedule is planned for the Winchester students, who will visit all the main points of interest in Washington. A high point of the trip will be a visit with Congressman Ed Markey, who will meet with the students when they visit the capitol building. Markey addressed a full assembly at McCall earlier in the school year. The group will return to Winchester on the evening of March 2.

This is the first year that such a trip has been offered at the junior high level.

Colonial Day

Grade 2 students at Lynch School are busy getting ready for Colonial Day. Regular doors are disappearing and being replaced by those made of logs. Costumes are being made and gingerbread boards and chimneys are also on the production list.

Residents Worry About Water St. Safety, Values

But if the house is vacant, Randall said, "usually you take it immediately."

Residents Worry

Water st. residents say they worry about teenagers playing in and around the duplex, accessible through a large hole in the boarded-up back of the house.

In the yard stand piles of scrap, including rusty pipes, boards, bricks and dirt. A damp, legless couch lies on the front porch. Several windows are broken.

Still, town officials say Costello has satisfied both building code demands and Board of Health regulations.

Joanne Scott of the town's Board of Health, says her department has "very little to do with the house as long as nobody is living in it."

A fumigation company reported no evidence of rats on the property, she added.

Building Commissioner Zagzoug said the house is sufficiently closed to the elements. "It's not unsafe, it's just unfinished," he said.

Costello, who is taking a leave of absence from the priesthood, could not be reached for comment despite The Star's numerous attempts to contact him.

Neighbors Respond

In October, eight Water st. residents asked Assessors for tax breaks, claiming their homes have fallen in value because of their proximity to the run-down duplex.

The Assessors turned down their requests in January, however. "We felt compassion for the homeowners but we just didn't find anything in the law that would allow us to make an adjustment," said Assessors Chairman Sherman R. Josephson.

He added that one "derelict house" in a neighborhood isn't enough basis for a property tax rebate.

Nevertheless, Virginia Nelson, who lives in the house across from 41 Water st., said she fears for her property values.

"If I were to sell my house, I couldn't get as high an assessment with somebody looking across at that house," she claimed.

Not surprisingly, Nelson strongly favors passage of the proposed warrant article.

"I think it would be great for the town to take the house," she commented. "It's a shambles."

However, another neighbor, who asked that her name not be used, stood up for Costello. She said she sympathizes with his efforts to rebuild the place.

"Evidently, he ripped out everything," she observed. "I think he bit off a little more than he could chew. It does look terrible, but I live with it," added the neighbor.

A third neighbor, Mary Graham, was less tolerant of Costello's property. She said the house "has gone to hell, there's no two ways about it.

"In the very beginning, he said he was going to fix this up right away," said Graham. "I've been in that house when his mother kept it. Everything was beautiful," said the longtime Water st. resident.

Graham said she prefers keeping the duplex in private hands, rather than converting it to subsidized housing.

"I think it would make a very nice house for somebody," she commented. "There are so many people who want to buy that house, and he (Costello) won't sell it," she added.

Several residents said Costello had been approached by potential purchasers, but had refused the offers. The Star was unable to confirm those comments, however.

Still, if there were Winchester people who needed help paying their rent, Graham says she "wouldn't mind" if they moved in.

The house at 41 Water st. is being considered for inclusion as an article for the spring Town Meeting warrant. (Staff photo by Amy Sweeney)

Jr. High Health Class To Be Offered

A new health education class will be tested out on seventh and ninth graders next year, following the School Committee's unanimous approval of the program at their Tuesday night meeting.

Sex education will be included in the trial class, entitled "Health As a Way of Life," along with such topics as drugs and alcohol, nutrition, emotional health and family relations.

Under the plan, physical education teachers will conduct the classes. According to Evander French, principal of McCall Junior High School, all secondary school gym teachers are certified in both physical and health education.

At the meeting, Janice Dolan, director of physical education for the Winchester school system, admitted she had never taught a health class.

However, she said she plans to draw upon the experience of health teachers in neighboring communities as well as published health class guides.

School Committee member Constance Papas said health education is "potentially a very volatile area." She said people designing the class must develop criteria for judging "appropriate" material.

Dolan responded, "I would assure you that in no way would I personally be a part of anything that is going to be controversial. . . . I think I've been here long enough to be sensitive to the town."

Asst. Supt. David Ackerman, who helped design the class, commented, "We are determined to do this right." He said the course would be under close scrutiny by the School Committee, the superintendent, and Winchester health professionals.

According to a program outline, all seventh graders will take the health course for one school quarter in place of study hall.

Not all ninth graders will take the trial class, however. Student consent and parental permission will be required for enrollment in the course, which would meet twice a week during the second semester, 1986. Again, it would replace study hall.

Markey Appoints Assistant

Cong. Edward J. Markey has announced the appointment of Joseph Zampitella as his executive assistant to oversee the activities of his Boston staff.

Zampitella, who has served on Markey's staff for the past seven years, is a graduate of Suffolk University's School of Management and holds a master's degree in business administration. He lives with his wife Dorothy (LaFauci), formerly of Winchester, in Malden.

"I am delighted to have Joe in charge of my Boston staff," Markey said. "Reaching out and providing quality service to the people of the seventh district is my number one priority for this year. Joe will be leading that effort in Boston, and together I am sure our goal will be accomplished.

Markey also announced that Neal Wolfson, a lifelong resident of Lexington has been hired to assist Zampitella. A graduate of Boston University, Wolfson worked as a legal assistant for a Washington law firm before joining the Markey staff.

State To Publish List Of Unclaimed Money

Massachusetts Abandoned Property Law is known as the Unclaimed Money Law. It is one of the state's first consumer protection laws dating back to 1907. This law seeks to protect individuals by assuring that unclaimed bank accounts, uncashed payroll checks, gift certificates, insurance proceeds and other funds which have been inactive for at least five years are returned to their rightful owners.

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane is charged with administering this law. One of his responsibilities is to see that banks and other institutions are in compliance with the law. In the past, Crane has had to sue banks, department stores and insurance companies to make them turn over unclaimed funds. The Treasurer's Office then must try to locate the missing owners to return their monies to them.

In March, Crane will release the names of more than 35,000 Massachusetts residents who are due unclaimed funds. These names and other information will appear in newspapers across the state.

Last year Crane returned more than $10 million to the rightful owners or legal heirs under this statute.

Parents' Anonymous Seeks Volunteer Help

The Mystic Valley Parent's Anonymous Chapter is looking for a volunteer support committee to help with public relations, some fundraising and other tasks to help sustain the chapter's existence.

For the past six months, a small group of parents from the local Mystic Valley towns has been meeting weekly in Arlington to talk about the stresses of parenthood. Parent's Anonymous (P.A.) is a no-cost, confidential self-help group for parents who are experiencing difficulty coping with caring for their children. For many members, P.A. offers a warm, safe place in which to share their feelings, receive support from other parents, and learn that they are not alone.

In order to continue meeting the needs of parents who are stressed, a P.A. group depends on the support of community members. The new Mystic Valley P.A. Chapter, serving the towns of Arlington, Burlington, Lexington, Winchester and Woburn, is in need of volunteers to form a P.A. Support Committee.

Committee members would be asked to offer a few hours of time a month in response to specific needs of the chapter, such as publicity, fundraising, child care and other needs.

Interested citizens who have a small amount of time to offer to other parents and families will have the satisfaction of knowing that such efforts are helping parents improve relationships with their children.

The new Mystic Valley Parent's Anonymous Chapter needs the time, energy, caring and commitment of such citizens. For more information, please call the Mystic Valley Office for Children in Winchester, 729-4350.

Voters Can Register All Day Saturday

The office of the Town Clerk has announced special registration hours for newcomers to Winchester, 18 year-olds and all other citizens not yet registered to vote.

"The office will be open Saturday, March 2, from 8:30 in the morning, straight through to 10 o'clock in the evening," said Town Clerk Carolyn Ward.

Wednesday, March 6, is the last day to register and be able to vote in the annual town election scheduled for March 26.

Hospital Offers Three-Session Stress Workshop

Winchester Hospital will present a three-part program, "Promoting Stress Management for a Positive Lifestyle," in the hospital's seminar room on Thursdays, March 7, 14, and April 11, from 7 to 10 p.m.

Randy E. Kamen, a consulting psychologist, will conduct the program. Dr. Kamen has lectured and consulted extensively in stress management, pain control, psychosomatic disorders and related areas in medical institutions and universities. She is a member of the faculties of Boston University's Graduate School of Dentistry and Lesley College's Department of Counselling Psychology.

The series will allow participants to conduct personal assessments, and will teach them how to identify the source of their stress. Participants will also learn how to integrate stress management strategies in daily living.

There is a fee for the course. Those who wish to attend are asked to register with the education department of Winchester Hospital.

Hospital Extends Lifeline System

Rotary Club Donates Funds

Winchester Hospital has expanded its Lifeline program, a program of 24-hour emergency assistance for members of the community in the event that they are unable to reach or use the telephone to summon help.

The hospital began offering the Lifeline service in May 1984 and was initially able to offer the program to only residents of Winchester, Reading, and to patients being discharged from the hospital.

The Lifeline service is now available to residents of all the communities in Winchester Hospital's service area. These include: Andover, Arlington, Billerica, Burlington, Lexington, Malden, Medford, Melrose, North Reading, Reading, Stoneham, Tewksbury, Wakefield, Winchester, Wilmington, and Woburn.

Subscribers to Lifeline receive a tabletop "communicator" which attaches to their home telephone as well as a small transmitter which the subscriber wears at all times while at home. If the Lifeline subscriber needs help and cannot reach the telephone, a simple push on the transmitter sends an electronic signal to the telephone "communicator," which automatically dials Winchester Hospital's special Lifeline number.

The call is received in the hospital's emergency room, where the staff sets into motion a Lifeline response system to get help to the Lifeline subscriber. The Lifeline program also includes a monitoring system in the event that a subscriber becomes unconscious or for some other reason is unable to summon help by pressing the Lifeline transmitter button.

Subscribers to Winchester Hospital's Lifeline program are introduced to the program by volunteer members of the Outreach Committee of the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester. The volunteers install the Lifeline units, explain how the Lifeline system works, and make follow-up calls monthly to Lifeline subscribers. Current Lifeline volunteers include Winchester residents Jane Bradlee, Kay Hood, Nancy Porter and Marion Reeves.

Since the hospital began offering the Lifeline service nearly a year ago, more than 30 area residents have subscribed to the program. Information on becoming a Lifeline subscriber through Winchester Hospital is available by calling Dorothy Roemer of the hospital's Social Service Department at 729-9000, extension 3105.

Jack Kean, president of Winchester Rotary Club, presents a club donation to Dorothy Roemer, coordinator of Winchester Hospital's Lifeline program. Lifeline subscribers can alert the hospital from their homes in an emergency. Part of the Rotary Club donation has already been used to help install a Lifeline unit in the home of a 97-year-old Winchester man who lives in elderly housing.

COMMENT

Winchester Kernels

'Looks like there's some movement going on at a former Washington st. landmark these days.

The "For Sale" sign is gone from the window at Lynch's Market and there have been vans and trucks backed up to the front entrance for about a week now.

The former neighborhood grocery store closed a few months ago, much to the sorrow of the shopkeepers' customers.

The Lynch brothers, touted by several residents as having a top-notch meat market, retired from the longtime family business several months ago, and the building has been vacant since then.

Unfortunately, the brothers declined several interview requests by The Star, and now they're not even in town.

'Bet there are more than a few people wishing the Lynches were making a surprise return. . .

★ ★ ★ ★

Everybody knows nobody's perfect, but this one just merits a bit of a wince, at least.

'Seems some mail received recently from a politician of this area showed that he had better send his staff to the dictionary a bit more often.

The trouble spot was with the words formally versus formerly.

Upon reading that someone's spouse is formally of Winchester, but the couple is listed as living in another town, you begin to wonder.

Perhaps the person who is formally of Winchester lives elsewhere and would rather have his 'proper' address as Winchester.

Or maybe he/she just lives in the other town to throw people off.

Anyhow, public relations can be a drag, but just for spice it'd be great to see that people do indeed consult ol' Funk and Wagner once in a while.

Or is that Wagner and Funk. . . ?

★ ★ ★ ★

Recently we had phantom letters, this week Town Hall had its share of phantoms.

'Seems somebody was looking for a Guinness record this time, though.

The phantom phone freak had eveyone's ears ringing Monday night when he/she kept making nonstop calls to the Selectmen's office during the board's meeting.

Each time Acting Town Manager Jake Ciarcia, among others, jumped up to answer the phone, the caller would hang up just as soon as Ciarcia or whomever said "hello."

Maybe it was just someone who wants the ol' boys to get a little exercise. Or maybe it was somebody wanting to make a scene for the cable viewers.

Whatever the case, let's hope we're not going to get a bunch of clowns abusing the telecast situation. The meetings can be trying enough without somebody else playing games.

★ ★ ★ ★

Just a note. . .

The Winchester Public Library published some time ago a directory of all the town's clubs and services and local, state and county government agencies.

For some reason, the handy helper hasn't been selling as well as library officials hoped it would.

It's bigger than the regular "town book," and it packs a whole lot of information that's available at your fingertips.

Anybody interested ought to contact the library; the book is available at several spots in town.

Somebody out there in Hollywood has a bad impression of Winchester.

First, they name the snob doctor on M*A*S*H after us (Maj. Charles Emerson Winchester) — although the writers did eventually humanize him.

Now another writer has zinged us. A medical drama series, St. Elsewhere, is set in a mythical hospital in Boston.

There was a character, a scandalous intern, Peter White, accused of raping several classmates and nurses. The season capper was White's shooting death, at the hands of a nurse.

Last week's episode had the nurse, hospitalized for emergency surgery while she awaits trial, sneaking down to the morgue to look over White's autopsy report.

The camera zoomed in on the file — ostensibly to show the cause of death listed. But, typed in at "place of birth" was — you guessed it — Winchester, Mass.

Now, really.

Reader: Budget Requires Tough Look

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In response to last week's front page story concerning Selectman (Mark A.) Lombardi's demanding questioning of department heads over their FY86 budget requests, all I can say is "It's about time."

It's about time that someone on the Board of Selectmen shook up a few departments about unrealistic budget requests. Responsible budgeting means submitting realistic budgets with price tags that this town can afford.

It's about time that someone saw fit to "rock the boat" — even if it is an election year. When it comes to this town's budgeting process, it's something we should expect of every selectman.

The simple fact is that this town can no longer continue to be so "friendly" about the way it does budgeting. The days of "request and ye shall have" are gone. Rather than criticize Mr. Lombardi, we should be applauding him.

What about the Police Chief's $84,388 overtime budget? I thought an overtime budget was to cover extraordinary circumstances. Why not ask a few hard, maybe sensitive, questions about how we're spending such large sums of money? Is there a more fiscally responsible way of manning our Police Department?

What about the DPW Director's request of $33,000 to fertilize and seed playing fields (a figure four times greater than previous budget requests for the same item)? Is it realistic to ask for such an appropriation when Town Meeting voted last spring to spend $25,000 for a design study of all the towns playing fields to avoid "hit and miss" maintenance of playing fields?

As I said before, "It's about time" for everyone in town government to take a hard and honest look at where our money is going. If we don't, many of us will no longer be able to afford to live in Winchester.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Educator Urges: 'Protest President's Cuts'

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

President Reagan's Fiscal Year '86 budget message requests $2.3 billion less in student aid and GSL loan interest than the FY '85 appropriation. His proposal to limit federal aid by family income ($25,000), rather than need (cost less family ability to pay), would affect 79 percent of Tufts current aid recipients. Only 400 of 1950 presently aided could be awarded SEOG and Pell Grants, work-study, or NDSL loans.

The proposal to limit GSL loans to family incomes of $32,500 or less, regardless of need, would cancel the eligibility of about 1,350 undergraduates, leaving about 600 to be aided, or 200 or more than those included in the $25,000 income cap.

The president's $4,000 cap on all forms of federal aid (apparently including a $2,500 GSL, although only $200 interest is paid by the government to obtain the bank's money) would somewhat reduce the 600 eligible for GSL, but it would cut federal aid to needy students by more than half. At present, very needy students typically receive about $9,000 in federal funds ($2,300 net GSL, $1,000 NDSL, $1,500 SEOG, $1,500 Pell, $1,000 work-study during the academic year and $1,700 during the summer.)

It is important to note that only the GSL recommendation may take effect for 1985-86, and then only if Congress agrees. The extreme limitations on other forms of federal aid without regard to need, cost, or number of dependents attending higher education should not affect the funds already appropriated for 1985-86. If approved by Congress, the 56 percent reduction in federal aid caused by the $4,000 cap will not be effective until 1986-87.

Don't get mad; write. Write to both senators from your state and to your member of Congress. Ask others to write as well to support continuance of federal aid to the middle class. There is much opposition in Congress to these proposals which, under the guise of reducing the budget deficit, are mounting a full scale attack upon access and choice in higher education and are being used as an excuse to do what the administration wishes to do anyway; get the federal aid programs off the budget and put the financial burden on states and families.

Students and parents should not panic, change educational plans, or feel that all is lost. Congress is highly unlikely to accept such an ill-conceived attack upon our nation's true first line of defense — an educated citizenry. In 1981, when Congress ordered need analysis for GSL for those above a $30,000 income floor, many eligible families thought $30,000 was a ceiling and did not apply for the loans. Later, they found that the analysis made them eligible for GSL loans and other aid as well when it was applied to institutional costs.

Let's not repeat our previous mistake. Tell your representatives how important the federal aid programs are to your family. Lobby in every way possible, not only to support the present appropriations, but to gain the increased amounts which are sorely needed if our educational system as we know it is to survive.

A Reader's Proposal For Using The Fells

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I was happy to see that several people are anxious to make Middlesex Fells accessible to responsible citizens.

About one year ago I had the impression that many people felt this way, and I developed a proposal for monitored access for which I obtained signatures of support from people in two neighborhoods.

The proposal was submitted for discussion at the Selectmen's meeting, but never got on the agenda. Telephone calls to the Selectmen over several months gave me to understand that the proposal was under consideration, but more information was needed from a variety of departments before it could go on the agenda. Eventually I gave up.

Recent correspondence to your paper has encouraged me to let readers know about past interest shown. The proposal itself is given below:

This is a proposal for making the pathway around the Winchester Reservoir accessible to Winchester residents and still protect the water supply from vandalism and pollution through misuse by individuals. I am specifically thinking of the path starting at the Girl Scout Cabin near South Border Road proceeding to the weir across the water. The procedure I would suggest is simple and cheap.

Procedure

• Registration of interested walkers, joggers, skiiers with the Winchester Recreation Dept. The department would take name, address, and issue a serial number.

• The reservoir guards would receive the list of names and serial numbers. They would continue to patrol the areas as before. People they encounter would be stopped, asked for I.D. Those who are not registered would be dealt with in the usual manner. Those persons who give a serial number would be asked to give I.D. also. Their serial number would be verified from the list (along the lines of a Visa card checked by a sales clerk before a purchase). If the number turns out not to be authentic, then a fine could be imposed.

Cost

Time it takes the Recreation Dept. to record an applicant's I.D. and serial number. They could be willing to include this procedure in their regular day, in which case there would be no added cost here.

The time it takes the reservoir patrol to verify a submitted I.D.

The time it takes to process fines for unauthorized I.Ds.

If a significant cost is thought to be incurred by this procedure, it could be defrayed, along the lines of the permit for the dump, by a small charge for the serial number, and from the fines imposed.

It may be argued that patrols are intermittent and only partially effective. But this is the case at present also. At least now some people would have a chance to use one of Winchester's greatest beauty spots and aids to good health. The idea is simple and cheap and, I think, worth a try through one cycle of the four seasons.

Sincerely,
Irene Schneller
Sheffield rd.

Leonor Rich Endorses Kazaian For WHA

(The following letter of endorsement was submitted for publication by The Star. In following with The Star policy, letters of endorsement are considered as one of the three releases allowed per candidate up to a week before the election. The releases, either in the form of pictures, statements or endorsements, are authorized by the candidate and are in no way the opinion of The Star.)

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Randolph Kazazian Sr., 49 Lincoln st., has announced his candidacy for service with the Winchester Housing Authority. He was appointed a year ago to fill the unexpired term of Mary Murphy, and he now desires to continue work with the WHA.

He is well-qualified to be a member of this important committee in view of his active leadership in many town organizations. His enthusiastic interest in civic affairs has enabled him to become aware especially of the great need for adequate housing. He is concerned about the welfare of all Winchester residents with a concentration of attention on the senior population.

Having been a Winchester resident for 50 years, he has a wide range of acquaintances and friends throughout the community. Currently, he is a Town Meeting member representing Precinct 2.

Since his retirement in 1979, he has assumed multiple responsibilities at the Jenks Senior Center and Winchester Seniors Association. He has chaired the Recreation Committee, has been on the Executive Board as vice president in charge of programs and has been a member of the House Committee and the Overnight Travel Committee.

He instituted the monthly Bingo afternoons and has coordinated the weekly Bridge and Whist. His volunteer services on the Winchester Seniors Assn. Transportation Committee have extended far beyond providing rides for individuals; he visits the ill at home and in hospitals, giving cheer to those who are lonely. His empathy for those in need is among his outstanding characteristics.

In the wider community, he has remained active in the Lions International, in which he is a charter member. He has served as King Lion and treasurer of this philanthropic organization. Currently, he is treasurer of both the Sons of Italy and the Aberjona Civic Assn. as well as serving on their many committees.

Randy is a "doer" who spares no energy in providing for the welfare of others. The elected position he seeks requires this type of man who can get things done. I urge your support of Randolph Kazazian Sr. as a candidate for the Winchester Housing Authority when you go to the polls in March.

Time For A Change?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I wish to take issue with some of my neighbors at the Westley Complex.

This is 1985. The original contract that people are still signing goes back to 1977. Attitudes have changed and contracts should be brought up to date.

Doctors feel that seniors do much better with the presence of an animal. Let's have some compassion for people. I think that Marion Hatch should be allowed to keep her cat.

I am sure that minds will be changed if we think about this.

Respectfully yours,
Eunice Pittas

A Small (Yawn) Affliction

By TERRY MAROTTA

There's no one on this green earth who isn't handicapped in some way by nature or circumstance. The trick is to rise above your affliction and go on with your life.

I'm a great fan of Dolly Parton for this reason. She rises above that lush body of hers in a way that has always seemed to me to be almost spiritual, transcendent even.

Here she is, a lady with a figure enough for four ladies built onto her tiny frame. She looks like the skyline of a Medieval city, like ancient Constantinople, like Oz. Her body is a riot of detail and abundance. It's all the stained-glass windows in every French cathedral; it's the entire Gothic period in architecture.

And yet she takes no notice of it.

Morons make Dolly Parton jokes, sure, but she doesn't encourage them. She neither tries to hide her generous endowment, as far as I can see; nor does she try to trade on it. She simply rises above it—them, as the morons would say.

This is what we have to do in life. We all struggle with some version of Dolly's curse, who doesn't? We all find ourselves wrestling with some handicap every day, and trying to do what she does so beautifully: namely live around it.

I personally play host to an extremely embarrassing affliction. It has been my cross to fall asleep in inappropriate places, and at inappropriate times.

This has not been a lifelong problem for me: I would say it commenced somewhere around the time of my first child's inception. Call it ten years ago, in round numbers. Still it makes up in intensity what it lacks in longevity, this handicap of mine. It's gotten to the point where I don't trust myself in social situations.

Oh, it's under control in the mornings. Once out of the bed, I'm all set, and full of energy. I wake up at five with my baby and together we kill a bottle of moojuice and play with the blankets for a while.

Then he passes out, I put him back in his crib and I stretch, dress and speed off to a health club for another sixty minutes.

This is no problem for me. By 7:30, I've undergone my daily dose of fitness-torture eaten, read the paper, done two loads of wash and written in my diary. I can go on this way till the noonhour or a little more; I wear six hats; I carry my weight.

But then, ah then: just as the afternoon begins to ripen, the Transformation starts. I know how well how Lawrence Talbot must have felt as he watched the moon wax full. I can feel the fur of sleepiness growing on my body, the fangs of fatigue sprouting from my gums.

I start drowsing around three, helping the older kids with their homework. I finish an errand, pull up in the driveway and slump over at the wheel. I fall asleep during the bedtime story; and I'm the one reading it!

By the time the kids are in bed, my affliction is in full flower. I sleep propped like a corpse at a fraternity party, with Time or Newsweek in my hands and a riot of dreams swirling inside my head.

My husband makes fun of me and sticks cigars in my mouth. Once I wore a Red Sox hat, all unknowing, for three long and somnolent hours, while he followed the action at Fenway Park on the tube.

And this is just in our house. I do my major snoozing in public. At the movies. At a dinner party (is anything ruder?). During the entire second section of the "Messiah" this Christmas, performed live with all the yelling and crashing that Handel built into the piece.

Our sitters used to ask me if I had a good time when we went out in the evening; now they ask if I had a nice nap. It's unbelievable. It's humiliating. It's weird.

Dolly has her problem, and she appears to rise above it. Maybe I can rise above mine, too—that is, if I can stay awake long enough.

Fall Victim Thanks Helpers

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

While visiting in Winchester several weeks ago, I slipped and fell near Winchester Square and received a triple fracture and dislocated bone in my left ankle.

I would like to thank all those who came to my aid so quickly — the woman who ran for help; the off-duty police officer who stayed with me until the ambulance arrived; the gentleman who brought over a blanket and pillow; and several others who cared enough to stop and offer their help. I'm just sorry I did not get anyone's name so that I could thank them personally.

In addition, I am also very grateful to the ambulance crew, and all the nurses and doctors in the emergency room, as well as the staff at the Winchester Hospital. Their professionalism and efficiency is certainly a credit to your community.

It's certainly comforting to know that there are thoughtful, caring people such as these, close at hand in time of need.

Many thanks to all of you.

Sincerely,
Marie Penta

Local Painter's Cityscapes Picked For One-Woman Show

The work of Winchester artist Carolyn Latanision will be exhibited by the Marblehead Arts Assn. at the Hooper Mansion in Marblehead from March 3 to March 28.

Latanision works in a variety of water media on paper including watercolor, gouach, casein and acrylic. Her subject matter varies from contemporary representational landscape, still life, and figure studies to semi-abstract representations.

Much of Latanision's work reflects the atmosphere and flavor of city life. Her Beacon Hill scenes capture the elegance of arched doorways and polished brass. Copley Square, Newbury Street, and Haymarket seem to sparkle with natural color and vibrance.

Latanision's paintings are represented in private and corporate collections in the United States, Europe, Japan and Australia. Locally she is active in a number of art organizations and has received many awards for her work.

She paints and teaches classes at her Woburn studio and was Artist-in-Residence in the Lexington Public Schools this fall.

There will be an opening reception for Latanision's one-woman show on Sunday, March 3, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Hooper Mansion (designated in the National Register of Historic Places), located at 8 Hooper st. in the center of Marblehead.

It is open daily, Tuesday through Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. The public is welcome to attend the reception as well as to view Latanision's work throughout the month of March.

The Old Paramount Theater on Washington st. in Boston is the subject of a prize-winning casein and acrylic painting by Carolyn Latanision. It is one of 50 paintings which will be exhibited at the Hooper Mansion in Marblehead in March.

Four Locals Will Sing In Treble Chorus

The Treble Chorus of New England announces its spring "pops" concert, "Pan of Penzance" to be presented Saturday, March 24, at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, March 25, at a 3 p.m. matinee at the Pike School in Andover. This original musical with book by Marie Stultz is a takeoff on "Pirates of Penzance" and the classic "Peter Pan."

Singing with the Treble Chorus of New England are Winchester students Matthew Benke and Mike Callahan.

In addition, singing with the Training Choir of the Treble Chorus are Megan Brady and Emily White.

The March performances of "Pan of Penzance" involve the 65 Treble Chorus young people in the Gilbert and Sullivan genre of "Damsels in Distress," "The Valiant Navy," "Bobbies" and, of course, "Pirates!"

The Sunday matinee will include prizes. For reservations and tickets, call Pat Cain at 682-3571 in North Andover. Proceeds from the performances will go to the operating expenses of this non-profit children's chorus.

Town Hall Tower Repairs May Be Linked To Handicapped Improvements

By ERIC W. BLOOM

What began as a single repair project for the crumbling Town Hall tower could mushroom into an extra $1 million revamp project for the ancient building, according to state and local officials.

By law, communities that remodel or alter public buildings must then make the buildings accessible to the handicapped. The repairs to Town Hall, say some officials, make the town responsible for complying with those access laws.

To comply with the state laws, the town would have to install elevators and ramps, as well as redesigned bathrooms. The improvements would cost approximately $960,000, according to John Ciarcia, Acting Town Manager.

This money would probably be raised through a bond issue, he says. The town currently has a $1.2 million bond debt with $417,180 in interest.

"I would probably say we have jurisdiction," says Deborah Ryan, administrative assistant for the state's Architectural Barriers Board. "But I'm not sure," she adds.

Meanwhile, local Building Commissioner Anthony Zagzoug says he isn't so sure that the repairs strap the town into the accessibility law.

He says that since the repairs won't change the basic function or structure of the building, the town doesn't have to comply with the access regulations.

He said he thinks that strengthening the tower is less pertinent than putting in a new set of stairs, which could easily be replaced by ramps.

State law mandates that whenever a municipality alters or remodels a building beyond a certain point — changes requiring a building permit or costing more than 5 percent of the building's value — the building must be made accessible to the handicapped.

Zagzoug said he thinks that the tower work will require a building permit, and the repair work will exceed 5 percent of the building's $1,554,600 assessed value.

The board has not dealt with exterior work of this magnitude before, but even if the work is termed a repair by the town it could trigger the access regulations, Ryan says.

These changes could force a temporary closing of the building, displacing the administrative center of the town, local officials speculate.

"It's pretty hard to work around an occupied building," Zagzoug says. "It probably could be done, but it wouldn't be too practical.

Keeping the building open during the renovations would cause the costs of the work to increase, he adds. Specifications about where the contractor can work while the building is open and the extra safeguards to protect non-construction personnel would increase the costs, Zagzoug says.

"It [staying open] could be a dangerous situation," Ciarcia says. He says he thinks town officials might decide to close the building to avoid possible accidents involving Town Hall visitors.

Even before the state regulations became an issue, members of the community were working to make it easier for elderly and handicapped town residents to participate in their government.

"Any citizen of the town should have the right to go into the administrative center of their town," says Selectman Michael Saraco, who also has had difficulty climbing the stairs since his recent heart attack.

For several years, handicapped residents and some local officials have been lobbying for the installation of an elevator in Town Hall.

Vincent Carroll, a 54-year Town Meeting member who has difficulty walking, sponsored a town warrant article on the issue three years ago, but the measure was defeated.

He had asked for $5000 from general funds to study placing an elevator in the building, but on a voice vote, the measure received "a decisive 'no,' " Carroll says.

Ciarcia says that the town is planning to study the space needs of Town Hall in March, after the present budget deliberations are complete, with the elevator as "the triggering mechanism" for any interior renovations.

"If we venture into an elevator," Ciarcia says, "which we hope to do, we can't just put in an elevator. We have to look at the thing totally and develop a game plan" for the building as a whole.

"We're tuned into it and there's a lot going on," he adds, "but we haven't been able to formulate anything yet."

He said he hopes to bring a proposal before the Town Meeting this spring, he says.

"The time [for handicapped improvements] is here and we should move forward," Carroll says, "Sooner or later it will be mandated by the state, and then it will be more expensive because their specifications" will be more strict.

He said he think that town officials are developing a positive attitude toward the elevator, but if no plan is brought forward this spring, he plans to introduce a measure at the state level, mandating the change.

Chane Announces Candidacy For Planning Board

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

I, Daniel T. Chane III, would like to ask my fellow townspeople to consider my candidacy for a three-year term as a member of the Planning Board.

I was born and raised in Winchester and my understanding and appreciation of the town, its unique attributes - and problems too, is clarified by time and the perspective it gives.

I was educated at School of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, the Boston Architectural Center, and Nottingham (England) College of Art and Crafts.

I was employed for a number of years at Harvard Graduate School of Design developing structural teaching models with Professor Neal B. Mitchell prior to time spent in England, where I built architectural site models for John Piper Ltd., of London. I also worked there developing layouts for the CLASP System of building for Nottinghampshire County Council. I am presently employed in the quality control area at McCord-Winn Inc., here in Winchester.

I feel the architectural and visual orientation of my above history would bring to the town another viewpoint which would hopefully enhance the excellent way the Planning Board has guided development in Winchester since the board was created in 1915.

My knowledge of town bylaws and procedure has been gleaned slowly over the years not only through my own experience - but by that of my father who served in the town in varying capacities over many years.

I am a Precinct One Town Meeting representative - and recently was a founder of the Winchester Hospital Area Study Committee - where hospital and neighbor worked together throughout the recent period of construction - and which is still working bi-monthly on planning and related problems.

With your support on Election Day, Tuesday, March 26, you will enable me to serve you through the Planning Board with my commitment to you of good, hard work leavened with a good deal of love for our Town of Winchester and the quality of life we are privileged to have and wish to preserve through intelligent planning.

Sincerely,
Daniel T. Chane III

Murphy Announces Assessors Candidacy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

John J. Murphy, 33 Arthur st., announced his candidacy today for the Board of Assessors in the following press release:

A life-long resident of Winchester, Murphy was educated in the Winchester Public Schools. He received his degree in civil engineering from the Lowell Technological Institute and is enrolled in a degree program in business administration at Northeastern University.

Murphy has been active in town affairs, serving for seven years as a Town Meeting member and presently is an Associate Member of the Winchester Zoning Board of Appeals.

In choosing to be a candidate for the Board of Assessors, Murphy said he felt his 20 years' experience in the real estate and construction field would be beneficial for one who serves on a board responsible for making fair and equitable assessments on our real and personal properties.

Realizing the next state-mandated re-evaluation is Jan. 1, 1986, it is important that the Board of Assessors exercise fair and impartial judgment and maintain consistent assessing practices throughout the town, he said.

Murphy is proud of his Winchester heritage. He was raised at 83 Nelson st. and now resides at 33 Arthur st. with his wife, Christine, and two children, Heather, age 10, and John Jr., age 6.

Besides being active in community affairs, he is also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Winchester Lodge of Elks 1445, Winchester Knights of Columbus Council 210, the St. Francis Retreat Guild, and the United States Marine Corps Reserve.

He would appreciate residents' votes on March 26.

Deering Seeks Selectman Post

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following announcement of candidacy was received by The Star for publication. It is the policy of The Star to publish up to three releases per candidate prior to elections. Releases should be limited to 1½ typed, double-spaced pages.)

My decision to seek the position of Selectman is based on a desire to see our town grow, prosper and move forward again. As a town meeting member, I have seen how effective leadership and sound management of town affairs has a positive effect on our community life.

Unfortunately, I have also observed the effects inaction and misguided leadership have on this governing process, with its potential long-term, adverse impact to our town.

The Board of Selectmen must recognize the seriousness of their responsibilities for good, objective town governing. When executing these responsibilities, each board member must understand all aspects of the issues brought before them, to make effective decisions. They must always be cognizant of the will of the town, never allowing personal preferences to interfere with objective judgment.

As town agent to other communities and state agencies, the Board of Selectmen must always conduct themselves in the best interest of the town, being mindful of the ongoing partnership that must exist with other municipalities and agencies within the commonwealth.

We should not allow Winchester to become a "me too" community. Our townspeople do not want a town management that follows the lead of other communities. By taking positive steps forward, we will again become the standard for other towns, as a leader in community development, spirit and pride.

As a member of the Board of Selectmen, I will make a substantial contribution toward moving the town forward again. My professional background, managerial experience and involvement in various community services provides me with an excellent foundation to provide positive, unified leadership in the town governing process.

STAR SPORTS

Only The Moment

by STEVE NORTON

Running is not what you would call a mainstream sport. It barely exists on television, except in the form of an occasional 90-second fill-in for Wide World of Sports. It has not produced the category of captivating role models familiar to basketball, football, or hockey. And being different from, say, racquetball or tennis, it doesn't make for an enjoyable or gratifying sociable adult past time.

Running serves no important purpose whatsoever. In the majority of my actions, I must always think of consequences, effects, and implications. I cannot escape moral considerations and difficult decisions.

However, when I run, I am free from all this seriousness. What I do means absolutely nothing and affects nobody; it is pure play, done for itself alone. When I run, I am on vacation and I come back refreshed.

Running is selfish. There is much to be gained by keeping one part, one tiny part of our lives for ourselves; to have a space no one can enter. This is not simple, for the direction of life is seldom conducive to solitude.

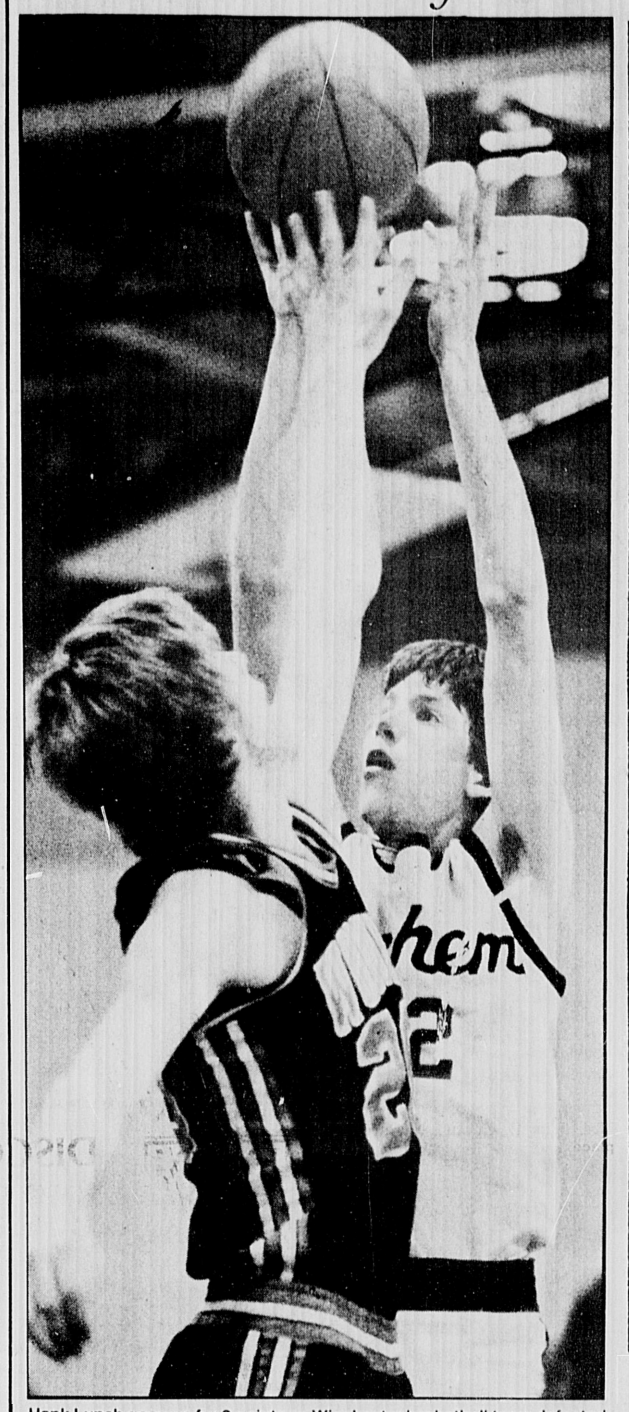

Most of my waking moments are centered on the track athletes at Winchester High School, and my responsibilities toward them. My responsibilities are of prime importance, as they should be, but yet I must have enough privacy to maintain the integrity of my independence.

When I run, I am alone. I am doing nothing for anyone else and no one can help me. Afterwards, I come eagerly to the human community and the busy entanglements of my relationships.

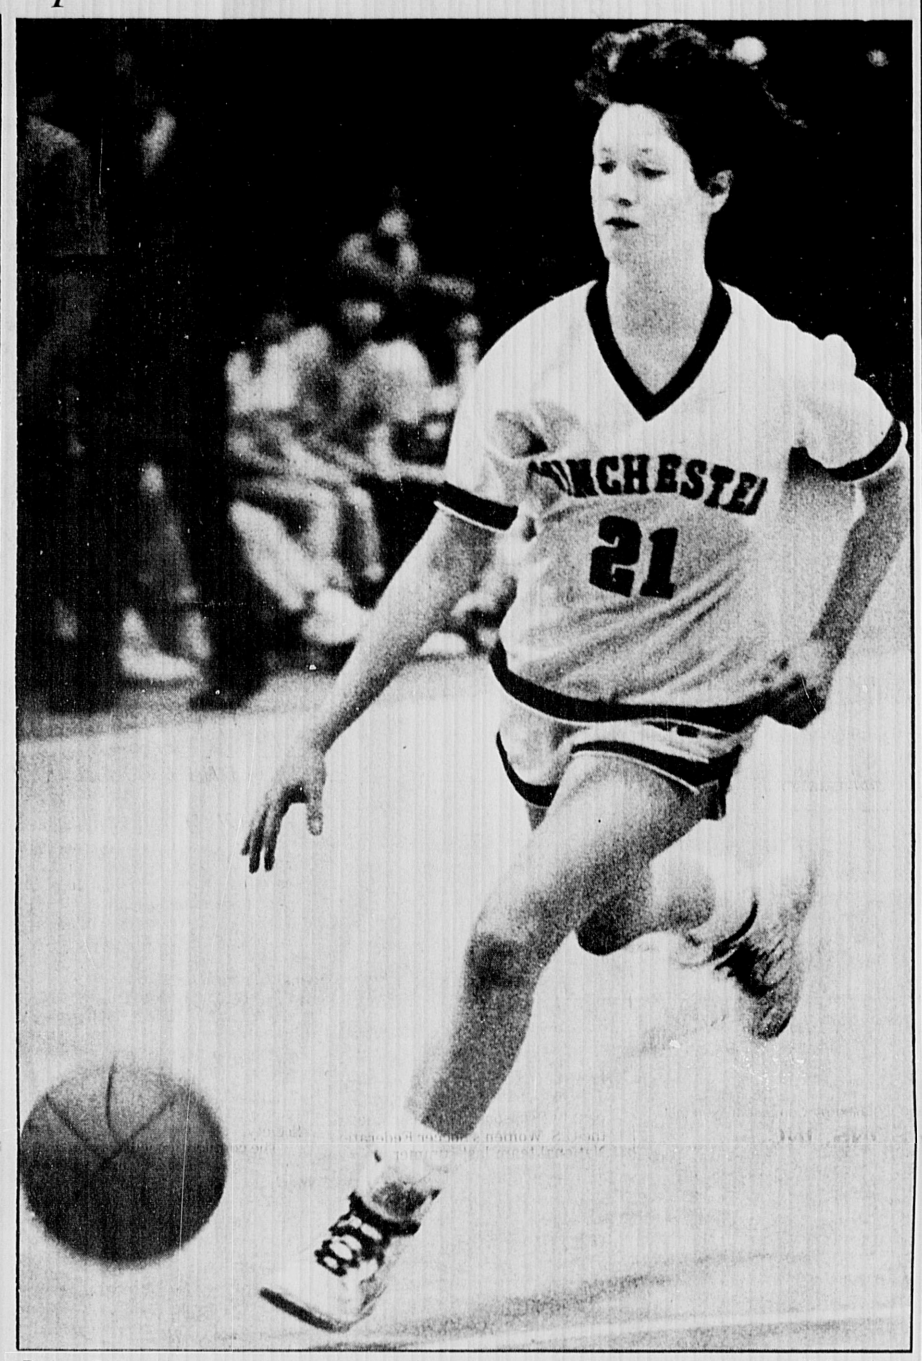

I find now more than ever I need to run. Especially because of the nature of my life, as one grows older, it loses much of its challenge and intensity. As a youth, I was constantly making discoveries, but in later years one must settle in to live with that which has been discovered. Existence is comfortable, but it is not lived at the edge it once was. There is no desire to extend oneself and little nerve to do so; I end up getting by with a moderate effort.

In running, however, I can push myself to personal limits. I can confront my own mediocrity head on and potential directly, knowing that the body will not lie. I joyfully rediscover the satisfaction of extending myself, because during a run, especially in a race, there is neither past or future, but only the moment.

Sachems Bow In Tourney

Everyone knew that facing Marblehead in the first round of the Division 2 North playoffs Tuesday would be a difficult task for Winchester High School's boys' basketball team.

The Heads squad had dominated the Northeastern Conference all year, producing an 18-2 regular season record.

Against that challange, the Sachems sent their 12-8 squad, hoping that they could slow the tempo of the game enough for their leading scorers — Hank Lynch (13 points per game), Dave DellaGrotte (12.7), Mark Shaw (7.6) and Alan Adler (7.5) — to control the game and defeat the Marblehead squad.

Unfortunately, the Marblehead twins, Kevin and Chris Buchholtz, took the ball and ran, handing Winchester an 84-62 defeat.

Kevin scored a game-high 20 points and his brother Chris added 17 points, 11 rebounds and 8 assists.

"Those two can throw 'em in from downtown," said Winchester coach David Smith before Tuesday night's game. "If you stay off them, they'll drive right by you. They have the ball 90 percent of the time. The other three players are role players."

Although the Sachems were defeated in the first round, they have a winning record as well as individual and team accomplishments to look back on. They led the league in foul shooting, including Lynch's 66-72 (83 percent), Shaw 32-41 (79 percent), and DellaGrotte 84-112 (75 percent).

Marblehead will face the winner of Friday night's Boston Latin-Dom Savio game in the second round.

Sachems Take Second Place In Division I Tourney

By CHARLIE COWEN

When the Sachem wrestling team first embarked on their 1984-85 season they knew they had an excellent team with excellent chances for unparalleled wrestling success for any Winchester or Middlesex League team.

With nine seniors, seven of whom had three or more years of varsity experience, Winchester was the team to watch and the team to beat all year.

And despite falling short (to Chelmsford by a mere 26 points) of their lofty goals of winning the State Championships, the Winchester wrestlers are true champions for they have indeed achieved unparalleled success in the sport of wrestling.

When the Sachems started the season they had one thing on their mind, as we say, "going all the way." That thought never left them during the long three-month season that culminated this past Friday and Saturday in the Division I state tournament held at Chelmsford.

On that long road to Chelmsford, Winchester continually silenced any critics and reaffirmed their own faith in themselves by going undefeated 15-0, winning the league, again, and by winning each of five tournaments they entered.

But when the time came, it just didn't seem to be in the cards for the Sachems who, though a little disappointed, proudly accepted the runner-up trophy for Division I.

In the week before Chelmsford, Winchester had easily walked away with the Division I Central Sectional Championship, but not without its disappointments.

Winchester had hoped to qualify its whole team for the States by placing everyone in the top four in their weight class. But it seems the Sachems were dealt a few unlucky cards as three Sachems ended their season at the sectionals and didn't qualify for the States.

At 114 Glenn Richmond tore ligaments in his thumb hampering his wrestling which led to a fifth-place finish and one less Sachem state competitor. Dave Carter only took sixth at heavyweight, but the big disappointment came at 121.

Alex Puchulu, a junior 121 pounder, took only fifth after being seeded second in the sectional tourney. Alex lost a controversial semifinal match to the eventual champion.

Discouraged, "Pooch" then lost to his Woburn rival whom he had defeated numerous times before, Mike Foley. That unfortunate loss may have cost the Sachems valuable points in the States, as Foley eventually wrestled his way to the finals.

Winchester had their work cut out for them if they wanted to win the States, for while they had fallen short on their sectional expectations, host team and state tourney favorite Chelmsford had a more than successful sectional. Chelmsford qualified a more-than-expected 10 wrestlers, six of whom would become number 1 seeds. Winchester had only one number 1 seed in Rob Anderson.

For Winchester to take the States they would have to have a sensational tournament while Chelmsford would have to have a poor one. But, unfortunately, from the opening rounds it was apparent this was not to be.

For the Sachems, three wrestlers were knocked out of the two-day tourney the first day.

Gregg Doherty, a sectional champion, was seeded fourth, but did not place and won only one match. Gregg was upset in the final round by a Burlington wrestler.

At 128 senior assistant captain Jay Rice ended his great career as a Sachem wrestler when he lost both his matches, one to an eventual place winner.

With the season over, Jay and Gregg have joined Beckles McCarthy and other former dieting wrestlers, resigned to inflating their bodies with food.

Charlie Cowen ended his illustrious career on the first day at Chelmsford too. In the opening round Charlie let a 7-5 lead slip away in the final minute against the number 3 seed. He eventually took third.

Charlie lost another match to a Methuen wrestler later. Unfortunately, Charlie will not get to savor the freedom of a season ended as he was admitted to Winchester Hospital two days later.

There were six other Sachems whose success at Chelmsford helped bring home the proud distinction of being the second best team in the state. (By the way, only twice has a team from other than Division I North, as is Chelmsford, won the States.)

Each of the six had outstanding tournaments and five will continue on and compete in the New Englands, including state champions at 140 Rob Anderson and at 169 Dom DiVencenzo.

Andy Lowenstein wrestled well with a 4-2 record at 107 and placed fifth. His only losses came to the second- and third-place winners and his four victories were all by pin, earning him the distinguihshed "most pins in least amount of time" trophy.

Tony Fortunati took third at 157. He lost only one match in the semifinals to the eventual state champion from Springfield Tech, Ken Huddleston.

Bruce Schwartzman at 187 had an excellent tourney. Bruce, who has only wrestled a year and a half, took fourth and will wrestle at the New Englands.

The real success story for Sachem wrestling comes in the amazing fact that Winchester had three finalists. Before 1985 the only finalist Winchester ever provided was Gary Errico in 1980 who won the States and New Englands.

Rob Anderson copped the 140-pound State Championship by defeating Ken Sheldon of Lowell 6-1. Rob was clearly the best in his weight class as he defeated the third- and fourth-place winners in previous rounds.

Joe Lawrence made the State finals at 147, but, unfortunately, ran up against perhaps the best wrestler in any weight class in the state, John Gautreau of Melrose. Gautreau later received "most outstanding wrestler of the tournament."

And at 169 a pleasant surprise in the emergence in victory by Dom DiVencenzo as State Champion. Dom avenged one of only two losses this season by beating Ban Strange of Springfield Cathedral in the finals.

Though for most of the Winchester wrestlers the season is over, five Sachems hope to do well enough to perhaps bring the New England Championship to Winchester.

Good luck, and congratulations to the Sachem wrestling team.

They Went Skiing At Crotched Mountain

February vacation was a time for many people to relax, travel, catch up on lost work or sleep and even ski as the Winchester Recreation Dept. headed off to Crotched Mountain in Francestown, N.H. Some 40 students took part in the day trip.

The cold evenings allowed the mountain to make plenty of man-made snow while the 50 degree temperature provided possibly the best skiing conditions all year.

Those who would like to join the over 200 participants who have skied this year should come to the Recreation Dept. and register for the Last Chance ski trip which will take place on Saturday, March 16, to Crotched Mountain. The cost is only $22 for lift ticket and transportation or pay for transportation, lift ticket and equipment rental. There will be a free lesson available to all who would like a few final tips for the season.

Youth Softball To Begin In Town

Winchester Youth Softball will be sponsoring the 4th Annual Softball Clinics in the Winchester High School gym, on Saturdays, March 2, 9, and 16.

The clinics aim to give hands-on experience to all players prior to the season. Each participant will have an opportunity to work on throwing, fielding, and hitting.

The major emphasis of the league is to provide instruction in the fundamentals of softball while slowly increasing the level of competition. The clinics provide time to work on basic skills in preparation for the league seasons.

Softball Umpire Clinics Are Set

The Metro Boston Amateur Softball Assn. will hold its annual umpire and rules clinics beginning in March. These clinics are designed to familiarize all players, coaches, and umpires with the rules of softball.

Each clinic is a three night session and is offered at no charge to anyone interested in softball. All persons taking the ASA umpires exam for certification are required to attend.

Pre-registration is not required. Anyone wishing additional information should contact the Metro Boston ASA office at 665-9745.

Nicholas Rosa, 100, tells a story or two to his old friend Henry Samaras and his great-grandchild, Steven Rosa.

Nicholas Rosa Celebrates His 100th

By NANCY PICK

Nicholas Rosa, 100 years old today, doesn't volunteer any magic formulas for long life.

He doesn't do yoga or eat yogurt.

He doesn't drink bourbon, take castor oil or roll in the snow on winter mornings. But he does have his secrets.

Rosa was born in 1885, yet he doesn't look a day over 80. His skin is smooth, his voice booming, his mind sharp.

Once the foreman who oversaw Winchester's road construction, Rosa had an eye as keen as a surveyor's telescope.

Now, his sight failing, he can no longer read. Instead, to pass the time, the centenarian listens to Italian operas, talks to friends and watches wrestling on TV.

Rosa has kept pace with 100 years of current events and watched the presidents come and go. But his taste in music hasn't changed much; Italian operas are still his favorite.

"Oh, hell, I never cared much for that rock music," he says.

Rosa hails from Avellino, a province outside Naples, Italy, and he arrived in the U.S. in 1892, during Grover Cleveland's second term as president. Passage from Italy cost $25.

His father, a cobbler, settled in the North End of Boston.

"When I was a kid, there was nothing but shacks," he says. As a child, Rosa's life was hardly easy. He woke up at 4 a.m. and hawked newspapers until school started.

After class, he swung his black shoeshine box over his shoulder and set out to make 10 or 15 cents before nightfall.

As a child, Rosa's life was hardly easy. He woke up at 4 a.m. and hawked newspapers until school started. After class, he swung his black shoeshine box over his shoulder and set out to make 10 or 15 cents before nightfall.

He remembers the first "horseless carriage" he ever saw, steaming down Massachusetts ave. with big wooden wheels and a bar instead of a steering wheel.

Despite the rush to see the car, Rosa was nonplussed, he recalls. His description: "Chug, chug, about two miles per hour."

After he finished 8th grade, he worked in the Cambridge courthouse as an interpreter for Italians. Then Rosa went to work for the city of Cambridge.

In 1915, he came to Winchester. "It was a one-horse town," Rosa says. He became a laborer for the Highway Dept., at a time when men swung pick-axes to dig holes and horses hauled the rubble away in tipcarts.

Working for the Highway Dept. was different in those days. Men were hired to pack the roads with snow, rather than plow them, so that sleds and sleighs would have a smooth running surface.

Overtime pay didn't exist, and highway workers were always on call—including nights Sundays and Christmas Eve.

"I've seen some pretty cold, wet sloppy times," Rosa says. "You had to be out all day and all night."

Rosa missed the World War I draft. The maximum age for a soldier was 30, and Rosa was already 31 in 1917.

He remembers Prohibition. Before the country went dry in 1920, he stocked up on beer and whiskey for his daughter's christening. He wanted to celebrate in style.

In 1927 he took over as the town's highway foreman. Two years later the great Stock Market Crash signalled the start of the Great Depression, and soon President Franklin D. Roosevelt initiated more road construction than Winchester had ever seen.

Through huge federal subsidies, Winchester hired unemployed men to turn gravel roads into highways. Men—some former professionals—took to the ditches to earn 56 cents an hour.

At times, more than 200 men pitched in for the Work Projects Administration to pave Main st., Washington st., Cross st., Pond St., and Highland ave. Rosa oversaw them all.

According to Rosa, however, a die-hard Republican, Roosevelt's Federal jobs programs had harmful side-effects. "He made a lazy nation," Rosa say. "People didn't want to work after that."

Rosa sweated long hours to pay the mortgage on his Glenwood ave. house, where he still lives with his son, James, 73, and his daughter-in-law, Elizabeth, who take care of him.

Yet he would have had a tougher battle, Rosa says, if he had stayed in Italy.

In Avellino, "We had nothing to eat," he says. "My mother went to pick a few dandelions or got snails from the fields."

"I didn't know what white bread was. I didn't know what meat was. At that time there was nothing but poverty," he says.

"It's different now," he admits. But "it was a miserable life, what I could see of it. It never enticed me to go to Italy again."

One thing Rosa misses, now that a broken hip keeps him from his former active schedule, is his garden.

He and his wife, Teresa, who passed away in 1960, used to have a nice big garden, Rosa says. "She was an old country peasant," he recalls. "She knew all about the garden."

Everyone in town grew their own vegetables, Rosa recounts, and High st. and Ridge st. were still dotted with working farms. For the winter, he and his wife used to stock up on fresh fruits and vegetables in ways that seem lost to modern folks.

In the fall, Rosa used to buy 50 heads of cabbage from a local farmer and replant them in his garden under heaps of leaves. "You'd have cabbage all winter," he says.

Plums, pears, and tomatoes were canned for the cold season. Apples were preserved too.

"We used to go to the mill and get sawdust. Then we'd put a layer of apples and a layer of sawdust, and they wouldn't spoil all winter," Rosa recounts.

People today won't go to the same trouble, Rosa says. "Why should they plant tomatoes out here in the garden when they can go to the market and stretch out their hand?"

Rosa is a fan of hot peppers, even now. "I used to go up to Boston and get a load of hot peppers and put them in a vinegar barrel for the winter," he recalls. "Still eat 'em."

Rosa denies that those peppers have brought him long life, however. Nor has ice cream, though "that's my middle name," he says jokingly.

Admittedly, longevity runs in his family. Rosa's aunt live to be 106. He has a sister who's 87 and a brother who's 93.

But the secret that keeps Rosa going, that pulls him through his times of depression and loneliness ("Old age is hell," he says) is his two great-grandsons.

Michael Rosa, 16, and Steven Rosa, 13, both phone their great-grandpa, "Puppa," every day when they get home from school in Billerica.

And, says Elizabeth Rosa, "They never hang up without saying, 'I love you.'"

The Play's The Thing

Students Will Show Town How To Succeed In Business

By CHRIS ALEXANDER

"Dear Reader: This little book is designed to tell you everything you need to know about the science of getting ahead. If you have education and intelligence and ability, so much the better. But remember that thousands have reached the top without any of these qualities..."

Armed only with this book and dreams of success, a window washer attempts to rise in the business world in the hilarious musical comedy, "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," to be performed at Winchester High on March 7, 8, and 9.

Veteran Curtain and Cue member Brian Milauskas is directing his fourth production at Winchester High. Remembered for his productions of "The Jury Room," "Pippin," and most recently "Fools," he has proven himself to be a gifted director. Milauskas, now a junior at Tufts University, is extremely excited about the show.

"One of the most promising and encouraging things for me is the tremendous talent I have to work with. Never before has there been so much potential for greatness at the high school level. Also, because of the success of "Pippin," I have set high standards for myself, and try to meet them every day."

As director, Milauskas has tried to bring a fresh style to "How To Succeed."

Pilar Pittas, also a veteran of Curtain and Cue, is choreographing "How To Succeed..."She has undergone several years of training, but since she is only a freshman at Bard College, she is able to lend a professional touch to the show, and still is close in age to the cast.

Pittas says she finds the music of "How To Succeed..." upbeat and jazzy. She comments, "I've tried to preserve the style of this music in my dancing, while at the same time, allowing for some of the slicker, more polished moves of the eighties. I'm thrilled to be working with such an enthusiastic cast."

"How To Succeed..." is a hilarious parody of big business, dealing with J. Pierrepont Finch's (Matt Williams) rise to the top. His successful climb is due not to hard work, not to any of the ancient prescriptions for success. He gets ahead by following the simple rules in a book called "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying." And it turns out that these rules work.

All along the way, our hero runs into various obstacles and overcomes them like a modern, comic Sigfried. Among his obstacles: his rival, the boss's nephew (Chris Alexander); various traps to avoid; the office wolf (Bill Stevens), the office party, the board meeting, the dangerous secretary (Denise Preston), and, of course, the big boss, J.B. Biggley, himself (Ben Keller).

Meanwhile, Rosemary (Kristen Kelly), a secretary, has noticed Finch, and confides in her friend, Smitty (Erin Boland), that she has fallen in love with him at first sight. Smitty warns Rosemary that businessmen are often too busy for romance, but Rosemary insists that she intends to marry Finch.

The men of the company soon realize the threat he poses, and it becomes a race for survival—the executives versus Finch. Will Finch's master plan backfire on him? Or will he soon become the only man ever to rise from mail room clerk to company president in just one week?

Complete with a terrific score and hilarious script, "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying," opens March at 8 p.m. in the Winchester High School Auditorium. The show runs through March 9, and tickets are available at Book Ends on Winchester Terrace, from cast members, or at the door. For reservations and information, call the High School.

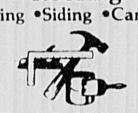

Fellowship Plans March 9 Supper

The Women's Fellowship of the First Baptist Church of Winchester will be holding a ham and bean supper on March 9 at 6 p.m. in the Church Social Hall. The public is invited; for reservations, contact the Church Office by March 6.

sakos. "We don't want to stir things up. Vandalism isn't much of a problem here and that which happens is usually in the secondary schools."

High School Principal Vincent Larocco echoed Mitsakos' comments. "Right now, I feel that vandalism has been extremely low. It's virtually nonexistent, and that's the way I'd like to see it stay. I'd hate to start it up by talking about it."

Larocco said the rash of vandalism that occurred five or six years ago, when thousands of dollars worth of windows were smashed with alarming frequency, has calmed considerably.

"Then, you used to hate to come in on the weekends and such because you were always afraid of what you might find," he recalled.

He said, as did several other school officials, that one reason vandalism might be down is because the open study system at the high school includes a more selective group of students.

Since the open study privilege is more strictly enforced, students who abuse the system are not allowed to roam free as open study students.

"It (open study) is a great way for students to work off excess energy, they can walk downtown if they need to. But students who don't act responsibly are kept in study halls where they can be supervised.

"I think that the kids who are on open study now have earned the privilege — not the right, but the privilege — to be there. Students who deserve to be given room to make their own decisions are allowed to, while those who might cause problems are off the streets."

At McCall, principal Evander French, who has been on the since this fall, said vandalism consists of "the little irritations." French was vice principal at the High School until assuming his McCall role.

"The type of thing you see here are papers strewn in the halls sometimes and some graffiti on the bathroom walls," said French. There isn't any major damage or vandalism, it's just the irritating things."

French said if any student is caught writing on walls, the student must clean up the mess after school as punishment.

If a student were caught doing more serious vandalism, such as breaking windows or setting fires, he would be suspended and ordered to pay for the damages, said French.

He was quick to point out, though, that no such incidents have been reported in recent memory.

High School's Larocco noted that "Back in 1973 and 1974 it (vandalism) was just horrible here. There were sprees where the town would spend $25,000 to $30,000 annually on vandalism-related damages."

"I think kids now are more serious about schooling and their grades, and they respect the schools' property more.

"Also, I think parents are perhaps more concerned about their students now; there's a definite trend of conservatism that affects the attitudes of kids, as well as parents."

Neither Larocco nor French could estimate the amount of time custodians might spend on cleaning up graffiti in their schools, but both said it probably amount to less than a couple hours per week.

"We try to accent the positive," said Supt. Mitsakos, offering an explanation as to why vandalism in Winchester appears to be at an all-time low.

"If we teach students to be proud of their schools, to have pride in what is theirs, then we can better influence them," he said.

"I just hope we're not opening a Pandora's Box by even talking about it. . . ."

★ Vandals (From Page 1)

Barrow added that school sports also seem to stir up the vandals' ire.

"When the wrestling team won the championship recently, somebody painted graffiti all over the Fisher Extension School sign."

He said the annual rivalry with the Woburn football team is another sports event that often gets the paint-slinging vandals into action.

Barrow said the paint is usually removed with high-pressure washers or chemical paint removers, since sand-blasting still leaves the impression of the graffiti.

Still, Barrow said overall vandalism is far less serious than it was in years past.

"You don't get the vandalism that you did a few years ago. 'Course, that could change tomorrow, too. I almost hate to say anything though; it might get them thinking."

Barrow called the arson at the Ambrose and Bartlett Schools "sheer vandalism," and questioned whether the town could prevent such acts.

"I don't know what you could attribute that type of vandalism to; and how can you know how to deal with something unless you really know what you are dealing with?"

Police Chief John P. McHugh said police try to combat vandalism by regularly patroling the town to thwart the mischief.

He said generally vandalism throughout the town, including in the schools, is not a major problem. It consists of minor irritations, he said, citing complaints similiar to Barrow's.

"School vandalism now mainly consists of minor things," said the chief. "Somebody's been cutting down the fence behind Muracco School, apparently to make room for trail bikes or something."

He said vandalism at the High School, which is usually minor, occurs mostly while school is in session.

"You can deal with the little stuff," added McHugh. "But then you have the things like Salem, where you have a rampage, an orgy of violence. That's the type of vandalism that is frustrating."

He said he personally feels that if people accept acts of vandalism, there will likely be more of them. The bouts of destruction run cyclically, he said, and it basically reflects parents' attitudes.

"It's a matter of respect. If we send out the message that we aren't going to accept vandalism, that we expect people to respect another's property, then eventually people get the message," he said.

'You Don't Have The Vandalism That You Did A Few Years Ago.'
F. Barrow

And he said what several others have said: vandalism knows no social or financial bias. "It doesn't matter whether you're rich or poor, it cuts both ways," he said.

Still, he admitted, sometimes the wealthier culprits figure that their parents will always get them out of the jam.

Often, he said, an affluent parent will try to get an insurance company to pick up the tab, or try to deny that his youngster is guilty of wrongdoing.

"The parents don't want to admit that their kids did anything wrong," he said.

"Still, I don't care whether a parent is a doctor or a lawyer or a regular guy, the parent is crushed when a kid gets involved in a crazy thing.

"It doesn't make any difference. I've seen all kinds of parents upset because their kid gets in trouble."

around that people don't know about: for people named Smith, or for Medford residents to attend Tufts," he says.

"I ask somebody where they want to go to school, and I send them to the financial aid office," Ronayne adds. "They know about any special funds their school has, and it's a buyers' market — all the schools are in the recruiting mode — so almost any financial aid office is willing to talk to you about it."

All sources of money break down into three basic categories: what is earned (or saved); what has to be paid back (loans); and what doesn't (grants and scholarships).

"In general, if you can save $1 before a child begins college, it will be worth $2 in loans," when long-term borrowing costs are calculated, says Jerrold Gibson, a Belmont-based consultant.

Gibson's firm, Pacesetter, specializes in family financial planning for college costs.

"It's easier to handle if you look at the cost over several years, on a monthly basis, instead of in one lump," he says.

Gibson urges people to begin planning for college expenses early. But he knows many have not: "It's never too late to plan — at least, not until [college] graduation rolls around," he says.

Because everybody is trying for the same limited funds, getting help means meeting deadlines, says Anthony DiBiasi, head of the Winchester High School guidance staff.

Some deadlines are coming soon, like the March 1 deadline for applying for state scholarships. Others — like financial aid deadlines for individual schools — may have already passed.

Even schools without stated deadlines encourage early applications.

"We have rolling financial aid — that means we give it out until the money is spent," says Pam Gilligan,

Bartlett Elementary School principal Norine Casey is still trying to cope with her school's recent classroom firebombing.

Because the room was gutted, students now must attend regular classes in a small former art room.

Vandalism, she knows, is a costly, disruptive problem.

Lorna Phillips, a social worker in Winchester's public schools, said it is difficult to pinpoint the "typical vandal." However, she said, certain factors should be considered when describing those who might commit such destruction.

"There's a difference between the vandalism that might occur in Boston as opposed to what might happen in Winchester. Locally, vandalism is down considerably, anyhow.

"But the type of things that happen here, even years ago when there was more happening, stems from different feelings than with the urban kid.

"There is more a feeling of lashing out at the authority or symbol of authority that makes a city kid feel like he can't improve his lot in life. But here, there's more the feeling of pressure.

"Kids today have all kinds of pressures that didn't exist before: the threat of living in a nuclear age, more pressure to achieve, family mobility and weakened family ties.

"That's not to say that every kid whose parents divorce will be destructive, but those are just some of the pressures," she added. "This is a very anxious age for youngsters to be growing up in."

Meanwhile, school officials try to cope with the backlash.

"I'd advise anybody not to take outdoor lighting for granted. At the time of the fire, we had been going without one outdoor light because the bulb was broken.

"Maybe if we had had it working, it might have made the vandals think twice," said Casey.

The longtime principal said the incident far exceeds the fire and vandalism of six years ago. In that incident, two local teens were arrested and charged with setting fires that caused $800 in damage in the school, which was then located at 83 Church st.

Hundreds of dollars worth of books and other teaching materials were lost in the recent fire, along with some of the students' and teachers' belongings.

"The insurance people were here to inspect the damage and they say it'll be around $10,000," said Casey. "But it's hard to put a dollar figure on some things," she added.

"Oh, we're no where near ready to get back into that (recently burned) classroom. The cleaning company said they'll have to scrub the place down at least four or five more times to get rid of the soot and ashes," said Casey.

"It's disruptive; every day there are people in here cleaning up and the soot is just everywhere."

Meanwhile, she said, police still have no leads about who may have committed the crime.

Police have said they have not determined whether the July firebombing of the Ambrose School library is linked to the Bartlett incident.

"We really don't know, but it appears they were isolated incidents," said Police Chief John P. McHugh.

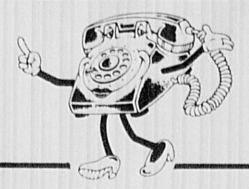

Casey said sixth, seventh and eighth grade students were shown the burned-out room, mainly to teach them about the effects of such destruction.

"They were overwhelmed, simply overwhelmed," said Casey. "We didn't take the little ones in there, but it was really effective with the older ones. We had some good discussion with the students about it."

says Chris Perry, director of financial aid at Suffolk University.

"I don't recommend search firms," agrees Pam Gilligan, financial aid director at Regis College. "More often than not, they ask you to pay $25 or more, and they will provide at least five sources of aid — not scholarships, sources. Then they let you know about federal and state sources that are available to anyone, free.

"I'm not saying everyone is disreputable," Gilligan adds. "But I have not come across one of those services that gives students good, accurate information — and I've given my student aides the money to apply, to see what they get back. If I ever did come across a good one, I'd certainly recommend it."

"We do not advise students to use those computerized services," says DiBiase. "You know, we found out they're turning up the Winchester Scholarship Foundation as a source — because we've been getting calls from out-of-town — and it's only open to graduates of Winchester High School or Northeast Voke, or special education students the school district sent elsewhere."

Arlington's Town Treasurer John Bilafer says he has received similar inquiries about that town's "residents only" scholarship.

And Curtis, who conducts workshops on financial aid each year both at Tufts and in Winchester, scoffs at the search firms' claims they will uncover "unclaimed scholarships."

"There's no proof at all that there are millions of dollars in scholarships that go unclaimed," he says firmly. "It's very hard to discover all the different private scholarships, and there are many small organizations and trusts run by banks that are poorly publicized. Word gets around locally.

"I tell families to read the guides, look at the bulletin boards in their school — and we tell them of any money we have available at Tufts, or we know of on a national basis," he adds. "I also remind them to inquire at the personnel offices of their company, and their union offices — they're typically large donors, but only for their own people.

"For the most part, I think students who hope to come to Tufts are capable of doing their own reading and research," Curtis says drily.

Sources

Rifling through the files at the guidance department of one school turned up:

- Listings of 20 statewide scholarships from the Sons of Italy — some for members' children, some not;
- "Merit" scholarships from schools like Alfred University in New York — an automatic $3000 if a student's average were 90 or better, and SATs are "above average";
- Scholarships for graphic arts, dance, music, bio-chem, business and forestry majors.

There are two federal sources: Pell Grants, which can bring a student up to $1,900; and Supplementary Educational Opportunity Grants, which can bring in $6,000 over four years — but no more than $2,000 in any one year. But students can't just apply for these.

"Once a student's need has been determined by the standard formula, it's up to the institutional aid officer to make up their aid package, of a combination of loans and grants," including Pell and SEOG grants, explains Curtis. "In general, the idea for most of the federal programs is to give the most aid to the neediest students."

There are state scholarships that students may qualify for, too; in 1983, more than 45,000 students received up to $1,320, although many received less. They are based on need.

To apply, families should file the Mass. Financial Aid Form (MFAF) — available at their guidance department — instead of the standard FAF.

Colleges have their own funds: the Assn. of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts says its members gave out more than $40 million in aid in 1983.

And students should not ignore the Winchester Scholarship Foundation (WSF), a 35-year-old coalition of businesses, service organizations, groups like the teachers' association and individuals.

Last year, WSF gave out more than $60,400 in aid to nearly 50 students, averaging $1,500 each, according to chairman Nancy Clarke.

Seniors should apply by March 1 — that's tomorrow. College students seeking renewal of their scholarships have until May 1.

"Winchester scholarships are renewable through senior year, and are all based on need," says WHS' DiBiase, who often sits in for the principal to help the awards committee with questions on students' records.

"But they also look at students' grades, their activities, where they're going to school," DiBiase notes. "Because we do it locally, we can do it with a heart; we're not machines."

Only five people — the four on the awards committee, and Grant Curtis, who donates his time as a consultant — see the students' applications and records, Clarke says.

"Everything is confidential," she says firmly. "Each student has his own file, which the chairman keeps, and turns over to the next chairman. After four years, the file is destroyed."

Scholarships range from $200 to $4,000, Clarke says. "The low-end awards mainly have to do with certain schools which take away $1 of what they've given you for every $1 in aid we give; they usually allow you about $200 [without penalties]."

(Several schools in the area have that policy, DiBiase says; MIT is one. Other schools, like Boston University, have shifted their scholarships to attract the best students: "There are kids being offered free rides who don't need a penny.")

Not every student who gets a WSF scholarship is an "A" student, she adds. "We try to give as many kids as possible the opportunity to get to college, to see if they can meet the challenge."

There are a few students — one or two a year, Clarke says — who choose schools with costs far beyond their means, and get little or no aid from the college. "Even with a huge scholarship from us, they could never afford it; it's kind of difficult, but we can't help that kind of student," Clarke acknowledges.

The number of applications was down last year, Clarke mentions.

Families in town sometimes hesitate to apply for WSF scholarships, thinking they won't qualify, DiBiase observes.

★ College

director of financial aid at Regis College. "One of the worst things I have to tell students is, 'Yes, you qualify for financial aid — but we have no money left.' "

Getting Started

The first place a high school senior should go for help is the guidance department, for forms, references, and advice.

Besides stocking college catalogues and listing scholarship opportunities, guidance departments often have special materials.

Arlington High School, for example, has a computer program that lets students get a good idea of what kind of aid they may qualify for. The program was a gift of Shawmut Banks.

"You need tax return information, but it will tell you if you may qualify for a Pell grant or other aid," explains Janet Scalese of the guidance department.

Another good source of information is the just-opened Higher Education Information Center, in the Boston Public Library in Copley Square.

"We have four trained counselors, and we can handle questions about admissions, financial aid forms, or federal and state loan programs," says the center's director, Ann Coles. The center has a toll-free line: 1-800-442-1171.

The service is free. And it's open at hours working parents can reach them: from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays throughThursdays; 9 to 5 Fridays and Saturdays; and 2 to 6 on Sundays.

Parents who want to know how their choices might affect their monthly budget may want to use a financial planning service, like Gibson's Pacesetter.

The Pacesetter service isn't free — but, for less than $100, the firm will do computer projections of college costs, not just for one child, but all the children in the family.

The system allows for inflation — in salaries as well as college tuitions — and, if circumstances change within the year, or parents want to know what a different option will mean, Pacesetter will rerun the data, at no extra charge.

Getting It Down On Paper

Nearly everything that goes into making up a student aid package — except earnings — is based on the Financial Aid Form (FAF) from the College Scholarship Service in Princeton, N.J. Copies are available from high school guidance offices.

"The FAF is the first step to financial aid," says Regis' Gilligan, who is also a member of the Mass. Assn. of Student Financial Aid Administrators (MASFAA). "It lets the students apply for [federal] Pell Grants, Mass. state scholarships, and state and federal programs administered through the colleges — like work-study — as well as college-controlled scholarships."

It's also important in determining who qualifies for federally backed Guaranteed Student Loans, known in this state as HELP loans.

The FAF can be filed as early as Jan. 1, and many of those The Star spoke with say the earlier it is filed, the better.

"The money available for student aid is limited," warns Beth Forbes, public relations director for AICUM. First come, first served.

Information on the form is based on the parents' tax returns and any money the student has to contribute in savings or earnings.

Although many do not file tax returns until the IRS' April 15 deadline nears, that is not a good strategy for parents of college-bound students, Forbes says.

Some parents object to submitting the tax information. But all financial aid data is kept confidential, say the college financial aid officers.

"We can't offer students anything based on financial need without that document in hand," Gilligan warns.

The centralized FAF form helps colleges and banks obtain basic information about a student's needs and abilities to pay college costs.

"The financial aid formulas are uniform for public and independent colleges across the country," says AICUM's Jim True. "It's fair, in that sense.

"The FAF calculates the family's resources — including what the student is expected to earn in the summer and during the school year — and estimates the family's need," he explains.

But the system isn't perfect, and sometimes the colleges, banks or scholarship administrators ask applicants to fill out additional forms.

Fill them out as completely as possible, they urge — even if some of the questions do seem repetitious.

"The hardest thing about determining who gets what aid is getting complete information," says Harvard's Miller. "The more we have — tax returns, corporate returns, letters of explanation if you expect your income to drop because of a retirement, or other bills or expenses the family has that don't show up on the FAF — the better picture we get."

(Next week: the lowdown on loans and local scholarships.)

Clark & White For All Your Automobile Leasing Needs

If, like so many Americans, you are opting to lease rather than buy a new car or truck, the place to do your leasing is Clark & White's Leasing, located at 777 Washington st. in Newton.

Clark & White Leasing leases Lincoln-Mercurys and all other makes and models of cars and trucks.

Manager Bill Vahey and Assistant Lease Manager Bryan Mulvaney are available to help you find a leasing plan that fits your needs and explain the benefits of leasing as opposed to buying.

"One of the advantages of leasing is that a customer makes one payment per month which includes everything from insurance and maintenance to escise tax and sales tax," explains Mulvaney. "When you lease, sales taxes can be paid over a period of time, not up front."

Everything from oil changes to rotating tires and engine maintenance is taken care of for you making car-trouble headaches virtually obsolete.

All maintenance is taken care of by Clark & White's extensive service department and is part of the lease payment. "The only thing a customer pays for is gas," Mulvaney explains. "In other words they are paying just for the portion of the car they are using."

Clark & White also handles all the accounting and bookkeeping involved in leasing, including insurance, lease payments, and taxes. One easy payment at a set rate covers all bills relating to the lease.

To start you off, Clark & White Leasing has a wide variety of Lincoln-Mercurys in stock ready to be leased and can obtain any make or model a customer might want.

Visit Clark & White Leasing to lease any make or model car or truck or to receive more information on the benefits of leasing. Clark & White is open Monday - Friday, 9-5.

Daily rentals are also available.

The Winchester Star

OBITUARIES

John G. Trump

John George Trump

Dr. John G. Trump, Professor Emeritus of Electrical Engineering at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and founder of the High Voltage Engineering Corp. in Burlington, died at his home in Winchester on Feb. 21. He was a resident of Winchester for 44 years.

Known particularly for his poineering developments of machine sources of high-energy radiation, and for the application of radiation in nuclear science, medicine, and industrial technology, Dr. Trump also made significant contributions to the transmission of high-voltage power, to the science of electrical insulation, and to the military application of microwave radar during World War II.

He was awarded the King's Medal for Service in 1947 by George VI of England, and was given the Presidential Citation by President Truman in 1948, for his wartime work in microwave technology.

Born in 1907 to Elizabeth and Frederick Trump of Woodhaven, N.Y., he received the degrees of bachelor of science in electrical engineering from the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn in 1929, master of science in physics from Columbia University in 1931, and the doctor of science from MIT in 1933. In 1935 he was married to Elora Gordon Sauerbrun of Jamaica, N.Y., who died in February 1983.

After serving in England as director of The Brittish Branch of the MIT Radiation Laboratory during World War II, he returned to MIT and to his work in electrical insulation and high-voltage technology. He worked closely with Dr. Robert J. Van de Graaff in the development of electrostatic generators as sources of high-energy particle beams and radiation.

With a group that included Van de Graaff and Karl Taylor Compton, he founded the High Voltage Engineering Corp. in 1946 to manufacture these generators for use in nuclear research, industrial processing, radiography, and medical therapy, in the treatment of cancer.

For his contributions to radiation therapy, Dr. Trump was presented in 1982 with the Gold Medal of the American College of Radiology, of which he was an honorary fellow. At the time of his death, Dr. Trump was engaged in an innovative project using high-energy electrons to disinfect municipal sewage-wastes.

In additon to serving since 1974 as Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Lahey Clinic Foundation, Dr. Trump was a Life Trustee of the Boston Museum of Science, a member of the National Academy of Engineering, and a fellow of the American Physical Society, of the Institute of Engineering, and a fellow of the American Physical Society, of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, and of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

His honors include the Lamme Medal (1960) for his contribution to electrical science and the Power-Life Award (1973) for his work in the medical application of high-energy radiation, both given by the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers; the Public Service Award (1963) of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn; the Holmes Lecturer (1963) of the New England Roentgen Ray Society; the Engineering Societies of New England Award (1967); and the Whitehead Memorial Lecturer (1977) of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. He was a 1983 recipient of the National Medal for Science.

Dr. Trump's sister, Elizabeth Trump Walter, died in 1962. He is survived by his brother, Frederick C. Trump of Jamaica, N.Y.; his three children: John Gordon Trump of Watertown, Christine Trump Philip of Pittsfield, and Karen Trump Ingraham of Los Alamos, N.M., and by six grandchildren: Thomas John and Sylvia Anne Trump, Katherine Louise and John Nicholas Sanborn Philip, and Elizabeth Anne and John Michael Ingraham.

Town Clerk's Office Urges Residents To Complete State Census Forms Soon

If the phone rings, and it's the Town Clerk's office asking for census information, listen up.

It could mean a lot to the town: representation in the state legislature, eligibility for state and federal money, even the number of liquor licenses the town is allowed to grant.

It could also mean a lot to the person getting the call: not answering the state census carries some stiff penalties, according to state officials.

"For anyone who refuses to give full and true information, there are severe penalties," says Kevin O'Malley, chief supervisor of the state census.

It's a $500 fine or a year's imprisonment for refusing to answer the census, O'Malley says; recalcitrant residents can be arrested and hauled into court.

Giving false or incomplete information can bring a $500 fine or six months in the county House of Corrections, he adds.

There's a reason the state treats the matter so seriously.

"People don't realize it; they think this is just another annual census, but this is a very important year," O'Malley explains. "It's not just that the election districts are determined by this census; for the next five years, the federal government will use these figures, until the [1990 federal census] is done, to hand out its money."

So, from January on, O'Malley explains, state census officials ride herd on the 351 communities, aiding less experienced Town and City Clerks, and making the task as easy as possible for those who know the routine.

"One or two towns — Blackstone, Royalton — have already completed their census-taking," O'Malley notes. "But some have just sent out their forms, like Worcester — which is the second largest city in the state.

"Of course, Bob O'Keefe has been taking the census in Worcester longer than I've been on earth, so I'm sure he knows what he's doing," O'Malley adds. "But there are always some towns, where even if they start Jan. 1, they aren't going to be finished on time."

Winchester, with 75 percent of its forms returned already, is not in bad shape when compared with other communities in the state, according to O'Malley.

But Town Clerk Carolyn Ward wishes the numbers were better.

"We got an 'A' from the regional supervisor who was out to see us on Friday," reports Ward. "That's compared to some other communities — for example, Woburn — which have had so much trouble getting their forms printed that they haven't even mailed them out yet."

But, she points out, 25 percent of the town's residents still have not responded to the census.

Ward would like to be able to report 100 percent response within the next two weeks, without having her staff resort to personal calls to procrastinators.

Residents who haven't filled out the form can drop it in the mail, or in locked collection boxes in the Town Hall entryway.

If getting out of the house is a problem, Ward says, residents may call in with the information during business hours (9 to 5 weekdays).

If the last 25 percent of the forms don't come in soon, Ward and her staff will be staying late each night and coming in on Saturdays to phone those who have not submitted their census forms.

The census asks the standard questions about all the residents at a given address.

But there are some changes this year that residents should notice.

The state, for the first time, is following the federal census rules, and counting people where they spend most of the year, not where they declare their legal residence to be.

That means college students who live away from home are counted in the town their college is in, not at home with Mom and Dad; military personnel are listed at their base; prison inmates will be counted as residents of the town where the institution is located.

The change, the result of a 1978 referendum, may cause some confusion, O'Malley says.

And the new procedure could result in some shifts in population that will cause realignments in the state legislature, and changes in the way state and federal aid is distributed.

So, they're checking and double-checking the process, to avoid squabbles when the results are announced.

"Sometimes we'll do a street audit, to be sure everything is properly done — especially in communities with schools [colleges]," O'Malley explains.

That means random surveys of blocks, to verify the information returned on the census forms, he says.

If census takers can't get into an apartment complex to verify the count, they notify the landlord or building manager, O'Malley says.

Then it's up to the landlord or apartment manager to make sure the information is delivered. Non-compliance can lead to enforcement of the state penalties, he says.

For the most part, O'Malley expects the census to go smoothly.

Ward doesn't like to mention the penalties too often, either; she'd rather people cooperate on the basis of being good citizens.

So, Winchester residents still have a few days to be one of the good guys, and send in their forms, before Ward and her crews get out their phone listings.

But if residents know what's good for them — and the town — they'll stand up and be counted. Quickly and accurately.

Bridal Preparations For Beauty

By Karen Caldwell

Everyone knows it's the little things that count — especially on one of the biggest days of a woman's life. Neglecting those little things can leave a bride harried and haggard even as she says, "I do."

With so many details to keep track of — the caterer, florist and in-laws — it's difficult for a bride to steal the extra moments she needs to care for herself. But this is the time she needs it most.

Three months is plenty of time to shape up, even if you've been neglecting yourself and thinking only of the celebration. To begin, stand naked in front of a full-length mirror and take stock of yourself from head to toe.

— Hair. Whether veil, wreath or hat, your headpiece will be the crowning touch, so your hair should be your crowning glory. Decide on any major styling changes months in advance of the wedding by arranging a conference with a hairdresser. If your hair is not in perfect shape, begin with a good trim to remove all split ends and begin conditioning once a week.

European women claim the best conditioner is a once-a-month hot oil treatment. Add an egg yolk and two teaspoons of rum to a half-cup of warm olive oil. Spread mixture over hair and scalp. Wrap head in hot towels and leave them on for at least an hour. Shampoo and rinse several times to remove all the residue. Then dry and luxuriate in the extra shine and body.

— Complexion. If you don't have the glow of a blushing bride, begin now to acquire it. Consult a dermatologist for any major problems, then schedule a facial at a reputable salon. For best results, plan another three weeks before the wedding.

— Hands and feet. Even the saddest-looking nails can look great with consistent care over a three-month period. And for soft hands and feet, massage petroleum jelly into them once a week before going to bed. Be sure to wear absorbent cotton socks and gloves so you won't ruin the sheets.

— Figure. Do your best to cut down on all foods with empty calories — ice cream and pastries, oily salad dressings, heavily marbled meat. Replace them with fresh fruits, vegetables and whole grains and drink eight glasses of water per day. Begin, or continue, an all-over exercise routine either at home using books or cassettes or at a gym or health club.

Stress causes some people to eat, drink or smoke too much — don't let yourself get caught in that trap. When you've had all you can take of the caterer, florist, mother-in-law-to-be or anything else, go out and exercise. A run around the block or 20 laps in the pool will put you in a better frame of mind and also improve your figure.

— Relaxation. Another way to relax and beautify when the pressures and excitement get to be too much — a luxurious bath. With so many people and details demanding your attention, this is a great way to focus entirely on yourself, according to the makers of Caress Body Bar.

Set the proper mood. Unplug the phone, turn on soft music and light a candle. Fill the tub with lukewarm water. Then get in and use a folded towel as a pillow and place cool wet cotton pads over eyes. Use the time to beautify — remove rough skin from elbows, knees and feet with a pumice stone, apply cuticle cream and push back cuticles, moisturize your skin. Don't defeat the purpose of your beauty bath by soaking for too long. Staying in the bath for more than 20 minutes can leave your skin feeling and looking dry and taut.

— Clothing. Most likely you've had a good idea of how you and your wedding party were going to dress since you were a little girl. But once you've made the final decisions on dresses, there's still more to consider — accessories.

You may want to give your bridesmaids and matron of honor a simple necklace, bracelet or earrings as a wedding party gift. Remember, though, whatever jewelry is worn, it should be simple.

Look for coordinating hosiery. Even if the dresses are long, a peek of lace or a hint of color at the ankle will add just the right touch. The latest styles are gossamer-fine sheers with a hint of coloring or embroidered flowers or dots rambling up the sides. Waist-to-toe lace styles also are popular, according to spokesmen for Du Pont, makers of the Lycra spandex fiber used in many stockings.

Leaf-Tearing Divorce

In some parts of India, divorce is very simple. Man and wife publicly tear a betel leaf in two and address each other as "mother" and "father." This signifies that they are divorced. That's all there is to it.

Diamonds Unique

Diamonds are said to be the only gems composed of no more than one element. Diamonds are crystallized pure carbon.

Cake Hit The Bride

In ancient Rome, the cake was broken over the bride's head after a wedding. The guests then gathered up the crumbs as good-luck tokens.

Women In Norway Skipping Weddings

Four of 10 Norwegian women between the ages of 20 and 30 have a common-law marriage behind them, and this type of union is increasing steadily, the Norwegian government reports.

Every sixth firstborn child in Norway is illegitimate.

Thai Marry Only In Even Months

Weddings in Thailand take place in even-numbered months because marriages involve pairs.

The Thai believe a marriage in an odd-numbered month, except the ninth month, means that one of the partners won't live long.

Elizabeth's Caters To The Bride

There are clouds of ivory laced draped in the window of a shop called Elizabeth's on Church st., along with a pink silk organza bridesmaid dress.

Inside, there is more lace and satin and taffeta, along with gleaming mirrors and a hidden rack full of swirling white dresses meant for the woman Elizabeth's caters to — the bride.

From the heart-shaped chocolates that await the visitor, to the various books and magazines depicting different bridal styles, there is a sense of newness and hope and romance.

"This is just something I've always wanted to do," "I used to be a bridal consultant, for many years, and I just love working with brides."

"It's such a happy occasion," she continues. "I tell the girls who come in looking for a dress that it's their special day and they have to love what they buy. And I want to help them make their dream wedding come true."

The dresses Elizabeth has are not all on display in the shop. Most are kept in the back, behind closed curtains. But Elizabeth will bring different dresses out to show upon request.

"You really can't know what you want until you begin to try dresses on," Elizabeth explains. "Some girls come in looking for an off-the-shoulder dress and end up with a high-necked gown."

Elizabeth, who says that most brides spend an average of $1,000 for their dress, including the veil, alterations, and "other details," explains that her own prices will range from moderate to "the most expensive."

Elizabeth will also coordinate the mother of the bride, and bridesmaids as well for the total bridal party. There are cocktail dresses and other outfits for special occasions aside from weddings.

"In the springtime, we'll also be catering to the proms. Now you can find that perfect prom dress right here in Winchester."

Elizabeth is as excited by that idea as she is about having her own shop. "Winchester Center is so lovely — we can really use a shop like this with something different and unusual," she says. "We could also use some more restaurants and perhaps an antique shop,"

The town is finally "getting off on the right track," according to Elizabeth. "I'm optimistic about the future of the center," she says. "I hope that it will become a place where people come to shop and have lunch — you know, make a day out of it."

And during that day, Elizabeth would hope that people would drop into her Bridal Boutique.

Symbol Of Love Is Serious Investment

By Monica Perez

You've just decided to get married — one of the biggest decisions of your life — and now you must make a serious investment decision. You need to select engagement and wedding rings.

It's hard to be completely objective. After all, the rings are symbols of your love. However, purchasing a diamond still is basically a consumer decision. You should do the same kind of research and comparison shopping as you would when buying any other high-ticket item.

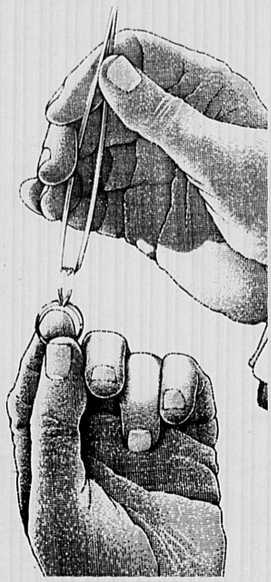

Buying diamonds and other precious stones without the help of a trained gemologist can be confusing — it can be difficult for the average consumer to price jewelry because of the wide range of quality in stones, settings and styles.

Many shoppers have had to learn the hard way that the place and person they buy from is as important as what they buy. It's a good idea to choose a jeweler before choosing the gem. Over the years, more than half of all Americans have learned to rely on a neighborhood jewelry store to provide them with good quality merchandise and fair pricing.

"You don't need a special education to be a smart diamond shopper," says Robert Spratford, president of the American Gem Society, a 50-year-old trade association of jewelers dedicated to consumer protection and gemological education. "But there are a few simple factors that can help you select a diamond that's best for you. We call them the four c's: cut, color, clarity and carat weight."

— Cut. Even the biggest diamond will have less value if it's cut incorrectly. A diamond is actually a series of 58 sides or facets that move light through the stone in a precise path. If the stone is cut at the wrong angle, all the sparkle and fire will leak out of the diamond and never reach your eye.

In a social setting, there's an easy way to tell who's wearing high-quality diamonds. Spratford offers this suggestion:

"When you go to a party, even in dim light, there will be some diamonds that can be seen glittering across the room. Those are the ones that are cut correctly. Most stones today are cut for size, but it doesn't matter how big they are. If they don't sparkle from far away, they're not correctly cut diamonds."

— Color. While there are extremely rare diamonds that are very valuable because they have a blue tinge or other unusual color, such as pink or canary yellow, absence of color is what makes most diamonds valuable. Diamonds naturally occur in a range of colors from crystal clear to yellow to dark brown.

The American Gem Society has developed its own method of grading diamonds, with zero to three being the best colorless stones. A three-to-five rating means the stone has a tinge of yellow and is not considered as valuable. Diamonds that fall into the five-to-10 category are distinctly yellow to brown, and they fall in the lowest price range.

— Clarity. The third "c" is clarity, meaning any marks, bubbles, clouds or scratches inside or on the surfaces of the diamond. Any flaw will have some impact on the value and beauty of the stone, but the impact depends on size of the imperfection.

"If you can look at a diamond without any magnification and see a fracture or inclusion (flaw)," comments Spratford, "you can immediately tell that the passage of light through the diamond will be reduced, and so will its brilliance and price. But if the stone is magnified 10 times and the mark is barely visible, the value of the gem will be reduced, but it will still have the fire and sparkle of a good stone."

— Carat weight is the last, and least important, "c." The price of a diamond is determined, per carat, but its cut, color and clarity. A smaller, higher quality stone will be worth much more than a larger, badly cut or yellow-hued diamond.

No matter what size diamond you select, Spratford recommends buying diamonds and precious gemstones from a reliable and trusted jeweler who has the gemological training it takes to assess true value of fine gems.

For more information on buying diamonds and jewelry, write to the American Gem Society, Department G, 5901 W. Third St., Los Angeles, CA 90036 for a free consumer kit.

Average Wedding Costs Over $4,000

The traditional wedding is back in style these days, and that takes big bucks.

The average cost of taking a walk down the aisle is now more than $4,000, according to Bride's magazine, which puts the average cost of a reception at $2,000.

The traditional rule that the bride's family pays for most everything has blurred somewhat, and often the groom's family pitches in.

"One way to cut costs," said one bridal consultant, "is to have the wedding reception in a church and serve basically cake and punch. It's a lot less expensive and it's still acceptable."

$348 For Bridal Gown

One of the major costs of a wedding is the bridal gown. Bride's magazine found in a recent survey that the average cost of the bride's gown is about $400. Most veils, which are extra, cost more than $100. Bridesmaids' dresses easily can cost $70 to $180 each.

Trousseau Should Reflect Your Style

If you're a prospective bride, put together your trousseau with clothing practical enough to be worn after the wedding.

In selecting honeymoon clothes, keep two things in mind: Choose things that coordinate with at least one other piece you already own.

Look for things that can be easily washed and dried and don't need ironing.

Flowers — Most Romantic Accessory

By Carol Roberts

How can a bride select flowers that will give the perfect look for her wedding?

"The first step in choosing wedding flowers," says florist Barbara Haggard, "is to find a good florist — one who has been recommended or whose window display you particularly admire." Then, with his skilled help, you can work out answers to the following questions:

— What is your budget? The florist can tell you which flowers will be "in-season," and therefore less expensive, at the time of your wedding. Some wedding favorites — gladiolus, baby's breath, roses, mums, carnations, stephanotis, gardenias, cymbidium orchids — are available year-round.

The florist can help you sort out your priorities. For instance, if you have your heart set on a long, flowing cascade of orchids for your bouquet, you might have to cut costs in other areas.

Besides the bride's bouquet, you'll need bouquets for your honor attendant and bridesmaids, boutonnieres for all the men, corsages for both mothers, and flowers to decorate the ceremony and reception sites.

— What flowers will best complement your wedding? Give your florist a description of your dress and your bridesmaids' dresses so he can suggest bouquets that harmonize in shape and style.

Besides the classic nosegay or cascade, you could carry a single long-stemmed flower or a loosely tied armful of blooms.

Also, bring along fabric swatches to give the florist an idea of your color scheme. There are so many different flowers, in every hue from dazzling pink to soft sea-blue, that you'll find the perfect ones to match or complement the dresses your attendants will wear.

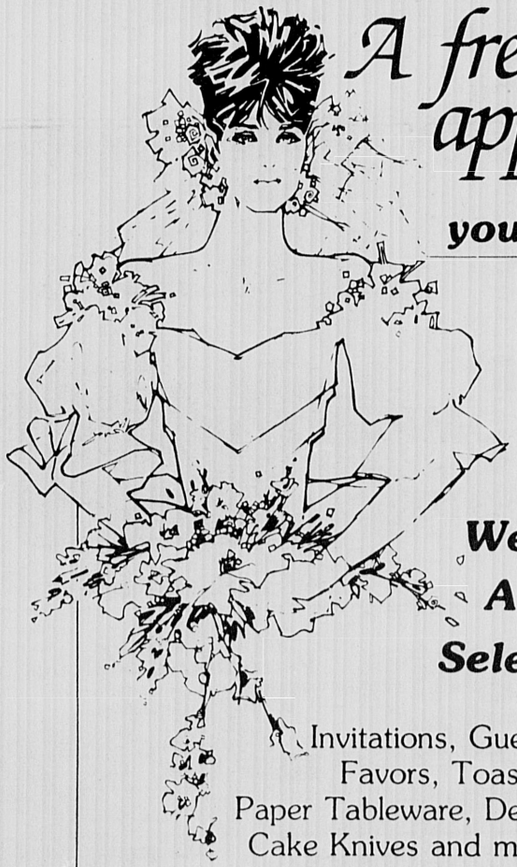

— What flowers have special meaning for you? Does your fiance always bring you daisies? Is the softness of rose petals your idea of the height of romance? You'll want to work these flowers into your plan.

Also, since every flower expresses a sentiment, what do you want your wedding blooms to say? Yellow lilies, for example, symbolize gaiety; carnations, pure, deep love. The buttercup signifies riches, the hyacinth promises constancy and the arbutus says, "Thee only do I love."

Honeymooning In Boston

By Nan Dayton

Suddenly, Boston — yes, staid old Boston — has burgeoned into the liveliest, the loveliest big city in the United States.

Classic as yesterday, modern as tomorrow, its harmonious architectural eclecticism is downright upbeat.

You'll find that Boston is marching to many different drummers these days, drummers playing delightful new tunes and tempos. Nowhere is this more apparent than at Copley Place, a stunning complex in Boston's famous Back Bay area.

Copley Place has everything. Ask the visitors who flock here from all over the world. Two elegant hotels, the Westin and the Marriott, anchor the complex. Either one would make a perfect base for exploring Boston's past and present, as well as the pleasures and treasures of Copley Place itself.

Copley's magnificent landscaped interiors — highlighted by a sculptured, 60-foot waterfall — are a kaleidoscope of classy European designer boutiques. These include Yves St. Laurent, Gucci, Benetton, Jaeger and top American names, too, such as Tiffany's, Williams-Sonoma and Neiman-Marcus. Amid this glamour are hat shops, bookshops, noted confectioneries and chocolatiers and an unusual clutch of museum gift shops with finds from Boston and New England museums as well as New York's Metropolitan Museum.

Sooner or later, you'll be looking for a place to eat and you certainly won't have to look far. Copley Place has a variety of eateries, from a classy, summery-looking gourmet cafeteria to the plush, formal dining rooms in the Westin and Marriott.

If you want to take in a movie or three, a multi-screen cinema is right on the premises, too.

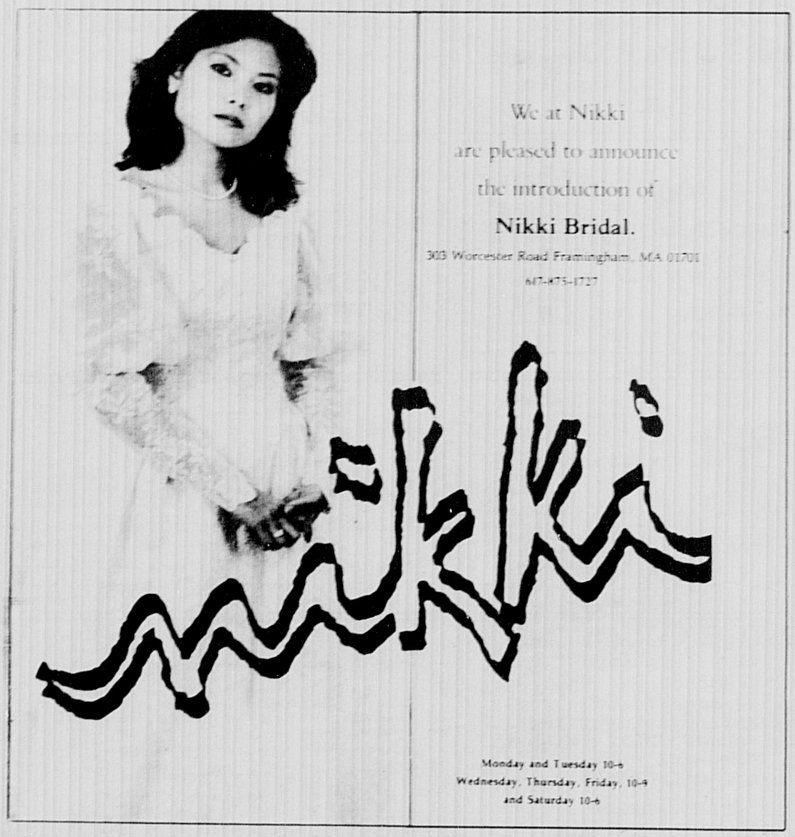

A short hop from Copley Place brings you to a host of sightseeing attractions. Stroll along the crooked storybook streets of the Freedom Trail and your eyes will light up as you behold those photogenic, remembered landmarks — Revere House, Old State House, Old North Church, Beacon Hill, Faneuil Hall and colorful Quincy Market, with its cheery, carnival-like atmosphere.

Among Boston's uncommon leisures are: the Swan Boats in the charmingly landscaped public garden across from the Boston Common; the museums, particularly the great Museum of Fine Arts and the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, housed in a Venitian-style palazzo; concerts, serious and pop; Harvard University and its surroundings in Cambridge, and Filene's fantasy basement.

Popular restaurants in town include those of the Ritz and Meridien Hotels, Legal Seafoods, Cafe Budapest, The Romagnoli's Table, Another Season, Maison Robert, l'Espalier, Allegro, Ciro and Sal's.

Boston always has been a city that reached out and touched people in a very real way. The spirited yet non-frantic atmosphere is most conducive to a special feeling of well-being. I remember standing in front of that sculptured, 60-foot-high waterfall in Copley Place. Suddenly, I heard the sound of a coin being tossed into the pool that swirls at the foot of the falls. Automatically, I reached into my pocketbook for my own coin.

Once you've been to the Trevi Fountain, you know the rule. If you want to ensure your return, you toss a coin over your shoulder into the waters. Who knows, maybe it works for Boston's Copley Place. Maybe it doesn't. But no one takes chances. Everyone wants to come back to this scintillating sophisticated center. And so will you.

Brides And Bouquets

Hubbies Healthier Than Bachelors

Marriage is good for men, according to the American Council of Life Insurance. Their statistics show that husbands are healthier, wealthier and more industrious than bachelors.

In fact, in the 35 to 44 age-group, married men have a death rate of three per thousand compared with a rate for bachelors of 10 per thousand.

Calamity Wed 12 Men

Calamity Jane (c. 1852-1903), a colorful alcoholic frontier character whose maiden name was Martha Jane Canary, had 12 husbands. No one remembers how she got the nickname "Calamity." Maybe from some of her early husbands? She lived in Deadwood, S.D., and eventually went into show business.

Groom Kept Sword-Arm Free

There used to be a good reason for the bride to take her place at the altar at the left hand of the groom and, on the way out of the church, to be on his left arm.

It's not just a meaningless matter of etiquette. He once did it to secure her. It enabled him to keep his right (and sword) hand free to defend her (and himself) from attack and capture by jealous rivals.

Honeymoon — Time To Relax And Recoup

By Eric Jude

Not only is the honeymoon a tradition for newlyweds, it may be a necessity.

As anyone who's ever been involved with a wedding knows, there is a lot of stress involved in preparation. A honeymoon gives a couple the chance to relax and wind down. It also seems to provide a needed psychological transition between being single and being married.

Beyond this, however, the purpose of the honeymoon has changed somewhat over the years.

The popular image of a honeymoon is of a special time when a just-married couple goes off for a "getting-to-know-you" period of privacy. While privacy and romance are still on the list of honeymooners' desires, new social trends — such as living together before marriage — have brought out a different emphasis.

Today, fewer couples are choosing to take the sort of honeymoon where they spend a week or so alone in an isolated cabin. Instead, they prefer more action — resorts and locations that include sports, entertainment, gourmet food and plenty of sights to see.

According to travel agent Bruce Myers, the main consideration in planning a honeymoon should be honesty between the bride and groom. How do each of you really want to spend your honeymoon? Hiking? Skiing? Shopping? Sunbathing?

Once the decision has been made, Myers says, make your plans early. You'll have a better chance of getting the exact accommodations you want at the time you want. Otherwise, you may be disappointed by having to pay more because rooms in your price range all are taken.

To save money, be certain to investigate off-season travel rates — some location is going to be off-season no matter what time of the year you are married. Also, ask about special fares on land and in the air for weekday and night-flight excursions.

To find out about additional savings, you could write to airline tour departments, hotel chain headquarters and individual resorts for brochures, rate sheets and honeymoon package details.

Timetable For Planning

By Gregg Howard

Before The Big Day arrives, every bride should plan to ensure as carefree a wedding as possible. Fashion and wedding experts recommend that brides begin planning for a formal wedding anywhere from six months to a year in advance.

Worrying about details too near to the date of the wedding can detract from the romance of this important day. So get organized and check off the following items in your bridal organizer as they come up.

A checklist can be a fun way of counting down the months, weeks, days and moments before you say, "I do."

One year to six months

— Avoid wedding trauma by talking about your budget and wedding style with everyone involved: your parents, his parents and your fiance.

— Pick a place for the ceremony and reception and make reservations immediately.

— Decide on the number of guests you can afford and accommodate and put together a guest list.

— Meet with the person who will officiate.

— Choose your dress and accessories.

— Choose a color scheme and plan the reception.

— Register china, silver, etc.

— Select your wedding attendants.

— Start house or apartment hunting.

— Talk to a travel agent about your honeymoon.

Five to two months

— Order the announcements and invitations and address them as soon as they arrive. This way it's exciting instead of a chore.

— Shop for your trousseau.

— Select a photographer, florist and musicians.

— Order attendants' dresses and suits.

— Meet with your caterer.

— Put everything in writing to avoid last-minute hassles.

Seven to three weeks

— Buy your fiance's wedding gift and gifts for the bridal party.

— Mail invitations.

— Have final dress fitting and take formal portrait.

— Order rings.

— Reserve hotel rooms for out-of-town guests.

— Plan rehearsal dinner.

Two weeks

— Get marriage license.

— Arrange transportation to ceremony.

— Organize luggage and do a last-minute confirmation on honeymoon reservations.

One week

— Start packing and organize each day and evening outfit from top to bottom.

— Confirm number of guests for caterer.

— Arrange rehearsal.

— Keep up with thank-you notes as gifts arrive.

If you take care of all the little things, the big things have a way of taking care of themselves.

Practice Makes A Beautiful Bride

By Margaret Rosner

The makeup a bride wears on her wedding day can polish her beauty to perfection — if she takes the time beforehand to find the products and applications that work best. Her makeup will need to hold up through tears and kisses, and it must look as good in photographs as it does in person.

Does a happy, radiant bride really have to wear any makeup at all? According to Denise O'Donoghue, a beauty editor at Bride's magazine, "The 'natural look' is too understated because the white of a wedding gown tends to drain the face of any natural color, leaving the bride looking tired, pale and washed out."

The first step toward perfect bridal makeup is to get your skin in shape so it provides a smooth canvas for color. There's a lot of stress during the months leading up to a wedding, but you can counteract it with good, consistent habits such as a balanced diet, a regular exercise program and plenty of sleep. Pamper yourself with an occasional professional facial, and see a dermatologist for any really troublesome problems. Also, don't get too much sun. A gentle glow is pretty, but if you want more color for your wedding day, that's what makeup can do.

Next, sample as many products as you can at cosmetic counters. Settle on your final purchases far enough ahead of the wedding to give you time to practice applying them at home. When you do buy, be sure to include such tools as a small sponge to apply foundation and fat, soft brushes for powder and blush. These make all the difference in achieving an even-textured, almost transparent effect, the prettiest for a bride.

What should your wedding day makeup include? First, a foundation that closely matches your skin color, applied with a dampened sponge in a thin layer over forehead, cheeks, nose and chin. Then, to enhance a bridal glow, cheek color in a shade of pink, peach or apricot brushed lightly onto the cheekbones and up toward the temples. Blusher also can be gently stroked over your temples, down your nose and underneath your chin.

Should you contour your face with a darker blush? This can be a mistake when wearing white since the dress acts as reflector and makes the contour shade look muddy. You'll look like you have a dirty face.

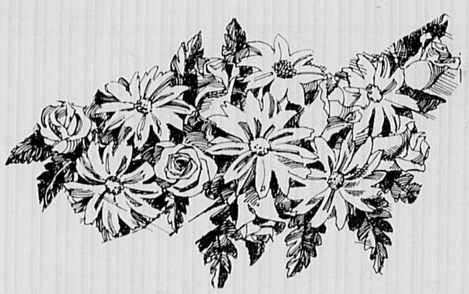

For a matte finish — good for wedding photography — lightly dust on sheer, loose translucent powder with a fat, fluffy brush. Save solid compact powder for touch-ups only. Don't worry if you look a bit too powdery at first. By the time you finish getting dressed, the powder will be absorbed, leaving only a soft, fresh glow.

Subtle eye shading is the key to a sophisticated look that will bring out your eyes in your photographs. Choose three complementary colors (lilac, dusty purple and pink, or beige, brown and gold) and apply the medium tone on your lid, the dark shade to the crease of your eye and the light color on your brow bone. Blend carefully so all colors flow into one another.

To deepen your eyes, take a sharpened eye pencil in black, brown or gray and draw dots along upper and lower lashes, smudging them together with a small, stiff brush until all the dots are connected. For final emphasis, apply waterproof mascara.

Any color lipstick that looks good and complements your eye and cheek colors is fine, with two exceptions. Red is too harsh, and brown looks muddy. Apply your lipstick with a brush for coverage that's even and not too intense. Avoid lip gloss — your lips will look too shiny in your photos.

To ensure that your entire wedding party gives some thought to color-coordinated makeup, you might want to organize a "beauty party." Provide your bridesmaids with swatches of their dress fabric, plus a makeup kit filled with all the latest colors for eyes, cheeks and lips. These often are offered as a bonus at department store cosmetic counters. Together, you all can practice and make perfect.

Beware Of Hidden Troubles In Dream Home

By David Hasemyer

Finally, that exasperating search for your dream home is over. For months you've explored houses and condos, carefully scrutinizing the amenities, never being quite satisfied.

But now you've found it. The house has a fireplace and a dishwasher and the master bedroom is huge.

Everything is just as you fancied it would be.

But as you move into your home, taking the time to meticulously examine every detail of the abode, there are a few things you didn't notice before you signed on the dotted line.

These things spell trouble and additional expense, and you didn't even notice or think about them before buying the house.

Lost in the exhilaration of finding the perfect house, you failed to detect warning signs that everything is not well structurally with the house, and assumed what you saw is what you would own.

"If a person goes about looking at homes alone or even with a Realtor who is inexperienced, he is asking for trouble," said Bob Caproni, a seven-year veteran of real estate sales.

"So often a person is so concerned with amenities they want in a home, they fail to notice the small irregularities and take some things for granted."

But Caproni offers two solutions: Ask questions and work with an experienced real estate agent when house hunting.

The prospective home buyer should be aware of some basic areas where problems may exist. A brief check while touring the house can be made to detect many unseen problems that later could lead to heartache for the buyer if not discovered.

Some pointers:

— Look under the sink for damp spots. This could mean problems with the plumbing if any moistness is discovered.

— Check for leaks in the water heater. A puddle below the heater could mean the unit is on its last leg.

— Put all of the appliances to work: Turn the oven on, run the dishwasher, flush the toilet, turn on the shower and give the disposal a workout.

— Check each of the light switches and try out as may electrical outlets as possible. Any malfunctions could mean a potentially dangerous situation exists with the house's wiring.

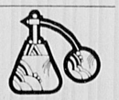

— Open and close all doors and windows to make sure they operate properly.

Look for bulges on the floors under carpeting, tile and linoleum. This could mean the flooring was laid over dirt or other debris and could mean problems under normal household traffic.

"If any problems are detected, the buyer, through his real estate agent, should request repairs be made before the closing of escrow," one authority said. "If the house is priced at the current market value of similar homes which are in good repair then it is not unreasonable to expect the owner to cover the expense of repairs."

Heirlooms — The Cedar Chest A Wedding Tradition

By Debra Cooper

Nearly half of the women who marry this year will bring a cedar chest into their new homes. It might be a family heirloom, handed down from one generation of brides to the next. Or it might be a contemporary piece of furniture, given to the young bride by her parents or husband-to-be.

This is the traditional "hope chest," once lovingly filled with the beautiful handmade linens and delicate lingerie a bride would take to her new home.

The custom of the hope chest began hundreds of years ago, says Carolyn Davis of the Lane Co. of Altavista, Va., a maker of cedar chests. "It was during the Middle Ages, in Italy, that people first began to use wooden chests to hold the trousseau of a bride-to-be."

As the Renaissance took hold, bridal chests, as they were called, became a form of artwork with intricate carving, inlays and paintings on the sides and tops. Artists like Michelangelo, Andrea del Sarto and Botticelli were known to have created bridal chests for the daughters of wealthy patrons.

Rich young ladies often had a caravan of chests to bring to their new homes. No matter how poor a family might be, however, there was always a bridal chest for each daughter.

According to Davis, cedar first was introduced into chest making in the 15th century. Young women quickly learned the value of a chest made of or lined with the mysterious wood that protected their trousseaus from hungry moths.

The bridal-chest custom spread through Europe and England and, from there, to the American colonies. The sturdy boxes, containing the most precious heirlooms and keepsakes of women, traveled across oceans and continents with their owners.

The name "hope chest" is believed to have been coined during the 19th century, after years of war in Europe and America had severely depleted the population of marriageable men. "Young women had plenty of time to prepare for marriage during those lean years," says Davis.

In the 1920s, young flappers flippantly called their cedar chests "goodness-knows-when chests." If these active women had little time for collecting linens in preparation for marriage, their cedar chests were ideal repositories for Parisian woolens and furs from admiring suitors.

Shower Gifts For Second-Time Brides

By Margaret Rosner

Today, wedding showers are given for all brides, whether they're getting married for the first, second or even third time. Gone are the days when a remarriage was kept very simple and hush-hush. Now it's considered a joyful new beginning.

But if you've been invited to a "second-time" shower, you may be wondering if there isn't some difference. The original purpose of a shower was to outfit a bride with everything she'd need to set up a new household. But what do you give a woman who is older and who probably already has all the essentials plus?

"A former marriage doesn't guarantee that a bride will have everything she needs to furnish a home now," says Barbara Tober, editor in chief of Bride's magazine. General styles change, and her own lifestyle probably has changed. While years ago she may have hoped for beer mugs to pass around with pizza, now she might want crystal stemware for more formal entertaining. Her former husband might have taken a share of their possessions. Or many of her original items might simply have worn out or broken. Towels, sheets and glasses almost always are appreciated gifts.

If you want to give a traditional present, it's a good idea to find out if the bride has signed up at any wedding gift registries. The bridal consultant there will be able to tell you exactly what serving pieces your friend hopes to add to her flatware or which kitchen appliances she's lacking.

If you don't want to stick with classics, you should view a second-time shower as the perfect opportunity to use your imagination.

"Think a little more frivolous and a little more personal," suggests Tober. The kind of item you'd pass up for a first-time bride because "she needs a million things before she needs this" could be just the right gift now. Think also about going in on a group present. Since the bride doesn't need a quantity of things, you can aim for one object of very special quality.

Depending on the bride's tastes and interests, consider: something gourmet, like a coffee maker that comes with its own grinder, or a professional copper fish poacher; something high tech, such as a talking clock that says "good morning" in dulcet tones, or a computer program that will help newlyweds pay their bills and balance ther checkbooks in state-of-the-art fashion; something antique and "collectible": a colorful quilt or rug to use as a bedspread or wall hanging, a silver teapot or American stoneware. Wedding registries are popping up in unusual places like bookstores, museum shops, gourmet and liquor stores in addition to department and jewelry stores. Maybe the bride's registered at one of them.

Every bride is under some stress during the hectic days of planning a wedding. A remarrying bride often faces an extra challenge as she attempts to care for young children and hold down a demanding job at the same time. So why not give her a gift whose sole purpose is to pamper? The entire shower could follow this theme with each guest bringing either a beauty product, such as soaps, a hairbrush, fragrance or lingerie, or a service, such as a certificate for a facial, manicure or massage or a year's membership in a health spa.

Another thoughtful gift to give a second-time bride is one that puts you "at her service." You promise to perform a specific job that reflects her special situation. For example, you might commit yourself to taking care of her children during her honeymoon, to organizing a garage sale of all the things she doesn't want to bring to her new life or to helping her move. You can give this special gift of your time in the form of an IOU with a sketch representing the job to be done or a tool, such as a paintbrush, to be kept for the task.

Priscilla Spring/Summer 1985

The Priscilla Spring/Summer 1985 collection reaffirms Priscilla of Boston as a bridal fashion leader. The collection features a complete range of styling, from the traditional and classic to the fashionable and contemporary.

An array of classic American silk gowns compliments the noted Priscilla traditional bridal styles of lace-worked bodices on summer-weight satin skirts. The American silk is a new fabric produced in this country and introduced by Priscilla. It is crisp and light with a characteristic sheen.

The silk lends itself to simple, body-shaping styling. This styling reflects the popular trend away from the traditional toward a simpler, but no less elegant, or formal look. The trend, in fact, has become a new classic bridal style.

This spring season Priscilla took the new classics one step further, making bridal fashion news by adding a touch of lace, a spark of beading, and even a suggestion of color. The Priscilla designers layer fabrics with color, creating the softest, most delicate shades that bridal prescribes. The result is the flattering glow of peach ivory, of blush white, of blue ice, and of yellow cream.

Priscilla continues the figure-enhancing silhouettes, representing the very best in couture artistry. The bodices, both fitted to the waist and below, are always feminine. Full skirts balanced the off-the-shoulder puff sleeves. With one eye toward the future, Priscilla predicts a gradual rise in waistlines. Two such "raised waists" gowns are included in the collections.

The increasing number of contemporary brides, those who prefer gowns without trains, is of special importance this season. The Contemporary Romantic collection offers these brides soft lace tea-length dresses and romantic taffeta ballgowns.

The Priscilla Petite collection with its proportioned styling for the bride 5-feet-5-inches and under (size 3-11), captures the essence of the traditional, the classic, the fashionable and the contemporary within its own definitive look.

Wreaths dominate the veil collection. Pretty romantic handlings of twined pearls and fabric flowers with pouffed illusion crown the bride with an ethereal touch. Lovely lace-trimmed mantillas in the popular shorter length are of interest. Dramatic face-framing headpieces with short veiling accompany any gown style perfectly.

The Priscilla Attendants collection echoes the elegance of the bridal collections; they are pretty dresses first, attendants' dresses second.

THE PRISCILLA COLLECTION.

While our Priscilla line offers a number of different looks this season, you'll find a single, uncompromised standard of quality and value. We'd be very pleased to show you our fine selection of Priscilla gowns and headpieces, and provide expert assistance with your fittings.

Coping With Wedding Preparations

By Tony Ray
Copley News Service

The year of the bride has returned, or should I say the year of the mother of the bride?

Invariably, the day of the wedding turns out to be a glorious day for everyone but the bride. It is generally a gathering for the in-laws, old friends and relatives, with the intent to inspect and critique each other's behavior, way of dressing and how well one has held up over the years since the last family gathering.

Weeks, possibly months, of preparations have gone by. Invitations, beautifully engraved, look like invitations to the White House. There are disagreements with the caterer, who was supposed to be the best buy in town. Tantrums with the florist who feels that certain flowers should not be used just for funerals. A seamstress who insists on making the bride look like Queen Elizabeth and the bridesmaids like Princess Diana. Just to be different, the mother of the bride makes a feeble attempt to appear a bit understated and ends up with a dress made from the draperies of the local cinema, and gives the impression of an antique chandelier.

Advice to the mother: You have had your wedding day!

Advice to the hairdresser: Too much of something is not necessarily better.

Advice to the bride: You were proposed to because of you and you cannot possibly please others until you please yourself.

Personalizing Wedding Cakes

By Gregg Howard

Wedding cakes — those traditional all-white confectionary towers — may be a thing of the past.

Now don't worry. We all know that cake is the one ingredient that no wedding reception can do without. However, some of us can do without eating another piece of boring, all-white sponge cake.

According to Bride's magazine, today's brides and grooms are personalizing their wedding cakes in a variety of ways.

Flavor. White spongecake is customary and still the choice of many. But brides and grooms who are chocolate lovers or carrot-cake fans are determined to be recognized, too. Some couples are striking a compromise with tradition by offering vanilla in one tier and another flavor in another tier. Unusual and gourmet fillings also are showing up — anything from fruit mousse to liqueur-flavored creams.

Shape. Three or four round tiers are being replaced at some weddings by square, rectangular or even heart shapes. And the familiar swirled white frosting decorations are sharing the stage with pink hearts, blue scallops, bright marzipan flowers or fresh flowers inserted into water-filled vials.

Toppers. The ornament that sits on top of the cake offers the greatest room for imagination. The time-honored bride and groom, wedding bells and lovebirds remain popular. But these days you're just as likely to find a tiny music box that plays "The Wedding March," Miss Piggy and Kermit the Frog or a miniature bicycle celebrating the fact that the couple met on a cross-country biking trip.

Some couples nostalgically are giving their cake a touch of history by borrowing a topper that appeared years before on their parents' wedding cake.

When you order, expect to put down a deposit. Be certain to get a receipt that spells out the cake size, flavors and filling, icing, topping design, delivery date and address and the balance to be paid.

Hand-lettering for your invitation envelopes, Guest book, program, love song, place cards, thank you's. All custom designed for you.

Compact Living For Newlyweds

With more and more people living in condominiums and apartments, interior designers, furniture dealers and do-it-yourself im-tailored their advice and materials to the needs of compact living.

Whether it is mirrors to give an illusion of space or large head-

small bedrooms, the industry says it is well aware of the special needs of multifamily housing projects.

Lynn Kuerbis, an interior designer, said one way of deciding how to decorate your home is to visit model complexes at various new condo projects. But she cautioned that models are decorated according to a specific concept, such as movie sets or Southern plantations. Unless you adopt the whole concept, she said, it may not be adaptable to individual rooms of your condo.

"Use mirrors," she said. "We used to think that mirrors were for us to look in. Now you have to think of the mirror as another window."

Kuerbis cautions against making big purchases until they are absolutely necessary. Even a difficult colored carpet can be retained, she said, and bulky furniture is adaptable to small-size living.

"Those big long sofas — nobody likes to sit in the middle of a sofa, so chop it in half and have an arm added," she said.

In a compact unit, Kuerbis said the trick to efficient living is to make furniture serve two or three functions. A stereo speaker can double as an end table, she said. The top of a TV — set on a storage chest — can be a bookshelf.

"Take a deep breath and walk into your own place and pretend like you don't live there," she said. "Have empathy — 'What feeling do I want?' "

Kuerbis said interior design consultants like herself can be hired when you lose patience with yourself or have no idea how to begin. But she said it is best to hire experts on an hourly basis rather than to tie their work to a promise to purchase something.

"Say you need consulting and can't afford to buy anything," she said. "Also ask whether you have to buy through the consultant."

When it comes to selecting furniture, a wall system is a good bet for compact living, said Jerome Navarra, president of a furniture warehouse.

Such a system includes the headboard, shelves, drawers and even lighting fixtures.

"The problem in a typical small room is that one wall might be devoted to closets, another might have a door in it. There's one with a window and you might have only one nice, clean wall," Navarra said. "The idea is that wall becomes the sleep-storage center. In the width of a queen bed, you have everything."

Even if you move up to a single-family home later, Navarra said the wall system adapts well in a guest bedroom of any home.

Navarra said reupholstering couches can cost as much as a new couch. Hide-a-bed sofas are popular in condos and apartments, but he cautioned that they should not be counted on as the bed for daily use.

"They're only made for weekend or overnight use," he said.

Dinettes are smaller to accommodate smaller dining areas in condos, he said, and chairs have been reduced to the "absolute minimum size" necessary to achieve comfort.

In approaching a paint job, paint store employee Bob Harnum said the do-it-yourselfer should beware of two factors: custom colors and durability. The more custom the color, generally, the cost is higher. Paints guaranteed against chipping and cracking for 10 years also carry a higher price tag, he said.

"But in the long run, the customer saves in time," he said, if the longer-lived paints are used.

Dorothy Dundore, a wallpaper expert, said wall coverings can cost up to 10 times more than paint for a comparable area. But she said wall coverings can be interesting on their own when owners lack sufficient artwork and other items to decorate their condo.

Selecting A Wedding Photographer

By Gregg Howard

In some ways, the photographic record of your wedding is like your husband-to-be — you'll have to live with both for a long time. That's why hiring a wedding photographer is such an important decision to make.

While relatives and friends may take their own photographs of the occasion, an experienced professional can be counted on to capture on film all aspects of your wedding. A wedding photographer, unlike relatives, will not be distracted from his job by friends and relatives who haven't seen each other since the last family wedding.

Professional photographers are trained to photograph with a sensitivity that captures the emotion of the day without interfering with the solemnity of the ceremony or the fun of the reception. But remember, good photography, like beauty, is often in the eye of the beholder, so put a little effort into choosing the right photographer for your big day.

Here are some suggestions from Kodak to help you select the right photographer:

— Begin your search early, particularly if your wedding will take place in the prime months of June, July, August or December. That way you'll have a choice and won't have to settle for a photographer just because he or she isn't busy.

— Interview a variety of photographers and look at samples of their work. Select a photographer whose style suits the images you'd like to capture.

— Arrange for a formal, black-and-white bridal portrait for the newspaper at the time of your final gown fitting. Color photos can lose quality when reproduced in a newspaper.

— Don't change your hairstyle or have it cut just before taking your portrait. You want to look like you. Keep jewelry and other accessories to a minimum. Your makeup should be flattering, but not excessive.

— Before the wedding, make sure the photographer is aware of any particular shots you have in mind. Enlist a friend or relative to identify others as special targets for the photographer. Also, request photographs of your guests at various table groupings at the reception.

Once you have your wedding photographs, they don't have to be exiled to an album. Here are a few suggestions for other creative uses:

— Give an album to your parents.

— Make thank-you notes more personal by enclosing your photograph.

— Use photos for Christmas cards or gifts.

— Include enlargements in the decor of your home.

Wedding Reception On A Budget

By Lynette Ranger

You're getting married and you want an elegant catered reception. But on a limited budget, having the best to make you and your guests feel special isn't easy. Here are some tips.

First, decide on your budget. The money you can spend will determine several things: the amount of food, type and amount of decoration, location, rental equipment, entertainment and more.

To begin your selections, consult a few caterers in your area to get ideas for the party. Look at photographs of parties they've catered and ask for a price list and referrals.

During your search, you'll find that some caterers are strictly food handlers and servers. They don't provide party equipment setup for decoration. However, others — usually the more expensive ones — do everything, from hiring the band to hunting for a location. This type of service can set your mind at ease, but may put too much of a burden on your pocketbook.

Once you've decided the general style of your reception, sit down with your price lists and determine which caterer comes the closest, in price and services offered, to meet your needs. To stay within your budget, you'll probably have to decide which services you wish to pay for and which you can do yourself or eliminate. Remember, the more you do, the less you will have to pay.

Obviously you don't want to be washing dirty dishes while your guests are dancing, but there are other ways to cut costs. You may prefer to make a portion of the food yourself, borrow equipment instead of renting, decorate, do the flower arrangements or provide the music yourself. For instance, if you want a luncheon reception, consider slicing meats and making salads, side dishes or relishes yourself. All of these can be made ahead and refrigerated until the party day.

Or consider having a small meal served between regular mealtimes. If guests are invited to a reception held between standard dining times, they usually will eat before the reception. Less food will be needed, yet what you serve still may be sumptuous. Buffet-style eating is also more social, less troublesome and less costly — especially since fewer waiters are involved.

Here is a sample menu for a 2 p.m. reception served buffet style.

Ribbon sandwiches. Can be made up to two weeks ahead and kept frozen in airtight wrap.

Fresh fruit. Cut pineapple, watermelon, cantaloupe and honeydew into 1½-inch chunks.

Hors d'oeuvres. Have a waiter serve four or five types on a platter as people mingle.

Potato salad. Can be made one or two days ahead and kept refrigerated.

Cake. Buying from a supermarket bakery or home baker is less expensive.

Punch and/or champagne. Mix for punch can be made ahead and kept frozen. Ask a friend to pour the alcoholic beverage to save money on bartending.

Flowers and music add an elegant touch to any reception no matter what types you use. Inexpensive flowers — mums, carnations, daisies, baby's breath or fern — are as pretty as more expensive ones. For music, tape your favorite pieces to play lightly in the background and save a bundle over live entertainment.

Any way you plan your reception, it should be special to you. And planning something within your budget that is special to your guests is something both you and they will remember for a long time.

H & R Block Offers Free Tax Returns To Graduates

H & R Block awards 1984 high school and college graduates with a gift certificate to have their tax return prepared by Block at no charge.

Frank Mancini, district manager for Block, says that his tax service understands the confusion many young people feel when they face filing a tax return for the first time. H & R Block preparers are specially trained to help the graduates, giving all the time needed to answer any questions they may have concerning their tax return. They will also have an opportunity to receive guidance concerning financial planning for their futures.

These certificates have already been mailed to the 1984 graduates. Anyone who did not receive a certificate may contact the local H & R Block office. Any individual wishing to take advantage of this opportunity need only bring proof of graduation and his W-2's to any Block office of his choice.

Mancini suggests calling for an appointment to ensure that the graduate will have all the information needed for the preparer to complete a thorough and accurate return.

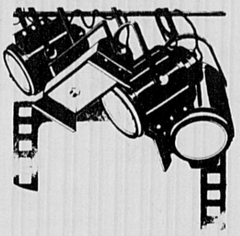

Critic's Corner

PENN AND HUTTON

THE FALCON AND THE SNOWMAN

Uneven docu-drama about two young men from affluent California families who sold government secrets to the Russians and were convicted of espionage. Director John Schlesinger relates the details of this true crime story with persistent energy. Yet, various unanswered questions arise as to the spies' motives which leave the film in a muddled state. Timothy Hutton and Sean Penn give realistic and dynamic performances as the two chums turned traitors. (R)

HEAVEN HELP US

Poignant coming - of - age comedy, set in a Brooklyn Catholic school, follows the misadventures of several teenage boys who pull off various pranks and suffer brutal consequences. The cast of young players is exceptionally appealing and they provide a striking picture of their strict religious school experience. Michael Dinner, directing his first feature film, displays remarkable skill in building relationships among the colorful characters. Stars Andrew McCarthy and Kevin Dillon. (R)

WITNESS

Australian director Peter Weir fashions a remarkable, unique police thriller, a fascinating love story and a thoughtful statement on violence. Harrison Ford shucks his familiar comic book character to play a street-wise Philadelphia detective who hides from his enemies by living among the peaceful, pastoral Amish. And Kelly McGillis fills the screen with her beauty and charm as the young Amish widow who falls in love with him. The gentle Amish life is contrasted with contemporary society. (R)

A NIGHTMARE ON ELM STREET

Grisly, blood - splattered mayhem is the centerpiece of this trashy teenage slasher film. A somewhat clever plot twist has various young people sharing similar hideous nightmares which are hard to distinguish from reality. Yet this premise is not developed to full potential. Acting talent is minimal; a typical expectation of such fare. Heather Langenkamp, Ronee Blakley and John Saxon are in the cast. (R)

Blackpowder Shooters

IF YOU think putting holes in paper is about as exciting as watching the traffic lights change, consider team shooting at breakable targets against a stopwatch. The 10th Massachusetts Battery is looking for more people. We are part of the North-South Skirmish Association, a 4,000 member competitive shooting organization where the shortest elapsed time wins. Units take their names in honor of actual Civil War regiments and members shoot original or reproduction weapons of the 1861-65 period. The 10th Battery competes with .58 cal. rifled muskets, caplock breechloading carbines, and an 1,800 lb. full size 3-inch rifled muzzleloading cannon. Yes, there's some paper punching too for those interested, but the real excitement is in the rapid fire team events where you shoot at flower pots, hanging water-filled coffee cups, ceramic tiles and 32 clay pigeons on a 4x8 cardboard backer at 50 yds. We welcome all shooters regardless of experience. Our team members live all over — from Maine to Rhode Island to New York — but more are from eastern Massachusetts. Call Ron Borjeson at 1-835-3102 for further information. 11.3/TF

EFFICIENT FIREPLACE USE

A fireplace is a valuable asset when it comes to selling a home. However, in recent years, it has been taking it on the chin as a great heat waster.

When used improperly, the fireplace deserves all its bad press. In normal use, the fireplace draws out about 20% per hour of expensively heated air in the room in which it's located. However, the fireplace can be made more efficient. You can buy a hollow tube grate which bends around the logs and recirculates the heated air back into the room. Some grates are equipped with electric blowers. It is claimed that these beauties return heated air 5 to 1 for any heated air lost.

A second alternative is to install an energy-efficient door on the fireplace. The glass door prevents heat loss, radiates heat back into the room and allows you to enjoy watching the fire.

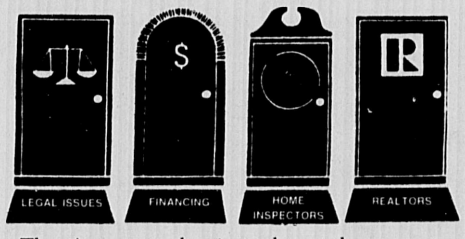

Be sure that the damper is closed when the fireplace is not in use and burn only seasoned hardwoods.
